

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

The present mail was brought from Bombay by the Victoria, which left on the 1st of December, arriving at Aden on the 9th; and leaving that place on the following day, she reached Suez on the 16th, and Alexandria on the 19th. There the mails were detained till the 26th, in consequence of there being no steamer ready to bring them. The Ariel, which should have been at Alexandria on the 17th, was detained at Malta in consequence of the delay in forwarding the Southampton mail of December 3, occasioned by the accident to the Erin. Had the letters been forwarded by the French steamer Alexandre, they would have arrived in England in time to be answered by the mail which left on the 7th. By the postal convention between England and France such an arrangement is allowable.

The Ariel, bringing the mails, left Alexandria on the 26th ult. and reached Malta on the 30th. The Marseilles portion was forwarded by the Hamer, and reached that place on the 4th of January. The Sultan, with the Southampton portion of the mails, was to leave Malta Dec. 31st, and may be expected at Southampton about the 11th inst.

The Queen, with the London mail of Oct. 25, arrived at Bombay Nov. 29.

DEPARTURE OF MAILS.

A mail for Ceylon, Madras, Calcutta, the Straits, and China, will leave Southampton on the morning of Thursday, January 20. Letters should be posted in London on the previous evening, or if marked via Marseilles, on the evening of Monday, January 24.

The next mail for Bombay will leave Southampton on the morning of Thursday, February 3. Letters should be posted in London on the previous evening; or, if marked via Marseilles, on the evening of Monday, February 7.

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

THE Mail just arrived is considerably later than, according to ordinary experience, was to be looked for. The cause was its detention at Alexandria from the 19th of December to the 26th, from the want of an English steamer to forward it to Malta. This deficiency was occasioned by the Ariel, which conveyed the London mails of December 3rd and 7th, having waited at Malta from the 15th of that month, on which day the portion of the mails conveyed through France arrived, till the Southampton portion should be received,—an event which, in consequence of an accident to the steamer designed to convey it, did not take place till the 22nd. Such are the particulars of this little incident in the history of steam communication between England and India. It is worthy of notice, that although the Ariel was lying at Malta during the whole period of waiting, the Government agent there did not think it worth while to forward the Marseilles mail by it, though that from Southampton was so long overdue. It would be a matter of curious inquiry when, had the delay continued, he would have thought it fitting to send on the letters in his possession. Supposing that from any cause the Southampton mail had never arrived, would that despatched by Marseilles have been delayed till the end of the world, in hopes that the former might turn up some day or other?

From the PUNJAR the mail brings nothing but intelligence of perfect tranquillity. The most exciting question now agitated there seems to be, whether or not windmills are well adapted to raise water in that country for the purpose of irrigation.

SCINDE is not more prolific of stirring news. It is pronounced in the Bombay Times "a land of utter barrenness" in matters of intelligence. It was not so formerly. There was almost always some little or great flights of eccentricity to chronicle; if there were nothing else. But SCINDE has got a new governing authority, and the old proverb, "new lords new laws," or, at least, new habits, has received a fresh illustration. Mr. PRINGLE works with but little of noise or friction. It is remarked that "the quiet, gentlemanly, unobtrusive way in which every thing has been set about by him is a subject of general eulogium." We do not recollect that this was ever said of his predecessor. The visit of the GOVERNOR of BOMBAY to Scinde was not to take place so early as was expected, but was deferred till the present month.

Nothing had transpired as to the results of the meeting of the GOVERNOR-GENERAL and the KING of OUDH. For information on this subject we have yet to wait.

Somewhat remarkably, DOONGHUR SINGH has been captured almost simultaneously with ABD-UL-KADER. The following is the account of the affair:—

"Doonghur Singh was taken about three days ago by Lieut. Harcastle, with part of the Marwar force, at Patoda, his paternal estate in Shekawatee. He appears to have been tracked to the village, and was found in a room at the top of the fort. He fired through the loopholes on the party approaching, and killed two men. When Lieutenant Hardecastle and party entered the room where he was, he had a sword and a knife in his hands, declaring that he would kill himself and not be taken alive. After a long parley, however, he was induced to give himself up, but not before he had stabbed himself in the belly without fatal effect. Lieutenant Hardecastle appears to have had a long tour before coming upon his game, and well deserves the success which has crowned it. Bhopal Singh now alone remains of the principal chiefs; for Mán Singh, Deonghur Singh's brother, and who had the principal hand in getting him out of the Agra jail, was discovered long ago, it appears, to be amongst the prisoners taken by Captain Showers with Juwahir Singh, under an assumed name. Most of the subordinate actors in that affair are also now known, and cannot long hope to escape apprehension."

The NIZAM's dominions were left in as comfortable a state as usual, and the NIZAM himself was suffering under a disease almost as common with weak persons as the influenza, but not so fatal—the sulks. Thus are the particulars of the attack related in the Madras Athencum, together with some other points of intelligence from the same quarter:—

"The Nizam has left the city and pitched his tent at some little distance, by way of expressing his dissatisfaction at the mode in which things are managed between his Wuzer and the Resident. It is said he does not purpose returning until made aware of the view taken of his affairs by the Governor-General; but his manoeuvre of quitting his capital and taking to canvass is altogether too childish a proceeding to be of much service to him. His Highness's present position is just that of a sulky boy, who, because his wishes are not complied with, tries to make an impression on mamma by refusing to eat his dinner; but that a move of this kind will succeed with the Governor-General is generally considered to be something less than doubtful. Another item to which we may point as indicative of the present state of things at Hyderabad, is the stoppage of General Fraser's carriage by a party of Rohillas, who, prostrating themselves at full length in the road, besought his intervention to obtain a settlement of their demands. It may be remembered that one of the earliest measures of Suraj-ool-Moolk, on his accession to the wuzerut, was a proclamation to the effect that all Arabs, Rohillas, Affghans, and Sikhs should settle their several accounts, bring their existing engagements to an end, and quit Hyderabad within two months. The proclamation was condemned at the time as unjust and impolitic, and the occurrence under notice shews that no incorrect estimate was formed of it. Debtors are not always to be prevailed upon to clear accounts within two months, and Suraj-ool-Moolk's proclamation unfortunately afforded no information to the Rohillas on the mode of realizing their outstandings. The result is this appeal to General Fraser, who is reported to have written to the Wuzer on the subject, and to have obtained his promise for the early satisfaction of these men's claims. What they obtain over and above this must be put down to the credit of unusual good fortune."

What is the state of GOOMSOOR seems doubtful. Some reports represent it as still greatly disturbed,—others, as remarkably quiet. As it would be presumptuous in us to undertake the settlement of a question which is fiercely disputed almost on the spot where the alleged disturbances either do or do not take place, we must leave our readers to adopt whichever side they may happen to prefer.

The commercial atmosphere of India, it need scarcely be said, is gloomy in the extreme. The receipt of the disastrous intelligence of the enormous failures in this country seems to have convulsed the mercantile community both at CALCUTTA and BOMBAY. The effect at the former place is thus described in a local paper:—

"The arrival of the Express Mail of 7th October was looked for with the greatest anxiety by the mercantile community, and the news brought by its avant courier, the Bombay Express, which arrived yesterday morning, has confirmed the worst fears that were entertained. The long list of failures at home has heightened the dismay and confusion, which previous intelligence had excited, and all is perplexity and alarm."

In the Englishman we find the following:—

"Our local affairs are hardly worth reporting, with the single exception of the general commercial panic occasioned by the disastrous news which the two last mails have brought. On the arrival of the express news to the 7th ultimo, several houses immediately suspended payment, and others are reported to contemplate the same step; but as several of these may perhaps resume business, we forbear mentioning any names, except of Messrs. Cockerell and Co. who have issued the following circular:—

"SIR,—It is with deep regret we announce to you that we have been obliged to suspend our payments, in consequence of a similar step having been taken by our London correspondents, Messrs. Cockerell, Larpent, and Co. on the 25th of September.

"The creditors of the London house were to meet some time between the 7th and 20th of October, and we have been strongly urged by bill-holders, and other creditors to a large amount in England, to suspend any permanent arrangement for the management of our estate until the result of such meeting shall be known in Calcutta.

"Under these circumstances, and acting under the advice of the Advocate-General, we propose as a temporary measure to assign over to J. J. Mackenzie, W. Martin, and Gilbert Farie, Esquires, all our property in trust for the creditors, in order that the rights of all parties may be maintained in the exact position in which they stood when the London mail reached India, and we request your acquiescence in this arrangement, and forbearance until we can lay before you the statements of the London house, and those which we are preparing, when the creditors will be called together, and have an opportunity of determining on the course to be adopted.

"We are, Sir, your obedient servants,
"COCKERELL and Co."

The Eastern Star reports that "the immediate effect here of the London failures has been the stoppage of Messrs. COCKERELL and Co.; LYALL, MATHSON and Co.; CHURCH, LAKE, and Co.; SHEARMAN, MULLEN, and Co.; and SMITH, COWELL, and Co. Another journal denies the above in regard to one of the houses named—SMITH, COWELL, and Co., alleging that the report is at least premature, and affirming that, though like many other firms it is involved in difficulty, it had continued to meet its liabilities.

At BOMBAY the state of feeling seems to have been much the same as at Calcutta. We copy from the Telegraph:—

"It is long since Bombay was in such a state of excitement as it was yesterday morning, when it became known that the English mail was coming in. Besides the excitement visibly depicted on every face, about nine o'clock merchants might be seen dashing into the Fort, hours before their usual time, at a pace which reminded an observer of the race for the Derby. The bunders were crowded with people, and the instant the mail steamer dropped her anchor, she was surrounded by boats of all kinds, containing more inmates desirous of hearing the commercial news than those who went to meet relations or friends. An hour or two afterwards, the Post-office became the arena of a struggle for priority of information which had well nigh ended in broken heads or contusions. It is needless to add, that when the intelligence was obtained, the excitement became more intense, although more private. The panic felt in many parts of Bombay is immense."

Notwithstanding this excitement, the only establishment which had given way, according to the Bombay Times, was the local branch of the house of LIVINGSTON and Co. of Liverpool.

Great anxiety will naturally be felt in regard to the tidings to be brought by the next mail. Let us hope that they may be more favourable than at present we can venture to anticipate.

BENGAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

THE LATE CASE OF LIBEL.—The libel case of Mackenzie versus Hume, for the publication of a letter in the Star, charging him with mismanagement, which we supposed had been finally disposed of by the fact that Mr. Mackenzie had been removed from his office by the shareholders of the India Steam Navigation Company because they were dissatisfied with his conduct, has actually been brought to an issue. The damages were laid at Rs. 10,000. The Court said that a better discretion would have been exercised if the action had never been brought at all, and gave a verdict for the defendant on one ground, and on another for the plaintiff, who will be entitled to Rs. 50 damages, if he can substantiate his case. He is more than half-way to England by this time.—Friend of India, Nov. 18.

COL. FORBES.—It is said that Lieut.-col. Forbes proceeds home this cold season, to act as member of a commission of inquiry into the conduct of the Royal Mint. It is said, permission for this purpose has been granted by the home authorities at the direct request of the Treasury.—Hurkaru, Nov. 19.

MOFUSSIL.

BENARES.—The late Rajah of Sattara and his Heir.—The Benares Recorder states that the adopted son of the late Rajah of Sattara has been duly selected heir, and installed as the next ruler by its dependants. The ceremony is a very harmless one: it seems to have been performed in private, and probably may be considered beneath notice. The late rajah declined to accept our sanction for the adoption of a son until his own rights were conceded to him. His brother now rules at Sattara by undisputed right of inheritance. The Recorder alleges that the paper purporting to be a Minute of Conversation betwixt Major Carpenter and Pertaub Singh was the compilation of Mr. George Thompson from notes supplied from time to time from Benares.

—Weather.—The weather since our last issue has been continuously rainy: the thermometer standing at 66 degrees in the mornings.

—Military.—The Shekawatee regiment marched into cantonments this morning. The 66th Native Infantry arrived at this station on Saturday, the 6th. en route to Lucknow, halted on Sunday, and yesterday (Monday, the 8th), in consequence of the rain. The detachment of the 9th Native Infantry marched into cantonments on Saturday morning, the 6th inst., on their return from Ghazeeপুর.

—Court of Inquiry.—We understand that a Court of Inquiry is sitting at this station, to investigate circumstances connected with an extraordinary occurrence, which took place a few evenings ago, and which had well-nigh proved fatal to some of the parties concerned. We refrain entering into the particulars, which have been bruited about, as it is possible the matter may form the subject for judicial inquiry.—Recorder, Nov. 9.

HOWRAH.—Puseyism rebuked.—We have heard of clergymen rebuking their congregation from the pulpit, but do not recollect to have heard of any member of a congregation deliberately rising in church to rebuke the clergyman. But such was the case on Sunday last, at Howrah, where, immediately after forenoon service, Mr. S— rose, and in an audible voice addressed the clergyman before the whole congregation, and requested that when he again preached there he would do so in his own gown, and not in his surplice, as he had just done. The clergyman seemed disposed to reply but failed, apparently from surprise at so unexpected an address.—Englishman.

SHIKARPOOR.—Surrender of Islam Khan.—Islam Khan, the chief of the Boogtee tribe, surrendered to Major Goldney, collector and magistrate of Shikarpoor, on the 29th ultimo, having presented himself at the police out-post at Kusmore, two days before. He was escorted by Major G. to Shikarpoor. It is not known on what conditions he will be received, these being understood to depend entirely on the commissioner of Kurrachee.—Mofussilite, Nov. 9.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DATES.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Nov. 2, 1847.—His Exc. the Commander-in-Chief, with the sanction of the Right Hon. the Governor-General, is pleased to direct, that in future, when caps are required for regiments of light cavalry, they shall be made up in accordance with the pattern in use with the 11th regt., including the European officers.

Cap.—busby of regimental fur, nine inches deep, and the same size at top and bottom, scarlet fly and plaited top (sunk an inch and a half within the edge of the fur); silver chain fastening to lions' heads at the sides; silver line with olives.

Plume.—white egret with scarlet bottom, ten inches high; silver socket and ring.

The cap-lines and ornaments on the head-dress of the cavalry are to be white, in assimilation with the lace on the uniform.

Lieut.-Col. H. F. Salter will be so good as to have ten caps of the description now described made up, under instructions which will be communicated from army head-quarters, and he will forward one to each of the regiments of light cavalry, and one to the adjutant-general of the army, as musters for future guidance.

The cost of these muster-caps is to be drawn for in a contingent bill, duly vouched.

The head dress for the native infantry of the line is henceforward to be a dark blue Kilmarnock cap, encircled by a white band (woven in the cap), with the number of the regiment in front; the numbers to be one inch and a half long. Grenadier regiments will wear a red band, and a grenade above the number of the regiment. Light infantry regiments and rifle companies will wear a dark green band, and a bugle number of the regiment.

Regiments having a badge are to wear the badge instead of the number.

The cap is to be stiffened round the top and at the sides by a piece of wire or cane to preserve its shape.

Each soldier of cavalry and infantry is to provide himself, as articles of half-mounting, with two white cotton cap covers. When the white cap cover is worn by the native infantry, the number of the regiment is to be placed outside it, so as to be visible.

The European officers of native infantry will continue to wear the chaco and forage cap as formerly prescribed.

APPOINTMENT OF A SURGEON TO PERFORM MEDICAL DUTIES AT SIMLA.—Head-Quarters, Simla, Nov. 3, 1847.—With reference to general orders of the 5th ultimo, announcing the appointment of a surgeon to the medical duties of Simla, in addition to the assistant-surgeon previously allowed for that station, his Excellency the Commander-in-chief is pleased to notify that, under the authority of the Right Honorable the Governor-General, a consolidated salary of Company's rupees (900) nine hundred has been fixed for the officer holding the appointment.

MONEY MARKET.

The melancholy intelligence received on the 17th inst. has thrown the deepest gloom over the commercial community of this city, and caused a total suspension of business, which had received a check by the news of the previous mail, and been interrupted by numerous holidays. On Saturday the 6th of November, the date of the last Overland price current, no business of importance was transacted, and the 8th, 9th, 15th, 16th, and 17th were native holidays. The business done in exports has therefore been very limited. The shock, however, which credit has sustained will probably induce remitters to resort to produce as the only secure medium of remittance, which may give rise to greater activity in our Export Market than present circumstances, or the state of the market at home would warrant. It will, however, be some time before the mind of the mercantile community, greatly alarmed and disturbed by passing events, can regain its usual calmness, so as to admit of business proceeding with customary regularity and in the usual channels, and the immediate effect of the present unfortunate state of affairs will doubtless be a severe tightness of money and a general fall in prices.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

POLICE COURT.—Trespass.—Before Major J. F. Clerk and T. G. Clarke, Esq., at the General Police, on Saturday last, L——n, Esq., appeared at the bar by virtue of a summons issued against him, to answer to a charge of trespass on the island, preferred by constable M. Toomey. The constable stated that about six in the morning of Friday he saw Mr. L——n leap the rails, forming the island near Munro's statue, on horseback, and ride across it, albeit notices prohibiting such entry into it were posted in all directions. It was a forbidden place, and although gentlemen were allowed to walk through it, riding was strictly disallowed.

Major Clerk to the constable.—Was Mr. L——n cautioned to enter it?

Constable.—No, Sir; Mr. L——n must have seen the notice; and when I saw him enter it I sent a peon to acquaint him with the circumstance, but Mr. L——n galloped off.

Major Clerk to Mr. L——n.—Now, Mr. L——n, what have you to say?

Mr. L——n.—Why is the esplanade a forbidden place? I would like to know.

Major Clerk.—I cannot answer that: you will discover the reason if you refer to the Government Gazette.

Mr. L——n.—Oh! these are new orders, I suppose. It's very extraordinary, however, I should be pulled up, and not the other gentlemen who keep riding over it at nights; and I think justice ought to be done at this court.

Major Clerk.—The magistrates have to look to that; answer the charge against you.

Mr. L——n.—But I should like to know who the instigator of that order is. I suppose I am brought up here by order of the Governor.

Major Clerk.—It does not signify at present by whose order you are before the magistrates, who are authorized to punish trespass. We fine you five rupees, Mr. L——n; in default of payment, a warrant of distress; and caution you not to trespass on the esplanade again; the fine will be heavier if you do.

Mr. L——n.—I intend going there again.

Major Clerk.—I warn you not to do so.

Mr. L——n left the court.—Athenaeum, Nov. 16.

INSOLVENT COURT.—In re James Ryves.—In the matter of Capt. Thomas James Ryves, late of the 1st Fusiliers, and at present connected with the Veterans, insolvent, whose debts amounted to about Rs. 52,000, the Court gave judgment yesterday (Friday), that the insolvent, because he gave fraudulent preference to certain other creditors, be imprisoned for one year, and at the expiration of such period, discharged. Counsel for the opposition submitted, that on his release, the insolvent should be made to pay at least Rs. 50 per month from his salary for the benefit of his creditors; but the Chief Justice observed, that he could not authorize such a measure, on the ground that as the insolvent had but the net pay of Rs. 270. 12s. 6g. to receive per month, and therewith to support his family, consisting of a wife and eight children, it would only tend to plunge him into difficulties anew, and reduce him to insolvency again.—Ibid. Nov. 30.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

THE TRESPASS CASE.—We observed in yesterday's Athenaeum, a report of some proceedings at the Madras police office, relative to a case of alleged trespass, committed by a gentleman at the presidency, who had leapt the rails which surround the island, and ridden across that inclosure, notwithstanding certain notices posted up by order of the Government, prohibiting persons on horseback from resorting thither. The party in question was summoned before the police court, to answer the charge preferred against him, and there fined five rupees for the offence, the magistrates telling him that they "are authorised to punish trespass." It is not our purpose to discuss the propriety or impropriety of the restrictive order of Government, nor shall we step aside to comment on the abstract justice or injustice of the penalty enforced, since those points are immaterial to what we have in view. Our object simply is, to notice the excess of magisterial jurisdiction which seems to have been committed, unconsciously no doubt, by the worthy occupants of the police bench. If what fell from them has been correctly reported, they are under a great misapprehension as to their powers. Magistrates may, indeed, take cognizance of "trespasses," but the things signified by that word in their commission, are something very different from intrusion into a paddock or riding across a lawn. Personal wrongs and open violence are the "trespasses" of which they should take account, and in respect of none other are they warranted to interfere. There is at home a statute, called "the Malicious Trespass Act," by virtue of which a magistrate is enabled to levy fines not exceeding 5l. for injuries done to fence, &c., but this Act does not apply to India, and even, although it did so, the case would not be altered as regards the party lately punished, because the justice of peace must have proved before him the malicious and wilful nature of the trespass, together with the amount of injury done, and his award ought not to involve a penalty more than commensurate with this. The only remedy for a trespass like that here charged, by riding or walking over private land, is to be found in an action at common law, and if the Governor wishes to mulct persons who intrude on the island, contrary to his pleasure, he must do it by means of that recourse. The magisterial decision above noted was ultra vires—that is illegal, and if Captain and Mr. Clarke entertain doubts on that subject, we shall be happy to furnish them with any amount of authorities that may suffice for their satisfaction. We recommend them, also, to return the five rupees, and at the same time suggest to the trespasser who paid the penalty, that he will show better taste and a more correct judgment than people are otherwise likely to give him credit for, if he abstains from repeating his intrusion on the ground. Government have a right to forbid its being ridden over, no matter from what motive, and if they choose to exercise their prerogative, it is the duty of the community to submit, even although the punitive powers of the magistracy cannot pursue disobedients.—Spectator, Nov. 17.

THE WEATHER.—We cannot say the weather was never so cold in Madras as it has been during the last week, because we have an indistinct recollection that it was pretty much the same last year; but it has been certainly quite cool enough to be agreeable, and blankets and glass windows have been quite at a premium, while punkahs and ice have been below par. The thermometer within doors has been often below seventy-four degrees, with a fresh breeze at times from the north and south-west. It is only when the wind blows from this direction, that it ever feels what may be termed cold along the Coromandel Coast. The barometer was very high at the beginning of the week, but it has been getting a little lower since; indicative probably of a change of wind. It looked very much like rain on Thursday morning, and was cloudy all day. The barometer at 10 A.M. yesterday was 30.10 inches.—Athenaeum, Nov. 20.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—The right wing of the 6th N.I., under Capt. Farquhar, which left Sattara on the 1st instant, arrived in the harbour, from Panwell, yesterday morning, and proceeded on their voyage to Tankaria Bunder without delay. Baroda is the destination of the corps.—Times, Nov. 17.

Post-Office Statistics.—Memorandum of covers despatched by the steamer Sesostri on the 15th instant:—

CAPTAIN HASLEWOOD.—Captain Haslewood, Secretary of the Bombay Navigation Company, has been appointed to the command of the steamer Dwaraka, vacant by the retirement of Captain Tribe.—Telegraph, Nov. 30.

CASE OF QUARANTINE.—The hulk Zenobia was put in quarantine last week for three days, as it was thought that the small-pox had broken out on board, but as it was discovered that the disorder was an uncontagious one, the quarantine was removed.—Ibid.

SENTENCES OF COURTS-MARTIAL.—We understand that Mr. William Crawford, the barrister, leaves for Kurrachee by the Bombay Steam Navigation Company's steamer this day, for the purpose of defending the two local lieutenants, Messrs. Harvey and Lawrence, who are about to be tried by court-martial. We believe there is but one opinion here as to the excessive severity of the punishment inflicted upon Mr. Fitzsimons, and whatever may be the result of the trials, it is to be hoped the presence of Mr. Crawford will, at least, have the effect of preventing a repetition of such a scandal upon the character of British tribunals as the sentence of an officer, holding only a local commission, to transportation as a felon, for an offence precisely similar to those for which, within the last month or two, no fewer than three commissioned officers have been merely dismissed the service. Mr. Crawford, we hear, was retained as counsel in seven of the cases at the ensuing sessions; a fact from which we infer that his absence at this juncture will not be very deeply deplored by some of his learned professional brethren.—Ibid.

PROPOSED VISIT OF THE GOVERNOR TO SCINDE.—The honourable the Governor does not, we believe, proceed to Scinde till the end of next month; there is, indeed, to be a party at Government House, on Christmas Day, so that there is no likelihood of his leaving us till after this at all events.—Times, Dec. 1.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.—Capt. Baynes, 20th N.I., has been fixed on by the honourable the Governor to succeed Capt. Curtis, relieved from sickness, as superintendent of police. Capt. Baynes has for some time back been superintendent of police, at Hyderabad, in Scinde, and was much confided in by Sir C. Napier, as an able, active, and energetic man. Capt. Curtis's resignation is so recent, that Capt. Baynes will probably first hear of it along with the intimation of his own appointment. The Governor has, we believe, acted without any solicitation from any quarter, choosing the man that the general voice of those around him, to whom the circumstances of the army were best known, seemed to think best qualified for the appointment.—Ibid.

THE WEATHER.—The weather is at this season of general certainty at present remarkable for its changeableness. The latter part of October and first few days of November were hotter than our usual hot season. Then we had winds and rain, as if the south-west monsoon had come back on us. The cold weather followed, with still a considerable irregularity in the land and sea-breezes—the latter having become of late so long of setting in that it blew from off shore till one, two, or sometimes three o'clock, almost every day for a fortnight till Saturday last, when, as if a further change had become requisite, it made its appearance sudden as it was complete. For the last four days it has blown half a breeze from north-east till nearly nine o'clock a.m., when, without the usual lull, or interval of calm, it has suddenly jerked round to west or north-west, and blown freshly till sun-set. The thermometer meanwhile ranges from 64 degrees to 80 degrees, and the feeling of the air is dry and bracing.—Ibid.

THE MAIL.—The steamer with the Overland Mail has made a bad voyage from Aden, and been three days behind her time.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

BEAUM.—Health.—Letters of the 20th inst. from Beaum reached us on Wednesday. The European troops were very healthy, the Highlanders having only about ten per cent. on the sick list, the chief part of these being trivial cases. The native troops and inhabitants were also healthy.

—Weather.—There had been a decided change in the weather: the thermometer at sunrise stood at 64 degrees, never rising above ten degrees higher during the hottest part of the day. Under the eaves of a house, the mercury in a thermometer, which had been placed there in the evening of the 19th, was found the following morning to have fallen to 57 degrees, the wind having shifted during the night from north-east to north-west. No rain had fallen since the 6th inst.

—New Magistrate.—Dr. Doig, Civil and Staff Surgeon, had taken the oaths as an assistant magistrate on the 19th.

—Theatricals.—The amateurs of the corps were in training for further theatricals shortly to come off.

—Cotton.—After the above was in type, letters of the 22nd came to hand. They mention that the quantity of cotton produced in the district this season amounted to about 500 bales, and was superior to any ever grown there heretofore. The conveyance of this to Vingorla would occupy nearly a hundred carts, and the European superintendent of the district had reached Belgaum to see and provide them.

—The Commander-in-Chief.—The rumour of Sir W. Cotton being about to visit the station had died away; and we believe the Commander-in-Chief does not intend proceeding into the Southern Mahratta Country this season.—Times, Nov. 27.

DAMRAJ.—The Wreck of the Indus.—We have seen letters of the 25th ult. from Damraj, near the wreck of the steamer Indus on the Kattiwar coast, which state that one of the boilers of the ill-fated vessel had been landed in safety, but the other had been lost. It would appear to have been got out of the wreck, and was being hoisted into the Company's pattimar, when the tackle gave way or slipped, and it was precipitated into the sea in twelve fathoms water: all hope, therefore, of its recovery may be abandoned. Empty casks and iron tanks had been forced into the wreck to float her, but up to the date of the letters referred to this had not been effected. A further supply of casks had been sent for to Bombay. The crew were in tents on the beach, close by the wreck. We believe the remainder of the wreck will be shortly abandoned to its fate,—its actual value not covering the cost of recovery.

DHOOLIA.—Civil Movements.—Letters of the 26th ult. from Dhoolia mention the return to that station of Messrs. Bell and Woodcock, the collector and the senior assistant session judge: the former had been on leave to the Neilgherries, and the latter at Kunhur.

—Captain Morris.—Captain Morris, of the Bheel Corps, was at Dhoolia acting for Lieutenant Rose, who was absent on leave.

—Weather.—The weather was pleasant, and the troops healthy.—Times, Dec. 1.

POONA.—Weather.—Letters to the 25th instant have reached us from Poona, but contain nothing of importance. The weather was delightful, the thermometer ranging from 64 degrees in the morning to 70 degrees at noon.

—Military Change.—It was reported that an exchange was about being effected betwixt Colonels Pennefather of the 22nd and Cotton of the 28th; the former officer being desirous of returning to England.

—New Barracks.—The new barracks were progressing. They will be very substantial and roomy buildings, the verandahs being so wide, that the men will be able comfortably to mess in them. The front verandah of the barracks is to be inclosed with venetians, thus forming, in case of want of room inside, good quarters for about twenty men.

—Grain.—All descriptions of grain had become very cheap.

—Supply of Water.—The tanks and wells had been well filled with water by the late rains, so that no fears were entertained of a scarcity during the next hot season.

—Health.—The troops were in general healthy, and but few casualties had of late occurred amongst them.—Times, Nov. 27.

—Brigadier Pennefather.—Letters from Poona of the 28th instant inform us that Brigadier Pennefather, commanding the Poona division of the army, would proceed on his tour of inspection this day, accompanied of course by the officers of the staff.

—Suicide of a Thief.—The Mallie suspected to have been concerned in the robbery of the property belonging to conductor McDonald had committed suicide by drowning himself in a well.—Telegraph, Nov. 30.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to declare, in accordance with the rules obtaining under the other presidencies, that in future officers who have obtained permission in General Orders to proceed on furlough or medical certificate to Europe, and who do not embark, from whatever cause, within one month after the expiration of their preparatory leave to the presidency or port of embarkation, must obtain an extension of leave from the Commander-in-Chief to entitle them to their allowances, and in no case will this indulgence be allowed beyond three months from the date of publication of their leave in General Orders, unless sanctioned by Government, on application explaining the cause of detention.

AVAILABLE FURLONGHS.

Bombay Castle, Nov. 17, 1847.—The following disposition list of furloughs available is published for general information:—
Furloughs available on this date 8
Admitted, Mr. A. Remington.

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. SAMUEL LINDSAY LOWRY, 14th N.I.

Head-Quarters, Poona, Oct. 28, 1847.—At a European General Court-Martial assembled at Poona, on Monday, October 11, 1847, and of which Lieut. Col. Boileau, H.M.'s 22nd reg. is president, Lieut. S. L. Lowry, 14th N.I., was tried on the following charges, viz.—

Lieut. S. L. Lowry, 14th N.I., placed in arrest by order of his Exc. the Com.-in-Chief, on complaint of the officer commanding the reg., on the following charges, the judicial investigation of which has hitherto been prevented by Lieut. Lowry having left the head-quarters of the reg., on medical certificate, on December 2, 1845, and proceeded to Europe for the benefit of his health on 1st March, 1846, viz.—

First Charge.—For most disgraceful and fraudulent conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the capacities of secretary and treasurer to the mess of the regiment, in the following instances, viz.—

1st. In having, at different periods between April 1, 1843, and December 2, 1845, embezzled from and defrauded the other officers of the said mess of Rs. 6,000, or thereabouts, in monies and stores placed in his charge, by unauthorizedly appropriating the same to his own private use and purposes.

2nd. In having, between the dates specified in the preceding instance, ordered Havildar Arzoon Sawunt, and through him Havildar Atma Gudum, of the reg. (when they were respectively in charge of the mess stores), to deliver out for his (Lieut. Lowry's) private use, at various times, liquor belonging to the mess, and not to put the same down to his account, thereby defrauding the other officers of the mess of the same.

3rd. In having, between the dates before specified, ordered his own mess liquor accounts to be altered in the book in which they were kept, and erasures to be made therein, thereby defrauding the other officers of the same.

4th. In having, between the dates aforesaid, placed himself and the officers' mess under pecuniary obligations to Havildars Arzoon Sawunt and Atma Gudum, non-commissioned officers of the regiment, by borrowing from them (the havildars), at different times, various sums of money, without consulting the other officers or informing them of the same.

5th. In having, between the dates before specified, framed and delivered over, with other papers relating to the officers of the mess, two statements, bearing dates July 31, 1843, and May 28, 1844, purporting to be correct, but which he knew to be false, with intent to deceive the officers of the regt., and to conceal his fraudulent practices in respect to the mess-money and liquors.

6th. In having, between the before specified dates, laid before the officers of the mess a statement bearing date July 8, 1845, purporting to be correct, but which he knew to be false, with the intent of deceiving the said officers, that he might carry on his irregular and fraudulent practices in respect to the mess money and liquors.

7th. In having, between the dates aforesaid, received letters of the dates and from the person hereinafter specified, respecting the mess debts, tending to throw discredit on the officers of the regiment, without making known the same to them, thereby deceiving the said officers, with the view of concealing his own fraudulent and irregular practices with respect to the mess money and liquors, viz.—

Ruttonjee Cursetjee.

Letters dated Jan. 2, 1845; March 8, 1845; June 10, 1845; August 12, 1845.

8th. In having, between the dates before specified, received from the mess of the 20th reg. N.I. stores to the amount of Rs. 3,554, or thereabouts, and in not having entered the same into any of the mess books or statements under his (Lieut. Lowry's) charge, by which the officers of the 14th reg. N.I. were fraudulently kept in entire ignorance that a sum of Rs. 1,254 was still due on account of the said stores, till a demand of the above account was made in a letter purporting to be signed by Capt. Shirt, president of the mess committee of the 20th N.I., dated April 15, 1847, on their account.

9th. In having, between the dates before specified, appropriated to his own use a wine cooler and bottle covers of the value of Rs. 76, ordered by him as a mess secretary from Messrs. Treacher and Co., of Kurrachee, in the name of the mess, and which have been paid for by the other officers of the mess.

Second Charge.—For conduct derogatory to the character of an officer and gentleman, and tending to affect his honesty and integrity, in not having replied, up to the present time, to a letter dated the Fort, Hyderabad, January 29, 1846, written to him by the adjutant of the regiment, by order of the commanding officer, calling for an explanation as to the appropriation of certain sums of money intrusted to him (Lieut. Lowry) as mess treasurer.

Third Charge.—For highly disgraceful and fraudulent conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and gentleman, in appropriating to his own use, and leaving the reg. without accounting for it, the sum of Rs. 180, subscribed by the officers of the regt. to procure flutes for the fifiers of the same, which was paid to him on November 9, 1844, or thereabouts.

Upon which charges the Court came to the following decision:—

Guilty of the first charge in the third instance.

Not guilty of the first charge in the fourth instance.

Guilty of the first charge in the fifth instance.

Guilty of the first charge in the sixth instance.

Guilty of this charge in the seventh instance.

Guilty of this charge in the eighth instance.

And guilty of this charge in the ninth instance.

Not guilty of the second charge.

Guilty of the third charge.

Sentence.—The Court, having found the prisoner guilty as above specified, which being in breach of the Articles of War, does adjudge him, Lieut. S. L. Lowry, 14th reg. N.I., to be dismissed the service of the Honourable Company.

(Sd.) P. K. SKINNER, Capt., Dep. Judge Adv. Gen.

S. B. BOILEAU, Lieut.-Col., and President.

(Sd.) WILLOUGHBY COTTON, Lieut.-General,
Commander-in-Chief Bombay Army.

Head-Quarters, Poona, Oct. 28, 1847.

Remarks by the Commander-in-Chief.—From the proceedings on this trial, which I have most attentively perused, I regret to observe that great censurable carelessness, and want of control, in respect to the accounts of the mess of the 14th reg. N.I., existed on the part of the other officers belonging to it, during the period Lieut. Lowry was secretary and treasurer, by which the latter was enabled to practice the gross frauds and deceits of which he has been convicted.

(Sd.) WILLOUGHBY COTTON, Lieut.-General,
Commander-in-Chief Bombay Army.

The name of Lieutenant Samuel Lindsay Lowry is to be struck off the strength of the army from this date.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

MONDAY, January 10, 1848.

AMONG the articles of intelligence brought by the Overland Mail, one cannot fail to have the effect of a well-concerted surprise in a work of fiction. DOONGHUR SINGH, the robber-chief, who so long eluded all attempts to secure him, and who seemed to bear, not only "a charmed life," but to enjoy a charmed immunity from the chances of his unlawful profession, has at last been entangled in the toils, and made prisoner. This service—and it was both a difficult and a hazardous one—was performed by Lieut. HARDCASTLE, of the 53rd Bengal Native Infantry. His plans appear to have been judiciously laid, and it is evident that they were vigorously and perseveringly acted upon. The results are, that a large tract of country is freed from the ravages of a man whose name was long a terror, and that the newspapers, as well as their correspondents, have lost an inexhaustible subject of report and speculation.

Lieutenant HARDCASTLE is, we believe, a very young officer. He has commenced his career of service most auspiciously, and we can wish him nothing better than abundant opportunities for earning distinction, convinced that he will never fail to use them to advantage.

WHEN the Post-Office authorities are bent upon the performance of any freak more than usually absurd—a feat difficult, indeed, to achieve, but sometimes attained by those great masters in the art of rendering every thing they touch ridiculous—when they set their hearts on effecting something pre-eminently foolish, they generally have recourse to China as a field for the exercise of their talents. Having endeavoured by their proceedings against Captain LARKINS to stop all communication by letter between Hong Kong and Canton, they have now, to save appearances, taken one of the most singular steps ever ventured upon, even by those who rule in the British Post-Office. They have not established any regular postal communication between Hong Kong and Canton; but they have levied additional rates of postage in consideration of the performance of a duty which they cannot discharge, and do not even pretend to discharge, and—we entreat the reader to believe that we are not trying to hoax him—they have sent a Post-Office clerk to Canton: that is, they have assumed within the empire of China the exercise of functions which, in all countries, are held to belong peculiarly and exclusively to the state! We should like to know under what principle of international law the British authorities have presumed to establish a post-office in China. What would our venerable neighbour LORD PHILIPPS say, if the British Government were to despatch a clerk to Boulogne to exercise postal duties there? What would LORD JOHN RUSSELL, or LORD PALMERSTON, or the Marquess of CLANRICARDE say, if the King of the Barricades were to take the like liberty at Dover or Folkestone? The China Mail justly observes, that if we are entitled to establish a post-office at Canton, we are equally entitled to establish a custom-house there. Will this be the next step? If so, what will be the third? The erection of a British court of justice perhaps—and so we may go on (if the Chinamen will let us) till we have established an imperium in imperio—a little English state within that of China, having institutions of its own, not made, nor sanctioned, nor recognized by the laws of the country in which they exist, but springing up out of usurpation, in defiance of the usages of the civilized world. We think we could tell what LORD STOWELL would have said to such an assumption of power, could the conception of its possibility have arisen in his time.

WE need scarcely recommend to the notice of our readers the particulars, so far as they have been ascertained, of the abandonment, and subsequent recovery, of an East-India trading vessel, the Lady Kennaway, which particulars will be found in another column. The extraordinary nature of this case has excited an unusual amount of interest, not only in the mercantile world, but in the public generally; and when we consider the great responsibility that is intrusted to the master of a merchant vessel, laden with a valuable cargo, and the still heavier responsibility that rests on his desertion of his charge, we can scarcely wonder at the excitement that has arisen in this instance, or call the interest which has been provoked misplaced. We have no desire to prejudge the case, and at present the statements that have appeared are not entirely free from confusion; but, without laying ourselves open to any censure, we may state, as a broad principle, that when the master of a merchantman forsakes his ship, the necessity of such a course of proceeding should not be questionable. Of course the certainty of loss of human life, should the crew remain by the vessel, would be a sufficient reason for her desertion; but we think we are justified in saying that nothing short of this can be considered a valid excuse. The great amount of property committed to the care of a master of a merchantman, and the confidence necessarily reposed in him by his employers, should make such an officer exceedingly cautious in his conduct, and he should not permit himself to be frightened by unreal or trivial danger, or overcome by unsubstantial difficulties. We are far, very far, from wishing or intending to underrate the many dangers of a seaman's life, but when a man selects the sea as his profession, he knows that he adopts a calling that is pregnant with difficulties, and that demands an unusual amount of courage, confidence, and perseverance. If these requisites be wanting, it is quite clear that he has made a sad mistake in estimating his capabilities, and the sooner he quits that profession, for which he is unfit, the better for his own name and the honour of the service. Pusillanimity, which in many men would be only contemptible, in a sailor becomes criminal; and vacillation and indolence are equally so. There is no error more fatal to one of this class than a too close adoption, or an adoption on too slight grounds, of the old adage, "Self-preservation is the first law of nature." A propensity to be staggered at the first sight of difficulty, and to be appalled at the first blush of danger, may be the ruin of a man who otherwise might be a good seaman. We are proud to say, however, that the apophthegm we have just quoted finds but few disciples in either our Royal or commercial navies. We have forborne entering into the particulars of this case, but we may state that, prima facie, the main fact is startling enough. A ship, laden with a very valuable cargo, is deserted by her own crew of thirty-five men (her full complement of hands). She is recovered, repaired, and for many miles worked by seven Danes, and finally brought home by a crew of fifteen men in all. We have said that this at first sight appears startling, and our surprise is by no means lessened on recollecting that the original crew were natives of a country that boasts, and boasts justly, of the high qualities of her seamen. Another fact also appears strange, namely, that the Danes, with their limited means, should be able to effect the construction and fitting of a temporary rudder; a feat which Captain AVERY's crew, with their superior numbers, could not or would not accomplish. A remarkable mistake or wilful misrepresentation also occurred with respect to the depth of water in the ship at the time of her desertion. From the published statement of the crew, it would appear that the quantity of water was so rapidly increasing as seriously to endanger the safety of the crew and cargo; so much so, indeed, that in the statement referred to, it is said that the ship, when forsaken, had "at least four or five feet of water in the fore part," and was evidently settling by the head, yet this vessel floated for a week before she was picked up by the Danes, and when recovered she had but sixteen inches of water in her hold, to free her from which a very short time—not more than ten minutes—sufficed. At Plymouth, with thirty hours' water in her, she was pumped dry in one minute and a half! With these few remarks we leave the case for the present; when something more explicit has been made public, we may be induced to return to the subject.

* Statement of Mr. N. M. Condy, in the Illustrated London News, Dec. 18th.

THE Liverpool Association for the reduction of the duty on tea are again in the field, and have put forth a statement of their case, which is, on the whole, well adapted to advance its interests, and very creditable to the good sense and good taste of those by whom it has been prepared. Towards the close of the paper, indeed, there is a bit of a dash at fine writing. We find very unexpectedly at the tail of a very calm and sober document something about the "iron fetters of monopoly," and "the loaf of the poor man appearing on his frugal board untaxed, while tea, its universal accompaniment," is not in that blessed condition. All this is in the worst style of those mountebank orators who go up and down the country acting the philanthropist, and pocketing thereby as much as they can pick up; whether casual pence collected at the doors, or contributions of more attractive amount, furnished by the deluded persons who think it worth while to purchase their costermonger voices and Billingsgate tongues. There is but little, however, of this trash in the paper before us, and after three pages of fair statement and reasoning we may pardon a few silly lines.

The Association are not insensible to the evils attendant on carrying, or attempting to carry, great questions by agitation; but they think, and not without apparent reason, that they have no other resource. They cannot, they say, "help adverting most prominently to the fact, that for the last fifty years no great alteration affecting the political, social, physical, or moral condition of the people, has ever been accomplished without a previous earnest, and in some instances long and dangerous, agitation on the part of the public." And looking back on the past—seeing what has been done for the worst causes by agitation, and how much the best have suffered for want of it, we need hardly wonder at their arriving at the following conclusion:—"It is to be feared that the reduction of the tea duty will be added to the long list of witnesses against the willingness of the ruling powers of this country to grant just and equitable demands without being first impelled thereto by an irresistible expression of popular opinion in the shape of general agitation." Such being the case, men will be tempted to agitate even in the sober cause of tea, and the excuse offered in the succeeding passage can scarcely be condemned:—"The Association does not wish to defend such a course, but to call attention to the fact, that experience has proved its necessity in any attempt to remove or alter what has by time grown obsolete, or actively injurious to the public welfare. Whether this arises from the indisposition of men in power to meddle with such subjects until forced upon them, or from policy on their parts, in that it might be unwise and unsafe to do so until they were assured of popular support, the Association thinks it a matter of no moment to determine; but it does consider the acknowledged fact itself to be its justification for further agitation to accomplish its object."

We fear that the circumstances of the times are not very favourable to the result of an agitation for the removal of a tax; but among those imposts which ought to be reduced at the earliest practicable period, we should unhesitatingly place the duty on tea. The reasons assigned by the Association, most of which are furnished by a committee of the House of Commons which sat during the last session of the late Parliament to inquire into "our present commercial relations with China," and which made its report in July last, are well worth attention, and we heartily commend them to general notice. It is shewn that the duty in its present amount interferes materially and most injuriously with the course of trade between China and Great Britain; that it abridges the comforts of the people of our own country, is a fact which scarcely requires proof or illustration. A tax of 200 per cent. upon an article of universal consumption manifestly calls for abatement. When and how it is to come we know not. The report of the committee, in that spirit of solemn Tom-foolery which seems to preside over the concoction of all such documents, refers the choice of the period to "the wisdom of Parliament." Now no one can doubt that Parliament is, and always has been, a very wise body; an assemblage of wise men, as its Saxon name implies; as little can it be questioned that the present Parliament—we speak especially of the House of Commons—is the wisest that ever sat. So anxious have certain bodies of electors been to secure wisdom in their representatives, that they have sought it even in the kennels and common sewers of society. In selecting members from a class of persons never before thought fit occupants of the Palace at Westminster, the choice of these worthy trustees of the franchise was, no doubt, determined by a regard to the amount of wisdom possessed by those who, to their own astonishment as well as to that of the world, have suddenly found themselves metamorphosed into "honourable gentlemen," from a condition which placed them on a level with street beggars. Precious stones have been found in dunghills, and wisdom may be secreted in the heads of some of that extraordinary collection of unclean animals which the results of the last election have sent to assist in the councils of the nation. We can wait for its development better than we can trust it. In the meantime, we are glad that the Liverpool Association are coming forward to give the dormant wisdom of the Legislature a rouse. We shall rejoice in any opportunity of furthering their attempts, and still more in that, should such opportunity ever arrive, of congratulating them on their success.

EGYPT.

Alexandria, Dec. 19.

Of public news I have but little, and that little not of a very exciting description; the movements, actual and expected, of governors-general, and the goings and comings of steamboats, constitute the principal items. First, as to the Governor-General. Lord Dalhousie arrived here on the 4th inst. On the following day he left for Cairo, where he arrived on the 6th. At Cairo, the palace of Abbas Pasha was, by order of Mahomet Ali, placed at the disposal of his lordship. On the day following their arrival, Lord and Lady Dalhousie paid a formal visit of ceremony to Mahomet, who was uncommonly courteous, sending his own carriages and a troop of cavalry to conduct the Governor-General and suite to his palace. During this interview, the old gentleman presented Lady Dalhousie with a pipe, which her ladyship very obligingly smoked, and though she did not like to look blue at her entertainer's kindness, she could scarce avoid looking rather yellow, on noticing which Mahomet Ali condescendingly requested she would not continue the unpleasant amusement, no doubt to the great relief of her ladyship. On the 8th, the Earl and Countess were received by Mahomet at dinner, to which a large and illustrious party were invited. On the 9th, they dined with the Hon. Mr. Murray, the English consul-general. On the same evening they left Cairo for Suez, where they arrived on the following day. On the 11th, the day after their arrival at Suez, they embarked for Calcutta, on board the Moosaffer. Capt. W. Henderson, of the Sidon, went with the distinguished party as far as Suez. Thus much for the new G. G., and now a word regarding the movements of the old one. Lord Hardinge will most likely arrive in this country in January. His lordship, I understand, will land at Cosseir, on the west coast of the Red Sea. From that place he will proceed across the desert to Keneh, on the Nile; there a steamer will be waiting to carry his lordship to Thebes and the cataracts. His lordship will then proceed to this place, where he will embark on board the Sidon, for England. The Sidon sailed from here on the 17th, for Malta. She will return to this station early in February.

You are aware, from my former letters, that a commission of French engineers was sent out to survey the Isthmus of Suez, in order to construct a canal between the Mediterranean and Red Seas. There can be no doubt that this communication, if practicable, would be a very great advantage; but the difficulties have hitherto been deemed, if not insurmountable, at least very great. The Austrians, at the beginning of the present year, made a survey, with the same object in view as the French. These two reports will be "amalgamated," as you at home would say, when a final decision will take place. The French engineers do not estimate the engineering difficulties as very great. They seem to think that forming a port on the Mediterranean coast will be attended with a very great outlay, as there will be difficulties encountered in obtaining a sufficient depth of water. When once formed, it would be kept free by the great rush of waters from the Red Sea, which is considerably higher than the Mediterranean.

The Precursor left Suez for Madras and Calcutta, on the 12th inst., having on board about 150 passengers.

The Victoria, with the Bombay mail of the 1st, arrived at Suez on the 16th, and reached here to-day.

December 20.

The French steamer Alexandre has just departed with her mails.

December 25.

No steamer has yet arrived to take the English mail, which was brought by the Victoria. I shall keep this letter open till the steamer arrives.

December 26.

The Ariel has just arrived from Malta. She was detained there till the 22nd, waiting for the arrival of the Pasha, with the Southampton mail of December 3rd. The last-named vessel was, as of course you know, despatched with the mail in consequence of the Erin having met with an accident in a great storm. I have no further news of importance.

ABANDONMENT AND RECOVERY OF THE "LADY KENNAWAY."

On the 3rd of last June the Lady Kennaway left Bombay for London. In consequence of light, variable, and contrary winds, she made a long passage to the Cape; and up to the 25th of August the weather was very rough and tempestuous. She reached St. Helena on the 10th September, where she put in for repairs. On the 14th she left, and about the 20th spoke and obtained some provisions from the Cumberland, bound for Liverpool from Pernambuco. On the 25th of the same month, a strong gale of wind, S.S.W. to N.E., set in, during which the vessel laboured heavily. In consequence of continued stormy weather and a shortness of provisions, the ship was run into Terceira, and left that place on the 30th September. On the 2nd November a strong gale arose, which continued to increase till the 7th, when the maintop sail, the foretopmast staysail, and the greater part of the main trysail were lost, and the spindle of the rudder carried away; shortly after the rudder went altogether. The ship rapidly making water, fifty bales of cotton and a quantity of coffee and rice were thrown overboard. On Wednesday, the 10th, a new rudder was constructed and put over, but in consequence of the heavy sea, the size of the rudder, and the want of gear, it could not be secured. Signal guns were fired, and the usual marks of distress put up, but though several vessels passed near and saw them, they offered no aid. At noon, the Belgian schooner La Meuse, the French brig Minerva, and the schooner Daphne, observing the signals of distress, bore down on her. The captain went on board La Meuse, and endeavoured to induce her captain to take the Lady Kennaway in tow; but he declined on account of the size of his vessel. The captains of the Minerva and Daphne likewise declined; but all three vessels offered to take her crew. This being the case, the captain told the crew that he was aware that the vessel was at present unmanageable, but that he intended to stay by her as long as there was any likelihood of doing any thing for her. The crew replied that, provided they could get assistance to tow the ship, they would stop with her, but that in her present state she could not live through another gale, which it was very probable would soon spring up, and that it would be sacrificing their lives to remain; besides that, there was only one boat, should they stay by her and she perish. The captain then, stating the heavy responsibility which rested on his abandoning his ship, proposed to lighten her further; but the crew protested against it, and against his allowing the other vessels to leave them, especially as the provisions were short, and they could not hope to save her without that assistance which had been refused. After some consultation, the disabled people and clothes were sent on board the Meuse, which had consented to stay by the Lady Kennaway till the morning. On returning from the Meuse for the third time, the Lady Kennaway's iron boat went down alongside her. At ten at night the rudder was cut away. At daylight the longboat was patched up and lowered, and most of the remaining clothes put in. The commander of the Daphne again refused to take the Lady Kennaway in tow, and stated that he had not a boat to send to her, although a very splendid one was on his deck; he, however, again offered to take the crew. Just as the longboat reached the Meuse she filled and went down; but no lives were lost. Shortly after the Caroline, 30 tons, of Guernsey, from Seville to Glasgow, came in sight. She could give no assistance, but offered to take the people. At length the captain of the Lady Kennaway determined to leave her, and with the crew got on board the schooner Meuse, and sailed for Falmouth. Mr. Walshe, Mr. Bean, and some of the crew went on board the Caroline. The captain and crew state that at the time of abandonment, the Lady Kennaway had 4 feet 2 inches water in the pump well.

On the 19th Nov., while in lat. 47° 4' N., long. 8° 37' W., the abandoned vessel was fallen in with by the Industrie, a Danish brig, of Aalborg, from Bremen, for St. Ubes, commanded by Capt. A. M. Cristopherson, and by the Naïden, of Copenhagen, from Hamburg, also bound for St. Ubes, and commanded by Capt. C. Schyt. She had her fore and maintop-gallant sails and jib bent; her lower sails had been cut away, apparently by some outwardbound vessel; the cabin partitions were broken down, and taken away; the after hatchway was burst open, and part of the stores in the aft-hold had been carried off, and the ship had the appearance of having been recklessly stripped and plundered of her loose rope, sails, brass works, &c. It is reported, that when found she was tight and firm, the only damage done being the loss of her rudder. The Danes sent from each vessel a mate, a carpenter, and an able seaman, and placing her in charge of Mr. M. D. Dinesen, mate of the Industrie, took her in tow. On the 20th of November, in heavy weather, she broke adrift; but in the mean time her limited crew had supplied her with a temporary rudder, formed of planks, which answered tolerably well; they had also made for her a new maintop sail, under which and a foretop sail, she sailed in bad weather, occasionally hoisting both topgallant sails. On the 23rd, the Industrie having lost sight of her companion and the Lady Kennaway, and being leaky, with rudder damaged, went to Falmouth. The Naïden kept near the Lady Kennaway, and in moderate weather towed her. On the 24th, at noon, her Majesty's brigantine Dolphin, commander the Hon. R. F. Boyle, bound for Africa, fell in with them, in lat. 46° 30' N., long. 8° 30' W., by dead reckoning. Mr. Midshipman Wynyard and seven seamen were sent on board to help the Danes to take the damaged bark into port. On the 25th there was a strong set to the northward out of the bay, and the ship subsequently experienced heavy northerly gales, which drove her near the coast of France, where she was in great danger, and her plank rudder was carried away. A more substantial rudder, made of a stout teak spar, was then fixed to her. The fastening of one of the stern gundeck ports broke loose in the night, and had not the entrance of the water awoken a man, the ship and all on board would most probably have been lost. On the 30th, the Naïden, having strained herself in towing the castaway, left her, and arrived at Falmouth on the 1st instant. At six o'clock a.m. on the 1st ult., the Start light was made by the Lady Kennaway, and shortly afterwards she was joined by Mr. Richard Stibbs, Plymouth pilot, until relieved by the Confiance steam tug, which had been sent out to meet her, and which on the following day towed her into the Admiralty waters in Hamoaze. She was subsequently brought from Hamoaze alongside of the merchant-vessels' pier of Turnchapel Catwater, where she was put into the custody of shipkeepers appointed by the Admiralty, and the salvors, and of officers from the custom-house. On Friday an official examination of her took place by Mr. W. B. Cumings, Lloyd's agent, and Mr. Eastlake, crown solicitor. Her hatches were put under the seal of the Admiralty, who took possession of her and her cargo. The Danes have, through their consul, made a formal claim of 105,000*l.* for salvage; a claim, on the like ground, of 35,000*l.* has been preferred by Mr. Wynyard, and the crew of the Dolphin. The Lady Kennaway is about 700 tons burthen; she is a fine, strong, teak-built ship, deep waisted, copper bottomed, and well found; she has a poop, and topgallant forecastle, and carries carronades. On entering the port the Danish flag was flying in her larboard mizen rigging, and the English ensign was suspended from her boom topping lift.

DEBATE AT THE EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East-India Stock was held on Wednesday, the 22nd ult. The chair was taken at 12 o'clock, when the minutes of the last general court were read.

RETURNS, &c.

The CHAIRMAN (Henry St. George Tucker, Esq.) acquainted the Court that certain returns to Parliamentary orders, and accounts of annuities and superannuations granted since the last Court, were laid on the table.

WARRANTS FOR DIVIDENDS.

The CHAIRMAN acquainted the Court, that the warrants for the payment of the half-yearly dividends would be ready for delivery on the 6th of January.

SUGAR.

Mr. ARBUTHNOT asked, if a letter from the East-India Association to the Court of Directors, on the subject of Sugar, had been received by the latter body, and what consequent steps had been taken?

The CHAIRMAN said, he had the pleasure of informing the hon. proprietor that the letter he referred to had been received by the Court of Directors, and had been submitted to Government through the proper channel—the President of the Board. He had no doubt the subject would receive the attention it deserved.

TEMPLE OF JUGGURNAUT.

Mr. POYNTER, who had a notice of motion on this subject on the paper, after some preliminary observations, handed in a new motion, of which the following is a copy:—

"That adverting to the despatch to the Bengal Government, transmitted fourteen years ago, by the Court of Directors, and dated the 20th February, 1833, declaring their determined withdrawal thenceforth from all connexion with and abetment of the idolatrous rites and ceremonies of India; and further adverting to the correspondence of the Court with its Bengal Government, ordered to be laid on the table of this Court, demonstrating that no pledge, direct or indirect, was ever given for the support of the temple of Juggernaut; and also adverting to the continued annual money payment of 35,000 rupees still made by the local government for the support of that temple, its priests and prostitutes, under the supposed obligation of some fiscal commutation, in consequence of which payment it was proved, at the September Court, that the abominations of this temple and destruction of human life still continue precisely as if the said despatch had never been issued, this Court is of opinion that the local Government is manifestly exceeding its commission, and that the time is fully arrived when it becomes the imperative duty of this Court to Christianity and the country to interpose, and to declare that all such support of heathenism shall have an immediate end."

The CHAIRMAN wished to know whether the hon. proprietor desired the new motion to have precedence of the one respecting the publication of the papers laid on the table on the hon. proprietor's motion. If the hon. proprietor wished the papers to be printed, he conceived there could be no objection to it. They had better dispose of that motion before they entered on the consideration of the new one.

The motion, of which the following is a copy, was then read.

"That the late correspondence between the Hon. Court of Directors and the Bengal Government, relative to any pledge having been originally given for the continued support of the temple of Juggernaut on the conquest of the district of Cuttack, in the province of Orissa, already laid on the table, be printed for the use of such proprietors as may previously signify in writing their desire to possess it."

Mr. SULLIVAN seconded it.

Mr. POYNTER said, although the Chairman had acceded to the motion, yet he (Mr. Poynter) desired to say a few, and they should be very few, words on the subject. The present motion arose out of the one he made on the last court-day, when he was beaten—he must say thoroughly beaten. That motion requested the Directors to reconsider the matter, but the one which he had given in was, that the Court of Proprietors take the subject up. Juggernaut was what it was; nothing had been done, with the single exception that persons did not sacrifice themselves under the wheels of the car. Dr. Buchanan once declared in a sermon, that it was impossible for him to detail the horrors practised at the temple in the open daylight, and in the noonday sun; yet thousands upon thousands still witnessed it. Would it be believed, that in June, 1846, the last accounts which he possessed, this moral degradation and physical suffering were witnessed by not less than 180,000 people. No crime, no delusion was too great to be practised at this place, and it was impossible to state what effect it had on the minds of the people. During the last festival in the city of Poorree, while swarming with people, 120 died of cholera in the four days during which the abominable scenes continued. The nights were usually rainy, and the consequence of wretched lodging and food were no doubt the cause of the disease. Many were carried out of the houses where they had taken up their lodgings, and, while living, left to the tender mercies of dogs and jackals. He dare not, as a Christian, repeat the details of some of the scenes that occurred. The missionaries stationed near the temple were so sensible of the horrors and immorality attendant on the festival, that they had petitioned the Court of Directors on the subject of the continued money payment of Rs. 35,000, and had also petitioned the Court of Proprietors, which petition he had had the honour of presenting at Michaelmas. The Board of Control had likewise been made aware of the state of the case, but with very little effect. The question in this case was, was there or was there not a distinct pledge or guarantee of continued payment to the temple. Several very high and influential gentlemen, among whom was Mr. Plowden, a relative, he believed, of an hon. director, had given it as their opinion that there was no pledge at all; in fact it was impossible there should be. Could they suppose such enlightened men as the Marquis Wellesley and his brother, officers of a Christian government, could have given such a guarantee. However, supposing these men to have been weak or wicked enough to have given such a promise, yet it was clear it could be of no effect, ab initio; it could not legally have been done by them. He wished to say a few words on an argument made use of by the hon. chairman at the last court. He had attended to the subject for many years, and given it a great deal of thought and examination, but he heard for the first time, at the last quarter day, that there was such a thing as a Seya, of which the chairman spoke. If such a thing existed, could we not get rid of it? Up to September he was not aware of the existence of such a Seya. He could not conceive a case of greater reserve; no doubt the Seya had been kept, as it were, in pickle, to be brought out on some great occasion, and that occasion occurred in September. The last time he brought the subject under their notice, he had pressed for a division after he had been beaten on a show of hands, and he did this in order to see who were indisposed for further reference in the case. The fact might not perhaps be known to all present, but it was nevertheless true, that of the persons constituting the proprietors of East-India stock, eighty-six were clergymen of the Church of England. The number of votes actually commanded by these gentlemen, was 107, but from their station, rank, and respectability, they must be able to command a greater number. He greatly regretted that these gentlemen contented themselves with coming to that house only twice in the year, when they received their dividends. He was sorry to see them absent from such discussions as the present. As a churchman himself it pained him to be obliged to make a complaint against the clergy of the church to which he belonged, but he must tell the truth. Previously to bringing on his present motion, he had sent letters to all the class of which he was now speaking, enclosing a copy of his motion. Out of the eighty-six, one, and one alone, answered, who stated that if he could vote by proxy as at elections, he should have great pleasure in placing his proxy at his (Mr. Poynter's) disposal, but of course that was of no avail. The time must come when Juggernaut must fall, but never might it fall till Christianity, with its blessed influence, should put it down, and give the idolaters a more pure faith. He recommended to their notice the second psalm, as an old member of the Bible Society did to the pope, when he issued a bull against that society.

The CHAIRMAN said he begged to call attention to the first motion. He thought it better to dispose of that before they considered the fresh one. The Court had no objection at all to granting the motion, but if the hon. proprietor wished, it should be read again and passed in the usual form. [The motion was then formally put and agreed to.] He wished to know whether the motion handed in by the hon. proprietor was intended as a motion for that Court, or only a notice of one to be brought on at the next Court.

Mr. POYNTER said he decidedly intended to press, even to a division, the motion he had just given in. He deprecated putting it off till another day—a day which to him might never arrive. It was true he had not given notice of his intention to bring it on that day, but he was of opinion with Sir Charles Forbes, that though it was customary to give notice, yet such a rule must have its limitations.

The CHAIRMAN thought it more expedient that it should be postponed.

Mr. POYNTER could not postpone it on that ground.

Mr. WEDDING wished that the hon. proprietor, Mr. Poynder, would take the recommendation of the hon. Chairman, and give notice of his motion for a future Court. In expressing this wish, he desired to occupy the attention of the hon. gentleman and of the Court for a few moments while he adverted to a piece of information which had been received from India since the meeting of the Court in September last. He alluded to the information which had reached this country that the practice of suttee, or the sacrifice of women at the funeral of their husbands, had been abolished throughout the kingdom of Lahore, by order of the government of that country. They all remembered the horrid scene which followed upon the death of Runjeet Singh, when four of his wives and seven of his female slaves were burnt to death upon his funeral pile. That this was a voluntary sacrifice no man could believe. Under the sanction of the forms of their civil polity this inhuman sacrifice was perpetrated. This practice in that part of India was now at an end. This salutary change was no doubt achieved by the mediation and advice of the British authorities. It was a great step gained in the advancement of the civilization of India. The example of so large a native state as Lahore, backed by the advice and influence of British authority, would no doubt extend itself to other parts of India where native rule prevailed. These circumstances, he trusted, would afford the greatest satisfaction to his hon. friend, and he hoped they would convince him that the local government in India was alive to the improvement of the social condition of the people of India, and that this improvement was the safest and surest forerunner of those other and mightier changes which the hon. gentleman contemplated, and which they all desired to see accomplished.

A short desultory conversation ensued, in which Messrs. Sullivan and Thompson urged the postponement of the motion; to which Mr. Poynder at last agreed.

The CHAIRMAN said—I wish to make a few remarks on this subject. The hon. proprietor seems astonished at the existence of such a thing as a Seyas; I should have thought that he, a professional man, would have been better acquainted with the law of India. He ought to know, that in India there is a code of laws by which the conduct of the government is regulated; and in this code it is laid down, that for all Seyas abolished, compensation shall be granted. In several old regulations we find mention made of this, and in one Act of Parliament the very words of the regulation are quoted. It is likewise stated, that all Hindoos and Mahomedans shall be maintained and protected in the rights of religion. I recommend the whole code to the earnest attention of the hon. proprietor. The hon. proprietor, in alluding to the despatch on the subject of February, 1833, little knew what difficulties had been encountered in the carrying out of that despatch. In the Regulations 19 and 37 of the year 1793, it is ordered, that all claims on lands transferred to us shall be allowed by us, and we are liable to law proceedings if we do not obey this Regulation. In fact, this is a legal question, and the Government of India is bound by law to act as it does. I have ventured to make this explanation, in order to shew that this is a question that requires deep consideration, and which cannot be disposed in the enthusiasm of religious feeling. We cannot change the religion of millions by authority, and I submit that the importance of the subject ought to cause us to pause in deciding, and to deliberate with the calmness which becomes Christians. (Cheers.)

Mr. Poynder had not said that he had never heard of Seyas till September last, but that he was ignorant of its existence in this case until that period.

After a few remarks from Mr. Lewis and Mr. Sergeant Storks, the subject dropped.

THE LATE EX-RAJA OF SATTARA.

Mr. Lewis postponed until March a motion of which he gave notice at the last Court.

Mr. SULLIVAN handed in a motion, and proceeded to speak in support of it. In the course of his remarks he entered at considerable length into the details of the case. Suppose a conspiracy had been got up against the chairman, he said; suppose a committee appointed to enquire into the matter; suppose the evidence led to the chairman in a language with which he was imperfectly acquainted; suppose the chairman condemned; suppose the repeated attempts of the chairman to obtain justice to be of no avail; and suppose him at last to go to "that bourne from which no traveller returns." Mutatis mutandis the case was the Raja's. He considered the proposition that the crime alleged against the Raja was a political one; and therefore that that prince was not to be heard in his defence, was monstrous. Would any one accused of high treason in this country be refused an opportunity of defending himself against the charge? All that the Raja had required was, that he might be furnished with a copy of the evidence against him, and this was refused. Thus, the Raja was dead, but the evidence was alive, and a committee of enquiry should be appointed. Let them do by the Raja of Sattara as they did by the Raja of Tanjore. Unless justice were rendered in this case, the confidence of the natives in the honour of the British Government would be shaken. Should the result of this case be the appropriation by the British Government of the Raja's territory, the consequences, he warned them, would be serious. The hon. proprietor concluded by moving:—

"That the contents of the papers recently laid before the Court respecting the innocence of the Raja of Sattara, together with the information previously possessed by the Court, render it expedient and necessary for the furtherance of the ends of justice and the future good government of India, that the enquiry which had been prayed for by the late Rajah should be granted, with the view of relieving his character, if innocent, and vindicating the honour of the British Government from that suspicion and obloquy which the proceedings against the late Raja have excited."

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON seconded the motion. He should have been culpable if he had not brought forward the case at the earliest opportunity, after the demise of the Raja. He would not cease agitating the question, till justice was done to the memory of the deceased Raja, who had fallen a victim to the ill usage of the Government, and the obduracy of that Court. He considered the Raja was a murdered man. The Government were cognisant of the fact, that the climate of Benares did not agree with him, and though they knew he was rapidly sinking under its effects, they took no steps to remove him to a more healthy situation. The opinion of the agent that the Raja was sinking daily, was concealed in the Secret Committee, from July, 1846, to last September, and his prayer to be removed, was systematically refused. The letter of the Raja, dated 12th December, addressed to Lord Hardinge, and contained in Major Carpenter's letter, had been detained in India, contrary to the regulation which required that all petitions to the Court of Directors, or the India government, should be forwarded to this country, within twenty-four days after their receipt by the India authorities. The letter had been printed by some friends, in England, and therefore, it might be asked why should it be granted in an official form. It was the dying request of the Raja contained in an autograph letter, dated the day before he died, that is on the 13th of October. To his wife, he observed, "while a jewel remains on your person, persecute the enquiry why I was condemned." But why continue this agitation? Because the territory yet remained. What was to become of that? He would look narrowly after its disposal. To his relations the Raja had bequeathed the prosecution of the suit and vindication of his honour, and they would not fail in this duty, for they would not inherit a tarnished name. He solemnly declared, that never among heathens or Christians had he contemplated a more faultless character than the Raja. Not one tittle of confirmatory evidence had been brought forward, but on the contrary, each step showed more clearly the conspiracy against the Raja. But why prosecute the enquiry? The Raja had left a son. In 1845, he adopted a son, who was given up by his mother, and legally adopted by the Raja. This son was, moreover, the next of kin. These reasons furnished sufficient ground for enquiry. What had been done in that case, would be done again, but the friends of the Raja would so agitate the question as to illustrate the necessity of greater influence over Governors abroad. For years he had shown that neither the Governor-General nor the Governor of Bombay had a right to depose the Raja, that prince had done nothing to render himself amenable to the law. There was no emergency, no taking up arms against our power, and therefore he contended that the depose of the Raja, without the concurrence of the home authorities, was illegal. At most, all that could be alleged against the Raja was, an intention to commit an injury. But why prosecute the enquiry? The people of England demanded it, and would have it. Of the petitions sent up to Parliament this session, those in favour of an enquiry in this case, were three times as many as all the others put together, and the signatures far outnumbered those on all the other petitions. He was now about to make some serious charges against an hon. bart., a member of the Court of Directors.

The CHAIRMAN said, if the hon. proprietor alluded to Sir James Hogg, he had better defer his remarks until that gentleman was sent for.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON agreed, and resumed. Efforts had been made to induce a belief that the case had died a natural death, but it had not yet ended. It had been asserted in the Commons House of Parliament, that we found the Raja in a dungeon, and seized him to a throne—that the annual revenue of the Sattara territory, was 100,000*l.*, and that we generously allowed him 10,000*l.* a-year, on his depose. Both these statements were untrue. He quoted General Briggs, and a parliamentary paper to prove that the Raja was not put into a dungeon by the Peishwah, but that he was only restricted to one place, a hill-fort, three or four miles square.

Sir JAMES HOGG (who had entered the Court) said, he had stated that the Raja was taken from captivity.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON said the words used were "from a dungeon," he had them from Mr. Gurney's notes.

Sir JAMES HOGG said, he first used the word dungeon, but when the hon. proprietor called "No," he corrected the expression, and said "from captivity."

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON said, that statement had been made in that Court as well, and they had then heard our liberality spoken of. The hon. proprietor here read parts of a letter from Col. Pringle Taylor, relating the surrender of the Raja to the writer. Why was it so obtruded on their notice that the Raja was a captive? Did that affect his character? Was he less honourable—less just. Equally destitute of foundation was the statement that the revenue was 100,000*l*. Mr. Elphinstone said the territory of Sattara would produce 180,000*l*. a year. General Briggs said it would produce 160,000*l*. a year, with a prospect of increase, and his own opinion and belief was, that at the time of the Raja being restored to the throne of his forefathers, the annual revenue was from 130,000*l*. to 160,000*l*. He deprecated the practice of quoting short extracts from Capt. Grant Duff to prove the Raja was sly, while all the rest of the book was in his favour. He hoped the present enquiry would be granted, as he supposed official intelligence had been received by the Government, of the death of the Raja. At the time of the deceased Raja's departure from Sattara, he was followed into captivity by about 1,200 people, in fact, all the respectable inhabitants of the city left with him. Of that number, 300 or 400 had died, and 700 were left without the means of existence. The Raja had supported them out of his limited income. He wished to ask what conduct would be pursued towards them. The Raja had left behind him, a wife, and his adopted son, who in the eyes of the natives, was as much his son as though begotten of his body. He was the son of the Raja's cousin, and had, consequently, a double claim to the throne. He should like to have satisfactory answers to these questions. The hon. proprietor concluded, by announcing his intention to review next court day, the conduct of Sir James Hogg.

The CHAIRMAN.—I shall not now enter at all into the merits of the case. I consider it a decided case. It has been decided in this Court seven or eight times, and I shall not now reopen it. But a little explanation is necessary on my part. First, the news of the Raja's death has just arrived, in a despatch from the Bombay Government, dated the 2nd of November. Of the fact of the climate disagreeing with the Raja we were unaware until mentioned by the hon. proprietor in this Court, when it was too late, as our despatches were just sent off. We should have had no objection to his removal had we known that his health was failing. On the morning after we heard of it, I wrote to the President of the Board, and he immediately prepared a despatch authorizing the Raja's removal to a more genial station. (Hear, hear.) I had never heard, until told by the hon. proprietor of the fact, that the climate of Benares is unhealthy. Indeed it is the general resort of Hindoos, thousands and thousands flock there. I was there myself some time, and I never felt any evil effects from the climate. I have said that I consider this a closed case, and I think I shall best meet this motion, with an amendment that this Court do now adjourn, as a courteous negative to a motion for enquiry.

The DEPUTY CHAIRMAN (Lieut.-Gen. Sir James Law Lushington, G.C.B.), seconded the motion for adjournment.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply to some observations from a proprietor, said, no information subsequent to the death of the Raja had been received, with regard to any arrangements that might have been made as to the retainers of the ex-Raja.

A PROPRIETOR producing a lengthy looking document, said he had committed his thoughts to paper, as he was not accustomed to public speaking, and hoped he should be allowed to read it.

The CHAIRMAN said he could read it as part of his speech, or, if he was unable, some friend would perhaps read it for him.

The PROPRIETOR commenced, but after a time,

Major OLIPHANT rose and said he thought it was unreasonable so to take up the time of the Court. It would be very unpleasant if every gentleman were to write out his speech, and then read it.

A further conversation ensued, in which the chairman recommended the proprietor to give his manuscript to the reporters, but this he declined to do.

Mr. CLARKE should vote for the adjournment, because he thought the death of the Raja had effected a great alteration in the case, and that it ought to be left to the Directors and the Board to see if any thing could be done. He thought it wrong to hold out threats to the Court of Directors if such or such a thing were not done. (Hear, hear.)

After a few words from Mr. SULLIVAN,

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON rose to speak on the amendment. An hon. proprietor (Mr. Clarke) had recommended the adjournment, but if he would carry his mind back a few years he would see how differently he had acted. They were told to leave it to the Directors. That had been done at the commencement of this case, and, within a week, thirteen Directors put their names to a despatch approving all that had been done. If the enquiry were refused, the friends of the Raja would be told in another place, you asked for an enquiry at the General Court, and it was refused. The hon. proprietor then referred to the conduct of Sir Robert Grant and Sir James Carnac, and stated that any opinion which had been adverse to the case had been founded on the memorable minute of Sir Robert Grant. He then referred in very violent terms to the conduct of Col. Ovens. The Court of Directors had suffered, he said, the Governor of Bombay to do that which the Queen dared not do. The hon. proprietor also asked why the Court had not brought an action against him (Mr. George Thompson)? Because they dared not do it. While he had breath and a seat in that Court he would demand an enquiry. Who concealed the letter of Major Carpenter which said the Raja was dying? The Secret Committee.

The CHAIRMAN reminded the hon. proprietor, that the members of the Secret Committee were not able, from the nature of the law, to defend their conduct when attacked.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON reiterated that the Secret Committee were to blame. He knew that the President of the Board had no objection to the publication of the papers which were in the Committee.

Mr. WIGRAM, as a member of that Committee, hoped the hon. proprietor would not shew his ignorance of the law so palpably. How could he tell what passed in that Committee, or whether the President of the Board was willing the correspondence he referred to should be published. If, as the hon. proprietor stated, the President did not desire the papers to be withheld, it was competent for him to write to the Secret Committee on the subject.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON made some personal observation in reply, in which the word "infamy" occurred, when

The CHAIRMAN, called the speaker to order. While he sat there he would not suffer such language. The conduct of the Secret Committee was above such language, which was totally unfit to be addressed to any gentleman. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON, however, continued to address the Court in the most violent language. The Court of Directors, he said, were, in their corporate capacity, murderers, perjurers; their conduct was infamous.

The CHAIRMAN again called the speaker to order, observing, I must tell the hon. proprietor that he is placing himself in the unenviable position of a public calumniator. (Cheers.)

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON resumed his denunciation of Col. Ovens and the Court of Directors; sixteen or eighteen of the Court, he said, had no opinion of their own, but blindly followed the chairman for the time being. He repeated, that in their corporate capacity the Court were guilty of murder.

The CHAIRMAN denied that the Raja had made reiterated applications for a removal from Benares.

MESSRS. CLARKE, WEEDING, and SULLIVAN made a few observations, the last declaring his opinion that Col. Ovens was not capable of anything dishonourable, but this was the first time the Court had allowed charges against one of their officers to remain unrefuted.

After some further desultory remarks, the Court divided. Messrs. Weeding and George Thompson being tellers. The latter proprietor, it was stated in Court, had no authority to vote, but he himself said he believed he had.*

The CHAIRMAN having called on Mr. Weeding to state the numbers, that gentleman said that, including in the minority Mr. George Thompson, whose right to vote was doubtful, there were

The Court then adjourned.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—DEC. 20.—Regina v. J. Charritie, Sir W. Young, Bart., and others.—In our last we published the proceedings on the first day of this trial, which concluded with the close of the case for the prosecution. We resume with the defence.

MR. CROWDER addressed the jury on behalf of Captain Charritie. I appear, he said, on the part of a gentleman who has now arrived, as I understand, at an advanced period of life. This prosecution has been conducted in a most strange and unusual manner. There seems to have been an intention of endeavouring to crush Captain Charritie by this prosecution. The East-India Company have resorted to a course of conduct most extraordinary in getting up this case. And now it is brought into a court of justice, I find against me an array of counsel which is most unusual on such occasions; for, not content with the services of the Attorney and Solicitor-General, of Mr. Clarkson, Mr. Peacock, and Mr. Forsyth, they have added also Sir Frederick Thesiger, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, and Mr. Wigram. This array of counsel tells me that it is the intention of the Company to carry conviction if they can. Of this, however, I should complain but little; but there is another matter of which I do complain, that the Company have not conducted this inquiry according to the constitutional and accustomed forms of law. The East-India Company erected themselves into a special tribunal, before which they brought those whom they suspected, and to that tribunal they summoned Captain Charritie and Sir W. Young. They summoned them, not to hear their explanations (for of that I could not complain), but for the purpose of sifting, by a most hostile cross-examination, the conduct of those persons, and with the view, after they had been so cross-examined, that every word of that cross-examination might be brought forward in this Court to secure their conviction. Captain Charritie was brought up before the Secret Committee, and it is said he was told, that he was at liberty to answer any of the questions which might be put to him by the chairman, or not. Of course, if he refused to answer, the conclusion would be that he was guilty, and having been so induced to answer some questions, he is then cross-examined by a most able and accomplished chairman, who had himself been at the bar. I have since made enquiries and I find that such is the fact. I believe a cross-examination was never more skilfully conducted than that by the chairman of the Secret Committee (Sir J. W. Hogg). Who was present with my client before that Secret Committee? The solicitor to the Company and a shorthand writer, and no one else. If the chairman had stated to my client what the charges against him were, and then allowed him to say what he had to say in explanation, and had then dismissed him, I should not have complained; but when the East-India Company erect themselves into a tribunal of justice, and cross-examine those whom they accuse in a manner never exceeded by the most hostile counsel in a court of justice, of this I do complain. It is a rule of law that you cannot ask a witness what letters he has written without letting him look at the documents. Any other course would be contrary to law; and yet such was the proceeding in the Court of Directors. For two hours Captain Charritie was cross-examined most rigorously, in a manner which was most unfair; and that cross-examination is now brought against him as the evidence which is to convict him. This is the main evidence against the defendant, for in these examinations are the admissions of the letters which could not otherwise have been given in evidence. Another part of the evidence is Mr. Wotherspoon. And who is Mr. Wotherspoon? Is he a witness upon whom a jury can be called upon to rely in giving a verdict against any human creature? It is clear that Mr. Wotherspoon is himself a delinquent, and ought to have been put in the place of my client. That is admitted by the Attorney-General; he could not dispute it. The charge is that certain patronage had been sold. Did Mr. Wotherspoon pay the money? He could not deny that, for it was proved that he paid it to Mrs. Stewart. What did he pay it for. You heard the shuffling and the prevarication of that man, how he wished to make out that he could not be guilty. If he did not pay money for receiving an appointment, the defendant could not be guilty of receiving the money. He says that he paid 1,080*l.* to Mrs. Stewart, and expected she would get him some appointment at the Horse Guards; and when I asked him why he did not write to Mrs. Stewart for the money, seeing that the appointment was in the East-India Company, what was his excuse? He said he did intend. "I thought I would ask her," said he; but he never did it. He paid the money in June, the appointment was obtained in November, and in January or February, Mrs. Stewart went to Boulogne. Did he ask for the money then? Not at all. Now, what is the excuse he gives? Why, that Mrs. Stewart had sent about 20*l.* worth of French things to his wife, and that account was not settled. So, because a trifling account of about 20*l.* is not settled, he delays asking for 1,080*l.* and that for several months! I ask you can you rely upon the evidence of such a man? Does he not also come here with a feeling that his son will be continued and not dismissed* if his evidence here to-day shall be found satisfactory? It appears that Mr. Wotherspoon paid the money to Mrs. Stewart, in the summer of 1844, by a draught upon Messrs. Jones, Loyd, and Co., and the Attorney-General undertook to prove that two of those notes which Mrs. Stewart received were paid into Captain Charritie's bankers by Captain Charritie himself, and crossed by his name. It has been proved that on the 26th and 27th of June, two sums were paid into Captain Charritie's account; a note for 500*l.*, and a note for 300*l.* That they came into his account is clear, for it is proved by the numbers of the notes; but who paid them to Capt. Charritie's account, is left without a tittle of evidence. The Attorney-General had hinted that Captain Charritie paid in the notes himself, and indorsed them with his name; but that is not the fact. The 300*l.* note was indorsed by the witness Cole, who proved that by looking at his handwriting. He said he could not tell from whom he received it; but he put it to Capt. Charritie's account. You will ask me how that was paid? You shall hear the account which Capt. Charritie himself gave of it in his cross-examination before the secret committee. It appears that Rallett was the person on whose application the appointment was obtained. There had been a connexion in business transactions between Capt. Charritie and Rallett, and because the money which had been paid to Rallett, and by Mrs. Stewart went into Capt. Charritie's account, was it to be inferred that it was paid in upon that unlawful account? The defendant, it appears, kept no books. I am not here to defend that, and I will not say that it is a wise mode of conducting business; but it is well known, that while some persons are most exact and particular in keeping an account of every shilling which comes in and goes out, others are equally neglectful. Capt. Charritie said to the committee that all his affairs were above board and referred the committee to his banker's book. On his second examination, on the 10th of November, his attention was called to the payments of 500*l.* and 300*l.*, on the 26th and 27th of June. If he had been a guilty man, he would have been much startled at that, but he immediately referred the committee to his bankers, Messrs. Martin, Stone, and Co., who would tell them everything, and that his habits were regular. He could not speak, he said, to the particular notes at that distance of time. He said, and the statement seemed very reasonable, that he could explain what value he gave for particular sums in his account, which he had received a few weeks before, but if they asked him what value he gave for sums which he received two years and a-half ago, he could not tell. Is that shuffling? It appears that on the 31st of May, 1844, 348*l.* was paid in to his account; on the 14th of June, 200*l.*; on the 26th, 500*l.*; on the 27th, 400*l.*, including the 300*l.* note; on the 16th of August, 348*l.*; on the 16th of September, 1,500*l.*; and large sums on other days. He is called upon in November, 1846, to account for sums paid in June, 1844. He cannot tell whether it was paid by Rallett, or by whom, at the distance of two or three years. He had had railway transactions with Rallett to a considerable amount, and it is clear that Rallett received the money from Mrs. Stewart; but will it be safe for you to assume that, because it is incapable of being explained, the defendant is therefore guilty! There is no other tittle of evidence showing that Capt. Charritie had received any of this money; but that he had done wrong, and that Sir W. Young had done wrong, is evident from the letters and from his conduct; though that will fall far short of the guilt imputed to him in this indictment. It is not even suggested that Capt. Charritie had had any communication with Mrs. Stewart—he did not even know her by name. It is clear that Mr. Wotherspoon and Mrs. Stewart were guilty of trafficking for the purchase of this appointment, and the result has been that for 1,080*l.* the former got the appointment, and his son went out to India. Mr. Trotter, in his evidence, says that he called upon Capt. Charritie, and requested him to obtain an appointment for a friend, and that that friend was Rallett; and Capt. Charritie said, that he obtained the appointment simply from friendship for Mr. Trotter. I say that this is true, and it has not been contradicted in any shape or way. Trotter received some money, and Capt. Charritie said, that he did not know that Trotter had received any; and now Trotter has sworn that he never told Capt. Charritie that he had received any until two years after. To some extent I admit Capt. Charritie was wrong. It was wrong of him to ask Sir W. Young to nominate a person whom he did not know. I will not attempt to justify Capt. Charritie's letters, the object of which was to conceal that wrong act. Capt. Charritie was asked, in his examination, what object there was in having a note from Sir W. Young, promising the appointment. The answer is satisfactory. It is, that he first mentioned the subject to Sir W. Young verbally, but did not at that time receive a promise; but afterwards he received that note from Sir W. Young, promising him the appointment in November. The reason why Captain Charritie went to Scotland was, that reports were in circulation that Mr. Wotherspoon had paid money for the appointment which had been made by Sir W. Young, and that it was about to be investigated; and as that appointment had been made upon his (Captain Charritie's) recommendation, it was natural that he should wish to ascertain the true state of the case. In his examination, he told the secret committee, that he advised Mr. Wotherspoon, if he had paid any money, not to deny it. In that he is at variance with Mr. Wotherspoon, who says that he cannot recollect that anything was said to him at Edinburgh about any money having been paid by him; but he will not swear that nothing was said of that kind. But I am sure, gentlemen, that you will not place implicit reliance upon that statement of Mr. Wotherspoon's. When Captain Charritie was asked whether he advised Mr. Wotherspoon to write to Sir W. Young in the terms of an old acquaintance, he admitted that he did; and he said that he did it for private and honourable reasons. He had brought Sir W. Young into this difficulty. He (Sir W. Young) had important patronage at his disposal, and he was bound to know the character, condition, and families of those whom he nominated; and Captain Charritie had been guilty of improper conduct in getting Sir W. Young to nominate Mr. Wotherspoon, jun., who was not known to either of them. This is a key to the whole of his subsequent proceedings. There was an attempt made to make it appear that Sir W. Young and Mr. Wotherspoon were old acquaintances, and Mr. Wotherspoon easily joined in that; but he now says that Captain Charritie wanted him to write the letter upon an old sheet of paper. He confesses that he did write such a letter, and Captain Charritie confesses that he suggested that improper act; but that is quite independent of having received any of the money paid for this appointment. (The learned counsel here commented at some length upon the rigid cross-examination of the chairman of the secret committee. He then continued.) This cruel and unconstitutional cross-examination is at last closed. The correspondence which has been read shows an attempt to screen the improper conduct of Sir W. Young in the distribution of patronage, but it goes no further. There is no evidence in it that Sir W. Young or Captain Charritie received one shilling of money. I will now call your attention to Mrs. Stewart's letter, in connexion with Mr. Wotherspoon's account of what his views were. He wished his evidence to be taken, that this 1,080*l.* was paid without knowing for what it was to be paid. He said he preferred the Queen's service. But what commission in Her Majesty's service would cost 1,080*l.*?—would the commission of an ensign? He says he made no inquiry. He trusted to Mrs. Stewart. He thought the appointment from the East-India Company was to be gratuitous. Why then, Mr. Wotherspoon, did you not ask Mrs. Stewart to give you your money back? I did intend, said he, but she went abroad. Upon your oath, I said, was she abroad in November, when the appointment was obtained? No, not till January or February. Did he inquire after her? No. And yet this man—a keen man, a man of that country, and such as you saw him in that box—this keen gentleman wanted us to believe that he waited to settle an account for the trifling sum of 20*l.* before he even asked for the return of the large sum of 1,080*l.* That, in the opinion of that Scotch gentleman, was sufficient reason for delaying from November to February without ever asking for the return of the money. Can you believe it? Can you believe what he says, that he trusted Mrs. Stewart because she deceived him so many times that he did not believe a word she said? I will now call your attention, gentlemen, to these little documents (the nomination papers). These documents are printed, but they contain blanks which are to be filled up; and I believe that, to some extent, a party who fills them up must read them. Even a woman or child would read some part; but that this gentleman,—this attorney—this Scotch attorney—this Scotch attorney of twenty-five years standing, when he is required to fill up a document by which his son is to obtain an appointment as a cadet, and for which he has paid 1,080*l.* out of his pocket, that such a man should execute a document of this kind without reading it is marvellous and incredible. See, gentlemen, how this paper is headed:—

"Notice is hereby given, that should it be discovered at the time the cadet is appointed, or at any subsequent period, that his appointment has been obtained by purchase, or agreement to pay any pecuniary or valuable consideration whatsoever, either directly or indirectly, when the appointment is completed, the cadet will not only be dismissed, and rendered ineligible to hold any situation in the East-India Company's service, under the Court's resolution of the 9th of August, 1809, but all the parties concerned in procuring the appointment surreptitiously, or in disposing of, or receiving the same under such circumstances, will subject themselves, individually and collectively, to a criminal prosecution for a misdemeanour, under the Act of the 49th Geo. III., chap. 126; and the Court of Directors of the East-India Company do hereby declare that they will prosecute any person or persons who shall hereafter be detected in such illicit traffic."

You, gentlemen, are presumed not to be so keen as lawyers; but this gentleman was a Scotch lawyer, twenty-five years in practice, and he tells you that he did not read one word of that caution. That, gentleman, was a pretty strong "caution," especially to a man who had paid more than 1,000*l.* out of his pocket. But there is another form which he was to fill up. He said that these blanks were filled up in pencil, and that that was the reason he did not read the printed portions.

"I do hereby declare, upon my honour, that I received the nomination of a cadet for the Madras Infantry from Sir William Young, Bart., gratuitously and expressly for Mr. William White Wotherspoon."

He said, that he should have said that he had not read one word of that, but for the last line, "being well acquainted with his character, family, and connections." What did he mean by that? Why, that he had read the whole. So that he signed the statement that he had received the appointment from Sir W. Young gratuitously, though he knew that he had paid 1,080*l.* for it. Here is another document which he was to fill up. It contains sixteen lines and twelve blanks. To fill up this form, even if pencil marks were made, he must have made out the sense; and yet he declares solemnly upon his oath that he did not read one word of that.

"I do hereby certify, that the foregoing extract from the register of births and baptisms of the parish of Edinburgh St. George, in the county of Edinburgh, contains the date of the birth and baptism of my son, William White Wotherspoon, who is the bearer of this, and nominated a cadet on the Madras Establishment by Sir William Young, Bart., and I do further declare, that I received the said appointment for my said son, William White Wotherspoon, through the gratuitous solicitation of me, William Wotherspoon, and that no money or other valuable consideration whatsoever was given to any person or persons who have interested themselves in procuring the said nomination for my son from the director above-mentioned; and I do declare, I am fully aware that if it should be discovered hereafter that the said appointment has been obtained by purchase, or by any other unlawful means, he will be subject to dismission from the East-India Company's service, and rendered ineligible to hold any situation whatever in the Company's service again.

"Witness my hand, this 16th day of November, in the year of Our Lord 1844.

"WILLIAM WOTHERSPOON,

"Writer or Solicitor before the Supreme Court of Scotland, Edinburgh."

If you, Mr. Wotherspoon, read that document, you signed your hand to a most deliberate lie, because you had paid 1,080*l.* to Mrs. Stewart. He said he did not think there was anything wrong in what he did, and he thereby confessed that he had paid the money for the express purpose of obtaining the appointment. Can you give credence to one single word of what is said by that man unless corroborated by other evidence? You cannot possibly believe evidence so false and so stained. The man who swears that he did not know that it was for the Company's service, is the same man who received this letter from Mrs. Stewart, in which she says, "It was out of Sir W. Y.'s power to give you a Bengal appointment, so few troops are required on that side of India, at present mostly all being for Bombay," &c. That shows clearly that Mr. Wotherspoon wished to obtain a Bengal instead of a Madras appointment, and that solicitations had been used by Mrs. Stewart to get the appointment for that presidency. It was on the 19th of October that Mr. Wotherspoon came to London, on the invitation of the East-India Company, and refused to make the statement which he was requested to make by Sir W. Young. Wotherspoon was examined before the secret committee, but we have not got his examination now before us, though it was the foundation for putting him into the witness box. Sir W. Young said in the first instance, that he had given the nomination to Mr. Wotherspoon, and afterwards that he had given it to Captain Charritie. That was blameable in him, and it was blameable in both to endeavour to stifle inquiry. That is "the head and front of the offending" of my client; and the evidence falls far short of proving that for profit and gain he obtained the appointment for Mr. Wotherspoon. After a few general observations, the learned counsel concluded his appeal to the jury.

[Here we are compelled to break off from press of matter. The remainder will be given in our next.—Ed. Allen's Indian Mail.]

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, JAN. 1.—In the Bankruptcy of William Nassom.—The bankrupt had carried on business in Calcutta for a number of years, and in 1844 entered into partnership with a Mr. G. F. Railey. In 1846 the partnership was dissolved, the bankrupt agreeing to quit the business upon receiving 50,000 rupees. His agent received 11,000 rupees, and the bankrupt contracted a debt of £320 with his former partner, still leaving more than £4,000 due to him. Soon after his arrival in this country the house in India stopped payment, and he became liable for all the debts of the firm, amounting to £10,289, and also on bonds and bills to the extent of £3,956. Seeing that there was no other mode of relieving himself than by means of this Court, a fiat was issued upon his own petition. Since he came to London he has been acting as a commission agent. The assets consisted of good debts due by his agent in Calcutta, £236, and what the bankrupt calls a "doubtful" debt due to him by his former partners, which, as his Honour remarked, would in all probability turn out to be altogether bad. The bankrupt alleged that the firm in India had, when he left it, a capital of £16,861, so that he was at a loss to account for its failure.

The accounts being clear, the bankrupt passed his last examination.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR GEORGE POLLOCK, G.C.B.—On the 17th ult. the freedom of the City was presented to this distinguished officer, who, in reply, said it was impossible for him adequately to express how deeply sensible he was of the honour done to him, in being presented with the freedom of the largest, wealthiest, and most important city in the world, and, he had pride in saying, the city in which he was born. To be welcomed by his fellow-citizens on his return to his native country, after an absence in a foreign clime for forty-four years, was most gratifying. How far he merited the encomiums bestowed on him, was not for him to say. He had had some serious and unforeseen difficulties to overcome at the commencement of his command; but, having overcome them, the men under him entered heart and soul into the cause. He felt they had to retrieve a somewhat tarnished name, and to do so it had been necessary to plant the British standard in the capital of the enemy, and to relieve their own countrymen. That was effected; and though for fifty or sixty miles they passed over the unburied remains of the fellow-soldiers so lately sacrificed, the conduct and forbearance of the army—as fine an army as ever was led into action—was most admirable. He adverted to this, because it had been said that acts of cruelty were committed there; but he, who was aware of every thing that occurred, knew of none. To have merited the approbation of his fellow-citizens would be the proudest recollection of his life.

GOVERNMENT OF LABUAN.—Mr. William Napier has been appointed lieutenant-governor of the Island of Labuan.

MESSES. LYSAGHT, SMITHETT, AND CO.—We are happy to hear that this firm will most probably resume business at an early period.

STREAM ACROSS THE DESERT.—Mahomet Ali's superintendent engineer has submitted to his highness a proposal to construct an engine, of 200-horse power, to convey 120 passengers, with their luggage, across the desert, between Cairo and Suez, in four hours, at the rate of twenty miles an hour, on the present road, without the use of rails. The engineer proposes to obviate the resistance of the sand by means of driving wheels of the diameter of thirty feet; and to save expense, offers to construct the engine and carriage at the arsenal of Cairo. This will reduce to a short and convenient passage of four hours what it now takes sixteen or eighteen hours to effect in heavy vans drawn by unmanageable horses.—Times, Jan. 4.

SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE IN CEYLON.—Mr. William McCartney has been appointed superintendent of police at Colombo.

ENGAGEMENT OF SHIPS.—The ship Windsor has been engaged for the conveyance of stores to Calcutta; and the Coromandel, for the same purpose, to Bombay.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Walker's Pronouncing Dictionary, and Exposition of the English Language; in which the meaning of every word is clearly explained, and the sound of every syllable distinctly shown; exhibiting the principles of a pure and correct pronunciation. To which are prefixed, rules to be observed by the natives of Ireland, Scotland, and London, for avoiding their respective peculiarities of speech, and Directions to Foreigners for acquiring a knowledge of the use of this Dictionary. A new edition, carefully revised, corrected, and enlarged. By R. A. DAVENPORT. London, 1847. W. Tegg and Co.

WERE it necessary for us to explain the nature of Walker's Dictionary, we could not do better than refer to its own copious title. But such an explanation is not requisite; and in noticing the publication of a new edition of a very original and popular work, it is no part of our duty to discuss its merits. Many years ago it asserted its claim to public patronage, and has since vigorously maintained it down to the present day. The improvements made in this edition are not inconsiderable. Above five thousand words have been added, and many additions and alterations of definitions have been effected. The key to the classical pronunciation of Greek, Latin, and Scripture names, is appended. There are many readers who would constantly consult a dictionary of a portable size, but who are terrified at the aspect of a thick folio or quarto, and to such this edition of a standard lexicon, from its portable size and great clearness of type, will be highly acceptable.

The Girl's Own Book. By MRS. CHILDS. Fourteenth edition. London, 1848. W. Tegg and Co.

THE present edition is very opportunely brought out for presents, for which purpose this book is nicely adapted. The great variety of games, charades, riddles, puzzles, and other sources of amusement for children, contained in this fiery-looking little volume, will be found very acceptable during the long evenings of Christmas holidays; and should any adult be tempted to look into this account of the penetralia of play, he may perchance find an explanation of certain words and phrases which may have caught his ear from the occasional opening of an adjoining room-door. The illustrations are very neatly executed, and we dare say that the fourteenth edition will not long remain in the publishers' warehouse.

The Works of William Cowper: His Life and Letters. By WILLIAM HAYLEY, Esq. Now first completed by the Introduction of Cowper's Private Correspondence. Edited by the Rev. T. S. GRIMSHAW, A.M. &c. &c. Vol. VIII. London, 1847. W. Tegg & Co.

THIS volume is principally filled with miscellaneous pieces, among which are the Olney Hymns, preceded by a life of the Rev. J. Newton, and a vindication of his doctrinal views, by the reverend editor; translations from Madame Guion's French Hymns, from Milton's Latin poems, and from those by Vincent Bourne, follow, and the volume closes with the poet's own Latin verses. The present volume brings to a conclusion this elegant edition of Cowper's works, and in noticing this fact, we desire again—and for the last time—to express the satisfaction and pleasure that we have derived from it. For eight months Cowper has been regularly brought to our notice, but now the link is broken, and we part as with an old and valued friend. Of his works themselves we have so frequently given our opinion, that it is needless to repeat it in this place. That which tends to give a greater circulation to the result of his inspired imagination must meet with the approbation of all who would wish a pure and elevating style of poetry to be cultivated, and therefore it is that we welcome this beautiful edition of Cowper's works—of the works of one who to the cultivation and advocacy of the amiable and good qualities that ennoble our nature, was

H. & T. PEAT, SADDLERS, HARNESS-MAKERS,
&c., No. 167, PICCADILLY, LONDON, avail themselves of the present opportunity gratefully to acknowledge the patronage which they have received for so many years from their numerous connections in India, and to solicit a continuance of that preference which it has ever been their endeavour to deserve. At the same time, they beg to state that, from their very severe losses, they are compelled to decline the execution of any orders unless accompanied by an order for payment (when shipped) upon some agent or mercantile house in London.

It is also necessary that the name of an agent at the presidency should be given, to whom the goods are to be consigned, as the utmost despatch will be used in the shipments from London.

H. and T. PEAT feel bound, in justice to themselves, to make it known that large quantities of saddlery, &c., bearing their name and address, which are not of their make, are sent out to India, and elsewhere, by other parties, and are of very inferior qualities. Gentlemen should, therefore, send their orders direct to H. and T. P. to ensure articles of their manufacture.

All military orders, whether Cavalry, Infantry, Staff, Artillery, or Engineers, will be executed according to the latest regulations, and a discount of 5 per cent. allowed for cash payments.

N.B.—H. and T. P. beg to recommend for durability their 10, 11, and 12 lb. saddles, in preference to the lighter ones of 7, 8, and 9 lbs., at present so much in demand for India; and likewise to observe that, in all cases where the goods are not insured, H. and T. P. cannot be accountable for any damage the same may receive after shipment.

DEANE'S GUNS.

IN manufacturing their GUNS, GEORGE and JOHN DEANE select none but the choicest materials, and employ no other than the most experienced hands. G. and J. DEANE's ambition has ever been to produce the very best Gun that a sportsman could carry into the field; and, among other principal requisites, they have always been determined that its shooting qualities should be decidedly and unquestionably pre-eminent. With regard to the workmanship, G. and J. DEANE only wish that what they turn out of their factory should be placed side by side with any other Guns purchased at whatever cost, or manufactured by any maker, however distinguished; G. and J. DEANE would have no fear as to what the decision of impartial and competent judges would be. G. and J. DEANE have now finished a very extensive stock of every bend, length, and calibre, of all first-rate quality. From these, gentlemen may, without delay, fit themselves, and try the shooting before they buy. Pairs of Guns made to order on the shortest notice.
Repairs of all kinds with the utmost despatch.

Perseusion-caps, wadding, powder, and shot, of the most superior qualities:
in all which articles sportsmen may effect a considerable saving, by transmitting their orders, accompanied by a remittance or town reference, to G. and J.
DEANE, Gun Makers, 30, King William Street, London Bridge.

PHANTASMAGORIA.

CARPENTER & WESTLEY'S PHANTASMAGORIA
LANTERN has been so much improved, and is used with such increased facility, that it may be recommended with the greatest confidence, as being the best that is made, giving a perfectly-defined figure, with a brilliant with the copper-plate sliders, it presents a novel and delightful mode of instruction and amusement. The Natural History and Astronomical Diagrams are painted in the very best style, and can be depended upon for accuracy and fidelity, and, with the Dissolving Views, are extremely popular.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL,
MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRAC-TORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced managers) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus preventing MILITARY and NAVAL OFFI-CERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAIL-ING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessities to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burthened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DE-PARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL.
THE SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. THE

The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," are "ROWLANDS';" and the wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS'" preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus—"A. BOOTS FOR INDIA.

J. TROY (late of STUNTS'), ANATOMICAL BOOT MAKER, No. 376, Strand, London, begs to acquaint officers and gentlemen in India, that he has discovered a new process in the preparation of leather for Boots and Shoes, which renders it soft and pliable as kid, and as durable as calf; it is not affected by any degree of heat, will take a brilliant polish by the common method of cleaning, and is free from that disagreeable creaking noise so often complained of.

T. TROY also begs to call attention to the fact, that bad fitting boots, however large, are not easy, but cause corns and swellings in the joints, which are very difficult to be got rid of. He respectfully states that his anatomical knowledge of the foot enables him to combine ease with neatness, and that he only requires the measure and description of the foot to insure a natural-fitting and gentlemanly-looking boot. His prices are moderate, and his goods of the finest quality.

DIRECTIONS FOR MEASURING.

1. The number of inches round the ball or joints of the foot. 2. The number of inches round the instep. 3. The number of inches round the heel to the upper part of instep. 4. The length of foot when sitting. 5. The length of foot when standing. 6. Round the calf. If there be any peculiarity about the foot, lay it on a sheet of paper and mark round it with a pencil, giving thereby its exact form; or, if an old boot can be forwarded, nothing more will be required to insure a good fit.

Prices.—Wellington Boots, of the prepared leather for India, 30s. per pair; ordinary, 28s.; Shooting Shoes to buckle, 18s. to 20s. per pair.

Orders to be forwarded to J. TROY, 376, Strand, London.

VARICOSE VEINS, WEAKNESS, FRACTURES, SPRAINS, &c.

HUXLEY'S SURGICAL CAOUTCHOUC ELASTIC STOCKINGS are now daily patronized by the leading members of the profession; their superiority over every other manufactured fabric, for artificial support, is admitted by all who inspect them; they afford an equal, comforting, and permanent pressure, on every portion of the limb, avoiding the excessive trouble of lacing; they are drawn on with the facility of an ordinary stocking, adding little or no size to the leg. The success that has attended every case submitted to them, through the profession or otherwise, has established the confidence of all the first practitioners. H. and Co. are therefore enabled to guarantee a comfort and support hitherto unknown in any other form of bandaging. It is remarkable that every kind of surgical stockings lately used have a tendency to impede the free and healthy action of the muscles, thereby producing relaxation and great diminution of the limb.

Only to be obtained at HUXLEY'S PARISIAN SHIRT WAREHOUSE, 5, Vere Street, Cavendish Square. Manufacturers of Patent Abdominal Belts. Directions for Self-measurement and the Articles forwarded by Post.

AGENTS IN INDIA.

Calcutta Messrs. Robinson, Balfour, & Co.
Madras Messrs. Line & Co.
Bombay Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, & Co.
Ceylon Messrs. Ackland, Boyd, & Co.

The following peculiar advantages are offered by this Company:—

1. Their policies cover the risk of living and voyaging over a far larger portion of the globe than do those issued by any other Company in existence. They allow the assured to reside in the Australasian and North American colonies, and at the Cape of Good Hope. They also allow to the assured for the whole of life one passage out and home to any of those colonies. For British India a very moderate extra premium is charged, and the premium is reduced to the English scale on the return of the assured life to England for permanent residence.
2. Premiums may be paid, and claims settled at Sydney, where there is a Board of Directors and Trustees; and at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, where there are Agents.
3. A third of the premiums may remain unpaid for five years; nor is it necessary for the maintenance of the Assurance to pay up the premium at the end of that time, but the unpaid thirds may remain as a debt against the policy, if the interest be regularly paid upon them as the renewal premiums fall due.

ANNUITIES.

The Annuities offered by the Company are on a more favourable scale than those offered by any other Companies, having been calculated with reference to the rates of interest obtainable on Colonial Investments. Annuitants also participate in the profits.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will shew the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 12th May, 1847, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums. This will be found a liberal reduction if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

R. WEDGEWOOD'S PATENT MANIFOLD

WRITER, established forty years, for copying letters, invoices, &c., in duplicate and triplicate. The invention completely supercedes the use of the ordinary pen and ink; it produces a letter and its copy at one operation, both as plain and indelible as if written with the blackest and most permanent ink, or, if required, a letter with duplicates and a copy, all in durable ink, and with a pen that requires no repairs. CAUTION.

TO OFFICERS of the ARMY in INDIA.—It having been discovered that a great number of spurious Drums, containing an infringement of the subscriber's patent, have been supplied to orders intended for the Patent Drums, Officers who are desirous of obtaining THE PATENT DRUMS are respectfully solicited to write, or to instruct their agents to apply, direct to the inventor and Patentee, CORNELIUS WARD, Musical Instrument Maker, 36, Great Titchfield Street; or to Mr. KÖHLER, Musical Instrument Maker, 30, Henrietta Street, London.

The patent construction of Drums is allowed to have perfected these instruments as to tone, timing, uniform simultaneous bracing, and stability. The Patent Drums are adopted in her Majesty's private band, by the Lord Chamberlain's Office, in the Royal Household Troops (including the Silver Drums), by many Regiments of Cavalry, Infantry, and Yeomany, by the Philharmonic Society, her Majesty's Theatre, M. Jullien's, and the principal Orchestras in the kingdom.

The important nature of the patent improvements in Drums has induced attempts to vend pretended improvements in Kettle Drums: the Patent Drums are braced and turned from one point, and experience has shown that simultaneous and uniform tension cannot be obtained in Drum-heads by means of more than one screw.

AN INJUNCTION was granted on the 15th November, 1843, by the Vice-Chancellor, to restrain Mr. THOMAS KRY, 20, Charing Cross, London, from making, using, selling, or exporting for sale, any Drums to which the patent improvements of CORNELIUS WARD, of Great Titchfield Street, London, are applied. All persons are therefore cautioned against selling, purchasing, or using Drums which contain any of the patent improvements, or in any manner infringe the patent granted for improvements in the manufacture of Drums, to C. WARD, 36, Great Titchfield Street, London.

TO FLAUTISTS.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON (SOLE MAKER of the CELEBRATED CHARLES NICHOLSON'S FLUTES), takes this opportunity to inform the Musical Public in India and the Colonies that he now also manufactures Flutes on the principle of the talented Flautist, JOSEPH RICHARDSON; therefore all future orders should state whether a "NICHOLSON" or a "RICHARDSON" Flute is required.

These instruments possess a remarkable brilliancy of tone, and are perfect in intonation and tune in every key; the superiority of style in the finishing department leaves nothing to be wished for by the connoisseur, and the plan adopted only by T. P. of seasoning the wood for extreme climates renders these instruments far superior to any others now manufactured.

The prices are the same as for the "Nicholson's" Flutes, and vary, according to their number of keys, from 11 guineas to 30 guineas; and purchasers, to prevent their being imposed upon, will receive a certificate, signed by the approver and maker, thus—JOSEPH RICHARDSON and THOMAS PROWSE.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or by an order through their agent in London.

It will be supplied with all the Leading Journals and Periodicals of the day, particularly those treating on India and the East generally.

EAST INDIA and GENERAL AGENCY, No. 127,
Leadenhall-street (opposite the East-India House).

W. M. BOYCE and CO. in returning thanks to their friends and supporters for the liberal patronage already bestowed on them, beg to intimate that their office are now established at No. 127, Leadenhall-street.

W. M. BOYCE and Co. continue to forward supplies and goods of every description to Messes, Families, and Individuals, on the most moderate terms, by the Cape or Overland. Passages to the Three Presidencies, or China, by sailing vessels, via the Cape, or by steam, via the Red Sea, negotiated on the most favourable terms.

Outfits for Officers appointed to the Civil, Military, Naval, or Medical Establishments in India, procured with every attention to economy consistent with the supplying of first-rate articles.

PAY and PASSAGES drawn and remitted to any part of Great Britain or the Continent. Luggage cleared and warehoused, and Parcels and Letters forwarded Overland to India.

In order to render their agency as efficient as possible, W. M. B. and Co. would call particular attention to the following points, which they consider of great importance, not only to their friends, but to the public generally.

It frequently occurs that gentlemen residing in India are compelled to send their wives and children home, and remain in India themselves. Circumstances often compel ladies and children to land in England without any one to receive and relieve them from the troubles and annoyances attendant on disembarkation, after a long and fatiguing voyage, and the clearing of their luggage through the Custom-house. In order to meet these cases, one of the Firm is prepared to attend any so situated, personally, and to escort them to their friends. Parties wishing to avail themselves of this accommodation, should communicate their intention, in writing, by the Overland Mail, in sufficient time to admit of proper arrangements being made for their reception.

Parents in India wishing to send their children to England for education, and unable to accompany them, may avail themselves of W. M. B. and Co.'s agency, who will undertake to receive them, place them at school, and act as guardians, if necessary. If requisite, reference can be given to parties who have already availed themselves of this arrangement. Inconvenience is often felt, and great expense incurred, in consequence of families arriving from India without having previously decided upon a place of residence. This may be obviated by timely application to BOYCE and CO., who are prepared to engage permanent or temporary residences for all parties arriving from India.

A residence of upwards of twenty years in India, the greater portion of which was passed in the East India Company's naval service, renders the head of the Firm peculiarly fitted for the business which is now sought, and which is merely reverted to here as a guarantee that the most scrupulous attention to the interests and wants of their supporters will be attended with the advantage of being able to impart, from actual experience, any information which may be required relative to India.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventive of the many diseases arising from check of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. This manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats; the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all irritating or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and the very general approval and consequent demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vigonia, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 152, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glenny undertake to forward them in dozens or half-dozen to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 78s. per dozen, and Ladies', 68s. per dozen; and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 18s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 18s. per dozen to Bombay.

OUTFITS TO INDIA, BY SHIP AND OVERLAND.

Every particular connected with outfits to India, both for ladies and gentlemen, including detailed lists of requisite clothing, uniforms, &c. &c. for every appointment, with the necessary variations for the outfits of together with every information respecting passage by ship and by the overland route, baggage, packing, &c., will be forwarded on application to Messrs. Thresher and Glenny, as above.

TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT.

From Alexandria to Suez, under direction of the Egyptian Transit Company, only 2 cwt. of baggage is allowed without extra charge, and no package of trunk should exceed 80 lb. weight.

THE REGULATION OVERLAND TRUNKS & CASES.

Manufactured by Thresher and Glenny especially for the TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT, and for the cabins of the eminent Oriental Company's steam ships to MALTA, ALEXANDRIA, and INDIA, can only be procured at their East-India Outfit Warehouse, 152, Strand, London.

All communications addressed to Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, 152, STRAND, LONDON, will have immediate attention.

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

There is some ground to believe that the British Government is not calculated to shake the empire, nor to excite the appetite of quidnuncs for excitement. In the present state of the arts of peace has superseded the pursuits formerly in the ascendant there. A sum equal to 30,000*l.* sterling is to be annually appropriated to the construction and improvement of roads, tanks, and canals, and the sum, it is stated, is to be doubled when the finances will allow. The European soldiers are busily employed in gardening, an occupation calculated to preserve both their health and their morals. The course of honour was flowing to the native chiefs somewhat profusely. Four great luminaries had been invested with the dignity of Rajah, and eight minor lights were to receive that of Rao. Some retrenchment of expenditure had been made, especially in regard to the royal stud, which has been docked, cropped, and clipped to some extent.

All eyes and ears were lately turned towards Oude and the results of the Governor-General's visit to that country. Of those results nothing, however, has transpired. All that is known is, that his lordship arrived at Lucknow, was entertained with animal combats and fire-works, had some interviews of ceremony with the King, and one at least of business. The sum and substance of the matter will be found in the following account, for which we are indebted to the Delhi Gazette :—

"On the 17th November the Governor-General made his public entrance into Lucknow, having been met by the king when about five miles from the city; the procession here awaited us, and was a most truly splendid one, consisting of at least two hundred elephants with silver, gold and silver howdahs, and the most gorgeous trappings richly embroidered in gold and silver. The tops of many of the houses, and all the windows in the city, were lined as the procession moved slowly along; in many places the walls of the houses were covered with the richest and most gaudy brocaded silks, and in some places carpets were spread in the streets. The procession having arrived at the palace, his Majesty, accompanied by the Governor-General, and followed by his numerous guests, proceeded at once to the beautiful breakfast-room, where a most sumptuous repast was laid out in the English style. Breakfast being ended, the Governor-General took leave of his Majesty, and proceeded to the Residency, which was prepared for his reception, and was entirely given up for the accommodation of his lordship and his several guests, during the time he remained at Lucknow. On the morning of the 18th the Governor-General had a darbar, which was attended by his Majesty and a number of his court. The magnificence of his Majesty's dress upon this occasion is beyond description, I must therefore leave it to your imagination. Breakfast was announced immediately after the darbar. On the 20th, a fight of wild beasts took place at his Majesty's palace, but this was a very tame affair, and not at all worth seeing. On the night of the 19th, the Governor-General gave a ball and supper to the station, which was most numerously attended, and dancing kept up to a late hour; and on the following day a sumptuous dinner was given to the station. On the afternoon of the 21st, the Governor-General visited Constantia, also the King's stud, where there were some fine horses, but all as fat as the stall-fed bullocks. On the afternoon of the 22nd, a short darbar was held at 4 p. m. for the purpose of leave-taking; at the termination of which his Majesty, accompanied by the Governor-General, and followed by his minister, the resident, and secretary to Government, retired to a private room, where they remained closeted for nearly an hour.

"The subject of this conference has not transpired publicly, but to judge from his Majesty's countenance when he came out, he seemed perfectly satisfied with whatever might have been the result, which no doubt will ere long be made known. The Governor-General then made some valuable and handsome presents to his Majesty, consisting of a silver howdah, and many other things of value too numerous to mention. His Majesty then took leave of the Governor-General and departed, with a royal salute.

"In the evening the Governor-General, attended by a large party from the residency, proceeded to the Emaum Baurah Palace, which, together with the garden, was most splendidly illuminated: in short the whole might be said to be one blaze of light; and certainly of the many sights that were witnessed during the Governor-General's visit to Lucknow, this might be justly considered the most beautiful. After a time the most brilliant display of fire-works took place, which closed the proceedings of the day, and I may add, of the Governor-General's visit to Lucknow, of which my pen is quite unable to give you an adequate description; suffice it to say that his Majesty spared no expense to do all honour to his visitor, and all was conducted with truly eastern splendour, such as may be read of in the Arabian Nights. On the following morning (the 23rd) the Governor-General, attended by his military and private secretaries, left the residency at 7 A.M. and proceeded by horse dak to Cawnpore by the new road, and reached Major-General Sir Joseph Thackwell's residence in five hours, where they remained until noon of the following day, and then proceeded to Allahabad.

"The Right Honourable the Governor-General, with Mr. Elliot, and the whole vice-regal suite, embarked at Allahabad, as originally arranged, on the 27th instant. He was at Mirzapore on the morning of the 28th, and at Benares on the evening of that day. We are told that his lordship's anxiety to be in Calcutta on the 10th proximo did not admit of any time to be wasted in visits of curiosity."

In GOOMSOORE there would seem to be still some disturbances, but of no great importance. The NIZAM's dominions are in their usual condition. Some discredit is cast upon the report of the NIZAM's brother having built up his wife and her slaves with the intention of starving them to death.

At CALCUTTA the commercial disasters in England and India continued to be the chief subjects of public attention. In addition to the houses named in our last publication, the following have suspended payment:—SAUNDERS, MAY, FORDYCE, and Co.; LAKE, HAMMILL, and Co.; HUGHESDON, BROTHERS, and Co. and EWING, ARD, and ANDERSON. At a meeting of the creditors of the first-named house (Saunders, May, Fordyce, and Co.) the following resolution was passed:—

"That a deed of trust and assignment be immediately prepared, appointing Mr. John Allan, Mr. W. Cadogan, Mr. W. Fergusson, and Mr. George Denman, as trustees to the estate, and vesting all its assets in the said parties for the purpose of their proceeding with all practicable despatch to realise the same, and as soon as 10 per cent. of the total liabilities shall have been got in, to declare and pay a dividend to that extent to all creditors joining in the trust, rateably according to their claims; and as often as further realizations, amounting in each instance to not less than 5 per cent. shall have been made, to pay over the same in like manner to subscribing creditors. The proportions of such creditors as may have failed to join in the deed of trust, to be paid into the Bank of Bengal in the name of trustees for the account of the proper claimant. It was also resolved that the winding up of the affairs of the concern should be intrusted to Messrs. May and Pickford."

A meeting of the creditors of SMITH, COWELL, and Co. had been held, whereat it was resolved that the house should continue to carry on business under inspectors, to which office Messrs. CADOGAN, KENSALL, and BROWN were appointed.

In BOMBAY no new failure has occurred, and, according to the Times, none is apprehended.

At MADRAS the storm seems to have been weathered remarkably well.

LOCAL.

MR. H. MONCKTON.—The eminent attainments of Mr. H. Monckton, in the Persian language, having been brought by the examiner of the college of Fort William to the notice of Government, the Hon. the Deputy Governor of Bengal has been pleased to confer on him a degree of honour, as prescribed by section XV. of the rules of the college.

CLASS OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, HINDU COLLEGE.—We are happy to learn that the long-talked-of and useful class of civil engineering has at last been formed in the Hindu College, by the appointment of Mr. Sutcliffe as professor of that science. It is scarcely necessary to offer any remark upon the benefits which this addition to the studies pursued in the Hindu College will confer on the country at large.—Hindu Intelligencer, Nov. 29.

MUSIC CLASS IN THE HINDU COLLEGE.—We understand that the music class in the Hindu College, which was suspended for about six months, is about to be revived, perhaps permanently, under its former professor, Mr. Harraden.—Ibid.

NEW MAP OF CALCUTTA.—The Englishman states, that owing to the many changes which have been made in the town of Calcutta since the publication of Major Schach's map twenty-two years ago, its value has been greatly diminished; and that Mr. Simms, the Government civil engineer, has in progress an accurate survey of Calcutta. A number of his assistants may be daily seen taking sights and observations in various parts of the town. The map will, we believe, exceed in accuracy and value anything that we have yet had of the kind in India.—Friend of India, Dec. 2.

GOLD AND SILVER MEDAL AT THE HINDU COLLEGE.—We learn with pleasure that his Honour the Deputy Governor of Bengal has communicated his intention to present a gold and a silver medal to the two best students of the Hindu College in political economy and moral philosophy, at the next annual distribution of prizes.—Hindu Intelligencer, Dec. 6.

SATISFACTORY POSITION OF THE FIRM OF CARR, TAGORE, AND Co.—It gives us great pleasure to be able to announce the safety of some of these here who may be supposed likely to suffer from certain of the failures recorded in the sad catalogue just received. The appearance of Rickards, Little, and Co. in the list has, as we know, led some to anticipate disaster to the house of Carr, Tagore, and Co. here, the first-mentioned firm having formerly been the correspondents of the latter, and many supposing that the connection yet subsists; it therefore gives us much satisfaction to be able to say that the connection betwixt these firms was closed as far back as 1843. We understand that Messrs. Carr, Tagore, and Co. have been fortunate enough to escape being concerned with a single returned bill.—Hurkaru, Dec. 8.

MOFUSSIL.

AGRA.—Commercial Matters.—It affords us much satisfaction to have it in our power to state on very good authority that the Agra Bank has as yet entirely escaped any losses from the late failures at home and in Calcutta, and we believe that we may say the same with a very slight qualification of the Delhi Bank. We may as well mention here, though it is a matter of little consequence, that Lord Hardinge's loss in the house of Cockerell and Co. does not amount to more than 3,000*l*. Mr. Larpet was of the Governor-General's party at Lucknow, when the intelligence of the failure of his house reached him, and left by dak for Calcutta immediately.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 4.

BARAN.—The Weather.—Weather as stated in our last—much dew yet.

—Military.—Her Majesty's 21st. foot, British North Fusiliers, marched in this morning, and halt to-morrow, on their way to the Presidency to embark for England.—Recorder, Nov. 19.

DARJEELING.—The Protestant Academy.—We are glad to learn that the Protestant Academy at Darjeeling is going on satisfactorily, and that the pupils have passed a second half-yearly examination with credit to themselves and their teachers.—Hurkaru, Nov. 23.

DINAGPORE.—Death of an Old Stager.—The following notice has been sent to us from Dinagpore:—"Died a short time since at the house of Bibee Kishori, the Tangon pony which was used by Mr. Hatch while employed as judge of zillah Dinagpore. Mr. Hatch left this about 1800; supposing the animal to have been sixteen years of age at that time, it must have been sixty years old at the time of its death. The Bibee Sahib, who is nearly 100 years of age, took the greatest care of it, and it was employed for many years at all the respectable Mahomedan weddings about the town and country in carrying the child or youth who was bridegroom." [Mr. George Hatch removed to Calcutta as second member of the Board of Revenue, in February, 1793; the pony must, therefore, have been nearly seventy.—Ed.—Friend of India, Nov. 25.

GWALIOR.—Command of the Contingent.—We hear that Col. Parsons, C.B., will succeed Brigadier Wymer in the command of the Gwalior contingent. A more popular appointment could hardly have been made.—Mofussil's, Nov. 16.

JOHANABAD.—Death of Lieut. Boileau.—The death of Lieut. and Adj. Boileau, of the 35th L.I., occurred at Johanabad, four marches below Benares, the corps being on route from Allahabad to Barrakpore.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 17.

JULLUNDHUR.—Military Item.—The 71st N.I. marched from Loodheanah on the 9th instant, for Hajeeppoor, but will remain at Jullundhur until relieved by the 37th M.I. from Musseerabad. The 70th will not, therefore, be relieved at Boodee Pind (Tanda) before the middle of January. The 14th irregular cavalry, Capt. J. Skinner commanding, have marched from Hansee, en route to the Jullundhur Doab.—Ibid.

KUSSOWLIE.—Appointment of Rector of the Lawrence Asylum.—We are glad to learn from an announcement in the Christian Intelligence for December, that the school at Kussowlie which is, we believe, to be known by the name of the Lawrence Asylum, is already supplied with a rector—the Rev. W. J. Parker, who arrived in the Southampton. The office of desoon was conferred on Mr. Parker by the Bishop of Calcutta the day before yesterday, and he is immediately to proceed with his family up the country. The short time that has elapsed between the first suggestion of an asylum for the education of the children of those who fell in the engagements on the Sutlej and the arrival of Mr. Parker, shews that this excellent undertaking has been prosecuted with unusual energy.—Hurkaru, Dec. 8.

MEERUT.—Dinner to the 27th.—Col. Norton and the officers of the 69th N.I. entertained Major Watt and the officers of the 27th on the evening of the 12th. About fifty persons sat down to dinner. After the cloth was removed, Capt. Sissmore rose, and said that he had been deputed by their worthy colonel to express his deep regret that he had been prevented being present upon such an occasion, in consequence of severe indisposition. Capt. Sissmore then proposed the toast of the evening, and took the opportunity of returning thanks to the 27th for the very kind and hospitable manner in which they behaved to the 69th in former days, and at a time, too, when such hospitality was of real service, inasmuch as they were in need thereof.—Mofussil's, Nov. 16.

—Daring Dacoits.—On Thursday evening last an officer proceeding dak was stopped near the Meerut burying-ground by about sixteen dacoits, and the contents of his pitarahs ransacked and strewn over the plain. One of the bearers in making his escape, and calling for assistance, came upon the mounted piquet of H.M.'s 9th lancers, who quickly went to the spot and captured most of the robbers.—Ibid.

NOORPOOR.—Command of the Detachment.—The detachment at Noorpoor is now commanded by Capt. Younger, of the 56th N.I.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 17.

PANIPUT.—March of the 55th N.I.—The 55th regt. N.I. reached Paneput on the 28th November, en route from Lahore to Naugong, but owing to a heavy hailstorm that took place late on the evening of that day, the corps were obliged to halt on the 29th. They resumed their march yesterday, and will be at Delhi on the 4th. From thence they proceed, via Muttra, Agra, Gwalior, and Jhansee, to Naugong which place they expect to reach about the 10th January.—Ibid. Dec. 1.

SAHARUNPOOR.—Post-office Fraud.—More post-office frauds have come to light, and the discovery will, it is devoutly to be hoped, have the effect of checking, if not putting down, an evil that tends so materially to shake public confidence, and is so seriously detrimental to the interests of Government. On the postmaster-general visiting Saharunpoor a few days since, he found the head writer absent; rightly attributing the circumstance to fear of detection, consequent on an intimation that he entertained suspicions that all was not right in the office. Mr. Riddell immediately communicated with the police authorities, who were not long in discovering the retreat of the culprit. The baboo had, however, in the mean time, taken so large a dose of opium that no hope was entertained of saving his life. He died on the morning of the 12th instant. On searching his house, several parcels were found,—one rifled of its contents, and a number of private letters.—Benares Recorder, Nov. 19.

—The same subject.—We alluded in our last to the post-office frauds at Saharunpoor; we have since then received further particulars which we publish, as they may serve as a useful warning to others. It appearing from the many letters that had been addressed to the postmaster, Dr. Heathcote, on post-office business, by the Postmaster-general and various postmasters, to which no answers could be received, that they must have been intercepted, it was determined, on Mr. Riddell passing through Saharunpoor a week ago, to institute a search in the houses of the writers, and also in the office itself. No less than 515 letters, 270 addressed to Dr. Heathcote as Postmaster, and 33 private, which appeared to have been suppressed to prevent inquiries being made after certain banghee parcels which the guilty man had stolen, were found. Of these parcels only traces of three could be found; the envelope of one originally despatched from Calcutta addressed to a native at Umballa, in which a few coral beads had been left; another which had been received at the office for despatch on the 27th of September, addressed to a native at Bahawalpoor, containing a khareeta, and some native medicine; and a tin case containing cards with an officer's name engraved on them, and a box of pills which had been opened. Ten of the letters had been opened, and many were in the original packet together with the chullans, which, it is supposed, the writer had taken out of the bags before they were carried to the Postmaster to be opened. The writer was paid five rupees a month extra to remain in the office during the night in order that the mail to Landour might be despatched immediately on its arrival, and he must have carried on his malpractices at that time. Many drafts and native Hoomdees were found untouched. With the exception of about a dozen, the numerous letters addressed lately by the Postmaster to other officers threatening to report them for not answering his letters, and to the Postmaster-general carrying those threats into execution, have been regularly despatched, a circumstance favourable to the supposition that the guilty party had no accomplices in the office, and his having poisoned himself confirms the idea. Three or four overland letters which had not been despatched (they had been enclosed in envelopes to the Postmaster's address) were also found; two of their envelopes had not even been opened. The man clearly had all the will, but certainly not the ability, to carry out his schemes of spoliation, or he would have got at least the native Hoomdees cashed.—Delhi Gaz. Nov. 20.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. WILLIAM WILSON CAMPBELL, H.M. 94TH FOOT.

Head Quarters, Simla, Nov. 4, 1847.—No. 88.—At a general court martial holden at Fort Saint George, on Thursday the 30th day of September, 1847, Lieut. William Wilson Campbell, of her Majesty's 94th regiment of foot, was tried on the following charge:—

For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the following instances:—

First instance.—In having, at Madras, dishonourably failed to pay, when due, the amount of a bill, dated Calcutta, 2nd February, 1847, drawn by him on Lieut. George Noble Bredin, of her Majesty's 94th regiment, in favour of Francis Robert Neilson, Esq., secretary to the Agra and United Service Bank, for Rs. 200, payable at 2 months after date; he, Lieut. William Wilson Campbell, having, for his own accommodation, dishonourably induced the said Lieut. George Noble Bredin to accept the said bill, without any valuable consideration whatever, by representing, and positively assuring him, that he expected a sum from England more than sufficient to pay the said bill ere it arrived to maturity, and that he would take it up and pay the same when due; such representation having no foundation in fact, and being intended merely to impose upon the said Lieut. George Noble Bredin, and get his acceptance to the said bill. In consequence of which failure of payment, as aforesaid, the said Lieut. George Noble Bredin was obliged to pay the said bill with interest, amounting to Rs. 205 8 annas 6 pies, on the 17th of May, 1847, in order to prevent legal proceedings being instituted against him, and to save his own honour and character, and which amount still continues due to him.

Second instance.—In having forfeited his word of honour as an officer and a gentleman, pledged in writing at Fort Saint George, Madras, on the 29th of June, 1847, to the aforesaid Lieutenant George Noble Bredin, that he would pay him the sum of Rs. 208 on or before the 9th of July, in the same year, in satisfaction, and payment of a promissory note for that amount, which he (Lieut. William Wilson Campbell) had given the said Lieut. George Noble Bredin, dated the 11th of May in the same year, at twenty days after date, and which he (Lieut. William Wilson Campbell) had dishonoured on its being presented for payment, notwithstanding such promissory note had been granted in order to indemnify the said Lieut. George Noble Bredin for the loss he had to sustain in having accepted the bill drawn on him by Lieut. William Wilson Campbell for Rs. 200, to which reference is made in the first instance of the charge.

The above being in breach of the articles of war.

MONEY MARKET.

Money, though tight, has not been scarce, and has been readily procurable on undoubted and easily convertible securities, as well as for operations promising extraordinary advantages. Great caution is, however, observed; and, except when advanced on Government securities, stringent terms insisted upon. Advances in deposit of Co.'s paper can be had at 7 to 7 1/2 per cent. A further fall of one per cent. has taken place in the value of 2nd and 3rd Five per Cents. 2 per cent. on Co.'s Fours, 1 per cent. on Sica Rupee Fours, while the Transfer Five per Cent. has advanced 2 to 3 per cent., and would be readily taken at 10 per cent. premium for remittance. The Bank of Bengal is full of funds, and it has announced its willingness to make advances on Opium scrip, a species of security which it has avoided for some years past.

CIVIL RETIREMENTS.—The following gentlemen in the Civil Service have accepted the annuities:—The Hon. H. Chamier; M. Lewin, Esq.; G. J. Waters, Esq.; W. Lavie, Esq.—Athenaeum, Nov. 80.

MESSRS. BINNY AND CO.—Referring to the stoppage of Messrs. Scott, Bell, and Co., which has been noticed by us in our summary of English news, we feel much pleasure in publishing the annexed circular from their correspondents at Madras, Messrs. Binny and Co., whose esteemed house is happily not at all involved by the event. We have already said that the suspension of the London house was likely to prove temporary, but even should it turn out otherwise, Messrs. Binny and Co. are secure from harm, nor will any inconvenience be sustained, we believe, by parties holding their drafts. &c. upon the suspended firm, as a letter from London acquaints us that they were at all events to be otherwise provided for, as the circular intimates. The numerous friends and constituents of the house here, will, we are sure, join with us in congratulating them.

"While we announce to you, with deep regret, the temporary suspension of payments on the part of our agents in London, Messrs. Scott, Bell & Co., we have the satisfaction of assuring you that the result will not be attended with any pecuniary loss to ourselves, and that our latest advices give us reason to hope that they would be enabled very soon to resume their business. At any rate, we feel confident that no inconvenience will be felt by any of the holders of our drafts or credits, as arrangements were in progress for their being taken up by other parties."—Spectator, Dec. 3.

THE WEATHER.—The sea was very high, and the surf-flag was hoisted all yesterday, but communication with the shipping was not entirely cut off. We have had no rain since Sunday last, but the weather has had a threatening appearance almost every day, supposed by some to indicate the breaking up of the monsoon. The barometer was lower yesterday than it has been since the middle of October. Thermometer almost stationary within doors at 76 deg.—Athenaeum, Dec. 11.

RETIREMENT OF MAJOR R. W. SPARROW.—We hear that Major R. W. Sparrow, of the 18th N.I., is about retiring from the service, in which case Capt. (Brev. Major) W. Russell, Lieut. C. H. Winfield, and Ens. B. Wyld, will respectively be promoted to the superior grades.—Athenaeum.

MOFUSSIL.

BANGALORE.—Departure of the 2nd N. I.—We understand that the 2nd regt. N. I. left Bangalore on the 16th inst., en route for Mercara. —Athenæum, Nov. 23.

CANNANORE, Dec. 2nd.—Military Relief.—The detachments of the 43rd regt. N. I., after being relieved by those of the 12th regt. N. I. have returned to this garrison.

—Dinner to Gen. and Mrs. Leslie.—The officers of H.M. 25th gave a farewell dinner last evening to Maj.-Gen. and Mrs. Leslie, to meet whom a large portion of the garrison were invited, on which occasion the whole of the fine suite of rooms composing the mess-room of the corps were thrown open, being duly ornamented with appropriate decorations. As far as we could judge, about fifty persons sat down to an excellent and recherché dinner; the coup d'œil of the table glittering with plate, and surrounded by the bright eyes of the fair guests, presented a most pleasing appearance. At the conclusion of dinner a few select airs were played by the excellent band of the 25th; and on the ladies retiring, the mess room was shortly after thrown open for dancing, which was kept up with very great spirit until one o'clock, when the guests, after partaking of refreshments, retired.

—Shipping.—The steamer Hugh Lindsay leaves this tomorrow evening, and conveys a party of invalids of H.M.'s 25th to Madras. The ship Malabar, Capt. Pare, is hourly expected.

—Inspection.—The inspection of the 12th N. I. by the major general commanding, terminated on the 22nd, and that of H.M.'s 25th on 29th ultimo. —Athenæum, Dec. 8.

MOMINABAD.—Brigadier Beatson.—A private letter from Mominabad, dated 14th instant, says:—"Brigadier W. F. Beatson, K.B.E., assumed charge of the cavalry division on the 5th inst., and arrived here on the 6th. He proceeds to-morrow on his tour of inspection, commencing with Hingolee, Ellichpoor, and Aurungabad. He will pass through this in the beginning of January, and review the 1st cavalry, and then continue his journey to Goolburgah and Bolarum. We have had rather more than the usual quantum of rain this year."—Ibid. Nov. 23.

MUSILIPATAM, Nov. 27.—Military.—The left wing of the 26th regt. left this place for Berhampore on the 25th ult., and the right for Waltair this morning; Major Halpin commanding the former, and Lieut. col. Johnson the latter. —Ibid. Dec. 4.

NEILLORE.—Heavy Rain.—A friend, who lately passed through the Nellore district, in a letter dated 27th Nov., says, in reference to the late heavy rains,—"I really never saw the country in such a state during the whole time I have been in India."—Ibid.

MONEY MARKET.

The Money Market continues in an easy state, but in consequence of the accounts which have been brought by the late mails from home of the great depression in trade, the exchange between the two countries has been materially affected, and a further decline, it will be observed by our quotations, has taken place. We have no change to notice in the value of investments.

DEATH OF CURSETJEE COWASJEE, ESQ.—We regret to announce the death of Cursetjee Cowasjee, Esq., a highly respectable and distinguished member of the Parsee mercantile community. This mournful event, which happened at 10 o'clock p.m., on Saturday, has been universally regretted by the Zoroastrians of Bombay, who have lost one of the most intelligent and influential members of the Punchayet. The deceased had been confined to his house for about one month under an attack of dropsy, which, though it was subdued for a time, shewed dangerous symptoms on Saturday evening, and eventually proved fatal. Cursetjee has left a large family, consisting of three sons and several daughters, who, together with a large circle of friends and relations, have suddenly been reduced to deep affliction. The deceased was a highly respectable and enterprising merchant, and was broker to the firm of Messrs. Macvicar, Burn, & Co. He was well known to many Europeans of this place, who highly appreciated his many good qualities. He had been for some time engaged in making preparations for the celebration of the nuptials of his children, when his lamented demise prevented the realization of his hopes. He was fifty-eight years of age. His nephew and son-in-law, Dadabhoj Rustomjee, Esq., has been appointed executor of his estate.—Telegraph and Courier, Dec. 6.

VISITATION TOUR OF THE BISHOP.—The Right Reverend the Lord Bishop left the presidency for Surat on Monday evening by the steamer Surat, on a tour of visitation in Goozerat.—Times, Dec. 8.

OFFICIAL VISIT TO SALSETTE.—The Hon. the Governor and Staff went yesterday to Salsette on a visit to Poway and its grounds.—Ibid., Dec. 11.

THE LATE HENRY BALDWIN HERRICK, ESQ.—It is with very deep regret that we have observed an intimation in Sam Sly's African Journal of the 7th Oct. of the death of H. B. Herrick, Esq., barrister, Clerk of the Crown, Bombay, at Cape Town, on the 2nd of that month. Mr. Herrick first came amongst us in 1838, and immediately gained the esteem and regard of his brethren at the bar. In 1843 he succeeded Mr. Campbell as Clerk of the Crown. In August, 1846, he obtained leave of absence to proceed to Egypt on private affairs; and was on the 12th October united to Miss Willis, the object of an early attachment. In November he returned to Bombay and resumed his duties. At no time of very vigorous health or robust habit of body, and suffering occasionally from those dispeptic disorders from which few men of such studious and sedentary habits as he was are exempt, it was not till May that any symptoms of an alarming nature made their appearance, when an attack of liver complaint, which left no chance to his medical men, compelled his immediate retirement from Bombay. With a man newly married, too liberal to be rich, the relinquishment of a valuable appointment was a matter of no small importance, and under other circumstances he was likely to have struggled on so long as there was any chance of his being able to remain—when the acting chief justice in the most handsome manner put an end to all difficulty on that score, by giving leave to Mr. Herrick to retire for whatever period his health required without vacating his office—Mr. Wallace being placed in temporary charge. He left this by the Madagascar in August, but his retirement was too late for his recovery; he died at the Cape on the 2nd of October, leaving a young widow, who had scarcely been a wife a year. Mr. Herrick was a man of much talent, and many and varied accomplishments. Thoroughly well versed in the Greek, Latin, and English classics, and on almost every point well informed, his favourite studies were mathematics and natural philosophy, and in these sciences, especially the former, he was a thorough proficient. He was a man of the most thorough uprightness and perfect probity—of a loftiness and purity of principle which viewed suspicion as a stain. He was warm-hearted and benevolent, and if frequent attacks of sickness, a temperament somewhat warm and impetuous, and a sensitiveness to matters which, in the common course of events, are overlooked by men of less delicacy of mind, occasionally kept him from mingling with society, he was full of the milk of human kindness and love for his fellow-men. His shyness was such, that his good qualities were known only within the limited circle of his friends. His demise will occasion much regret to all who knew him.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

BELGAUM.—Strange Occurrence.—Letters of the 29th ult. from Belgaum have been received since our last. A European, named George Mosely, had the day previous been forwarded to Bombay under charge of a non-commissioned officer of the Highlanders and a guard of sepoy. He had arrived at Belgaum a couple of months previous, and represented himself as the son of Colonel Mosely, on his way to Mysore. He is said to be of gentlemanly appearance, and speaks Hindoostanee fluently. The cause of his seizure and transportation to the presidency had not transpired, but it was surmised that he was a deserter.

—Military.—Parades and drills of all kinds were the order of the day amongst the military.

—The Weather.—The weather has become warmer than for a short time previous it had been. The atmosphere was cloudy on the 26th, and on that evening a slight shower of rain fell; while thunder and lightning had been heard and seen the two following nights.

—Health.—Very little sickness of any kind prevailed at the station.—Times, Dec. 4.

COLABAH.—Laying the First Stone of the New Church.—The beautiful and imposing ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the new Church of St. John at Colabah, was performed on Saturday afternoon, in presence of nearly the whole European community of the island, and an immense concourse of natives who had assembled to witness the gathering of the sahib logues.—Times, Dec. 8.

DEESA.—The Weather.—Advices to the 6th inst. have been received from Deesa. The weather was delightful; the evenings and mornings were very cold, and the heat during the day moderate.

—The Health of the Troops.—The troops were in the enjoyment of excellent health. Strange to say, the Matoonga guinea-worm had shewn itself in the troop of horse artillery, upwards of twenty Europeans and numerous natives having been laid up with it.

—Military Movements.—The head-quarter wing of the 86th foot was expected in on the 14th instant. The departure of the 28th had been much felt by the lovers of music, as the band of that corps used to play on the plain in front of their lines for the amusement of the station. The troop of horse artillery (the 1st) were about to commence their annual practice.—Times, Dec. 15.

FUTTYGHUR.—Effect of the failure of Cockerell & Co.—Letters from Futtyghur mention that owing to the failure of Messrs. Cockerell and Co. the crop of indigo seed would be a drug in the market. The quality, besides, was very inferior, having been damaged by rain after it had been cut and stacked. In the Doab, seed was offering at any price, and refused by the Banians. The ryots had in many instances been obliged to carry their stock home again for want of purchasers.—Times, Dec. 15.

MAZAGON.—Fire.—A fire broke out about 6 o'clock last evening in the timber-yard adjoining the Hope Hall Hotel and Mazagon police office. Some five months ago, our readers may remember, the very same timber-yard was totally destroyed by fire. It is generally believed that the fire of last evening was not accidental, but the work of incendiaries: whatever the origin of the conflagration, which commenced in that part of the timber-yard adjacent to the Mazagon road, the flames, aided by a pretty stiff breeze blowing at the time, spread rapidly, and it was soon evident that no human efforts could save the valuable stock of wood from total destruction. No exertion was spared to render the loss of property as small as possible. The senior and junior magistrates, and the superintendent of police, with Capt. Willoughby, and all other functionaries whose duty it was to be there, were early on the spot; a sufficiency of European and native constables, European and native soldiers, and officers, fire engines, and firemen, together with a sufficiency of water, were all present in good time. But in spite of exertion, the whole of the timber, when we left the fire, was consumed or in progress of consumption. The ground, which extends from the road by the police-office to the harbour, belongs, we understand, to Dadabhoy Pestonjee; the timber to a number of small merchants, none of whom were insured, and who have consequently suffered most severely by this visitation. Rupees 16,000 had been paid the day before the fire for a very small portion of the wood destroyed. The damage is estimated roughly at two lacs of rupees. A large bungalow at the end of the ground, belonging to Rustomjee Parsee, and tenanted by Mr. Matheson, was placed in the greatest jeopardy, and although not consumed by fire, is all but destroyed by water, and the manual destructions judged necessary at the time by the authorities and aids at the conflagration. It is, in fact, all but pulled down. Rustomjee estimates his loss at 50,000 rupees. Our own countrymen laboured most manfully last night. We saw Gregor Grant, Mr. Danvers, and many other gentlemen, hard at work. To Mr. Tanner and Mr. Mackenzie much praise is due, for their really effectual service, and contempt of danger. The late hour at which we are writing must be our apology for postponing further particulars until to-morrow. It is probable the flames will not be extinguished until to-night or to-morrow morning. No lives were lost.—Telegraph and Courier, Dec. 14.

PORCELL.—The Governor's Band.—The governor's band played in the Parett Gardens on the evening of Thursday, and though the important accessory of moonlight was wanting, the party assembled was numerous, and much delighted with the improved condition of the band, and the beautiful arrangements made in the gardens which had occurred since last fair season. It is, we believe, proposed to extend the gardens towards the north-eastern gate leading to the grounds, and to get rid of the present heavy stone walls which obstruct alike the air and view, and so bring the whole under the eye of the visitors to the grounds.—Times, Dec. 11.

SHOLAPORE. DEC. 6.—A Night Alarm.—You have doubtless long ere this heard of the aspirant calling himself Bappoo Sahib Shanaputtee, who has raised a force of 2,000 or 3,000 Arabs, his object being to take Sholapore. So numerous have been the rumours here concerning his intentions, that it was deemed necessary to issue orders to the troops, directing them to hold themselves in readiness to turn out at any hour of the night; and to the different guards to be on the qui vive whilst on duty. Since this order was given the troops have turned out twice during the night. The first occasion was in consequence of some thieves, who tried to rob one of the officer's houses, being fired on; and the second occasion was one which has caused many a hearty laugh: the facts I will now relate. The bandmaster of the 3rd cavalry had been giving a tea-party to some of his friends, from which a conductor and riding-master were quietly returning in their bullock-gharrees with lanterns; and as they were passing the Commissariat office they were challenged by the guard, to which challenge they say they replied. Whether the guard heard them or not is not known,—it is supposed not, for they immediately gave them such a volley (one of the bullets went through the body of the gharree), that the conductor and his friend had to jump out of it with all dispatch, and shelter themselves under a hedge. The gharreewan, not knowing that his insiders had cut their stick, turned the corner and drove on: the torch-bearers put out their lights and made themselves scarce likewise. Shortly afterwards the whole camp was in commotion, bugles blowing, drums beating, messengers running here and there and everywhere; in about half an hour the whole force, with Blake's guns, were in motion, and it was not until they had been drawn up in battlearray, and some troopers had been sent out to scour the country in all directions, that the cause of the alarm was learnt from the guard. But their description of it I must give you in their own words! 'Sahib, we saw twenty lights, and a body of men. They were challenged, but made no reply. When we pursued them, the men and lights suddenly vanished, so we suppose they were shytans.' The explanation is shortly this. The lantern-bearers put out the lights and ran away when they were fired on by the guard, and the bullock-driver, not being told to stop, turned a corner and drove home, which rendered the lights in the gharree no longer visible; hence the supposition by the guard that they had seen skytars. It is to be hoped we shall have no more such optical delusions.

The following amusing metrical version of this event is given by a writer in the Telegraph and Courier—the parody is a peculiarly happy one. The writer, who signs himself 'Vivida Vis,' dates his epistle the 7th instant, and prefaces it by saying: 'I enclose you an account of an affair that took place at this station a few nights ago; you must know that the authorities here have received information that a gentleman of the name of Bhala Sahib has collected above 2,000 men for the purpose of attacking this place—consequently we have been most dreadfully on the qui vive lately.'

At Sholapore the sun went down,
On quiet camp and peaceful town,
And each one careless laid him down
Of Bhala Sahib's vicinity.
But Sholapore at dead of night,
Beheld a very different sight,
When drummers awoke with all their might
To beat the long roll lustily.
3.
And buglers also lent their aid,
A most infernal din they made,
While each one hurried to parade,
And fell in with his company.
The officers all breathless came,
And answered every one his name,
And those who did not get some blame
For turning out so lazily.
By lamp and trumpet fast array'd,
Each homesman drew his battle-blade,
And various every charger neigh'd,
To join the dreadful revelry.
At length they all assembled were,
Captains and majors all were there,
The colonel too brought up the rear,
Attended by his orderly.
7.
The eager question now goes round,
What can have caused th' alarm to sound?
But yet no person can be found
To answer it with certainty.
But some there are who say they saw
Three hundred armed men or more,
Some of whom lighted torches bore,
And waved them high and fearfully.
The guard beheld them with affright,
They saw the foremost wave his light,
And challenging, as well they might,
They fired their muskets manfully.
Two troops of horse were ordered then,
To scour the plain and search the glen,
Accompanied by eighty men,
Equipped the 'light company.'
11.
The Adjutant this warning gave,
'Oh! all ye sepoys, stout and brave,
'Who rush to glory, or, the grave,
'Oh! let your charge be orderly.'
12.
At length the scouts were homeward led,
No foe had they discovered,
And every one slunk back to bed,
And snoozed till morning peacefully.
'Tis morn, the chiefs in deep debate,
Assembled at the Colonel's state,
As if the welfare of the state
Depended on their energy.
14.
But while they thus their measures take,
A message comes from Sergeant Blake,
Who waits without, complaint to make
Of insult to his dignity.
It seems that he had passed the even
With his friend Smith, and at eleven Returning home in gharry driven,
Attended by a mautsaulchee;
16.
When passing by a native guard,
They challenged, but before he heard,
Or could in answer give a word,
They fired upon him savagely.
17.
In vain he shouts relief to gain,
His shouts and cries are all in vain,
For thick as hail or pelting rain,
Fast rolled the volleying musketry.
At length their powder all was done,
He seized the time to cut and run,
And not half relishing the fun,
He reached his dwelling tremblingly.'

LOCAL LIEUT. R. FITZSIMONS, SCINDE CAMEL BAGGAGE CORPS.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Ahmednuggur, Nov. 12, 1847.—At a general court-martial assembled at Kurrachee, on Thursday, Jan. 24, 1847, and of which Lieut. Colonel Bradshaw, H.M. 60th Royal Rifles, is president, Local Lieut. R. FitzSimons, of the Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, was tried on the following charges, viz.—

R. FitzSimons, local lieut. and Q.M. in the Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, brought to trial on the following charges:—

First Charge.—For having, between Jan. 1 and June 30, 1846, when in command of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, embezzled or fraudulently misapplied the undermentioned quantities of grain and forage, the property of Government, entrusted to his charge for the use of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, viz.—

205,940 lbs. of bhoosa, and 8,330 lbs. of grain, being the amount of forage in excess of the quantity actually expended by detachments from the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, during the month of April, 1846; the bhoosa valued at Rs. 762, and the grain at Rs. 166, or thereabouts.

Second Charge.—For having, between Jan. 1 and June 30, 1846, when in command of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, embezzled or fraudulently misapplied the sum of Rs. 1,256, or a portion of that amount, the property of Government, entrusted to his charge for the use of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps—having fraudulently debited Government with the value of the undermentioned quantities of grain and forage, inserted as having been "received by purchase" in the returns of receipts and issues furnished by him, Lieut. FitzSimons, for the months of January, February, March, and April, 1846, namely,

2,908 lbs. bajree, valued at Rs. 90, or thereabouts.

2,500 lbs. of grain, valued at Rs. 113, or thereabouts.

40,000 lbs. of bhoosa, valued at Rs. 125, or thereabouts.

205,940 lbs. of bhoosa, valued at Rs. 762, or thereabouts.

8,330 lbs. of grain, valued at Rs. 166, or thereabouts.

Whereas the above-mentioned sums of money, amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 1,256, or thereabouts, were not expended as charged by him (Lieut. FitzSimons).

Third Charge.—For having, when in command of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, embezzled or fraudulently misapplied 169,040 lbs., or thereabouts, of bhoosa, the property of Government, received by him (Lieut. Fourth Charge.—For having transmitted with the cash account of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, for the month of April, 1846, a fraudulent document, framed to resemble a dealer's bill, and dated Camp, Sukkur, 1st May, 1846, for the sum of Rs. 5,681, 5 annas, and 7 pice, the amount stated therein to have been expended in the purchase of 161,569 lbs. of barley, and 794,994 lbs. of bhoosa, whereas the said bill is a fictitious voucher, prepared by him (Lieut. FitzSimons) with a fraudulent intent.

Fifth Charge.—For embezzlement or fraudulent misapplication of money, the property of Government, entrusted to him, Lieut. FitzSimons, on the public account, on or about the month of April, 1846, when in command of the 2nd division Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, in the following instances:—

FitzSimons) during that month, "as per bill," such bill being the fictitious voucher alluded to in the fourth charge, whereas no such outlay had been made as described in the aforesaid account-current by him (Lieut. FitzSimons), thereby defrauding, or intending to defraud, Government of the amount of Rs. 5,681, 5 annas, and 7 pice.

(Sd.) T. MAUGHAN, Captain,

Commanding Scinde Camel Baggage Corps.

Kurrachee, Aug. 18, 1847.

By order of his Exc. Lieut. General Sir C. J. Napier, G.C.B., commanding the troops in Scinde.

(Sd.) EDWARD GREEN, Major,

Assist. Adj. Gen. S. and B.

Head-Quarters, Kurrachee, Aug. 18, 1847.

Upon which charges the Court came to the following decision:

Finding.—The Court, having most maturely weighed and considered the evidence adduced in support of the prosecution, as well as what the prisoner has urged in his defence, is of opinion that the prisoner, Richard FitzSimons, local lieut. and quartermaster in the Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, is Guilty of the first charge.

Not guilty of the second charge.

Guilty of the third charge.

Guilty of the fourth charge.

Guilty of the fifth charge.

With regard to the value of the bhoosa set forth in the third charge, the Court find there was (as by document No. 36) 148,080 lbs. of misa bhoosa, and 20,960 lbs. of white bhoosa, issued by the commissariat to the prisoner, which, according to document No. 70, the Court values 148,080 lbs. of misa bhoosa at Rs. 925, 8 annas, and 20,960 lbs. of white bhoosa at Rs. 77, 8 annas.

Sentence.—The Court having found the prisoner guilty to the extent above stated, does adjudge him, the said Richard Fitz-Simons, local lieut. and quarter-master Scinde Camel Baggage Corps, to be transported as a felon for seven years.

Revised Sentence.—The Court, having taken into consideration the remarks contained in the Judge Advocate General's letter of Oct. 15, 1847, begs most respectfully to adhere to its former sentence.

(Sd.) J. BRADSHAW, Lieut. Col. and President.

(Sd.) R. M. HUGHES, Major, Dep. Judge Adv. Gen. Confirmed.

Head-Quarters, Camp Soopa, Nov. 11, 1847.

Remarks by the Court.—The Court begs most respectfully to state it feels itself compelled to adhere to its former sentence from the very serious nature of the charges of which the prisoner has been convicted, and that throughout the whole proceedings there does not appear to the Court the slightest extenuating circumstance to induce it to alter its opinion.

(Sd.) J. BRADSHAW, Lieut. Col. and President.

Remarks by the Commander-in-Chief.—Certain circumstances in this case induced me to direct a revision of the sentence, but the Court having adhered to its original award, and having assigned strong reasons for doing so, I feel it my duty to confirm it.

(Sd.) WILLOUGHBY COTTON, Lieut. General, Commander-in-Chief Bombay Army.

The prisoner, Local Lieut. Richard FitzSimons, is to be sent to the presidency by the first convenient opportunity, and delivered over to the town major of Bombay.

BOMBAY MARKET.

Since our last we have had a very steady market for imports, and we have now the further satisfaction of advising increased briskness, with every prospect of a gradual general improvement throughout the season. The Overland Mail from London of the 7th Nov. arrived here only this morning, and although the accounts are less favourable than we had hoped for, still there is nothing in them that can in the least degree affect this market.

Our produce market is in a state of great depression, and must continue so until more settled intelligence comes forward from Europe.

CHINA.

BALL TO THE OLD GARRISON.—The bachelor members of the Hong Kong Club gave a ball on Tuesday night (2nd November) to the old garrison, previous to their departure from China. The arrangements were on a scale befitting the occasion, and manifested a commendable anxiety on the part of the committee to carry out the wishes of the subscribers, that nothing should be wanting to mark the sense entertained of the soldier-like and social qualities of the gallant Royal Irish and 42nd Madras Native Infantry, in whom the place is about to sustain a loss which will not be soon or easily supplied.—China Mail, Nov. 4.

DISCOVERY OF THE MURDERERS OF MR. LOWRIE.—We are glad to learn that the Che-keang authorities have at length succeeded in tracing out the murderers of the late Mr. Lowrie, the American missionary, who, it will be remembered, about three months ago met his fate at the hands of pirates in the bay of Hang-chau, near the city of Chapoo.—Ibid. Nov. 18.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—The ship Brahmin arrived on the 23rd, bringing a detachment of Ceylon rifles, consisting of Major Cochrane, Lieutenants Greentree, McFarlan, and Teesdale;

Assistant-surgeon Tweddell, with 120 men, 12 women, and 5 children. Major Cochrane, we understand, returns to Ceylon by the mail steamer.—Ibid. Nov. 25.

TOTAL LOSS OF THE "ANN AND JANE."—From our Manila correspondent we learn that the ship Ann and Jane, of London, and bound for Hong-Kong, was totally lost on the island of Luban, at the entrance of Manila Bay, during a severe gale on the 7th and 8th instant. We regret to say that a passenger named Rogers, and the cook of the ship, were drowned. Mr. Rogers, we understand, was a native of Edinburgh. The captain and crew of the Ann and Jane have been brought to Hong-Kong in the Sea Witch, which vessel sailed from New York on the 14th August, and arrived at Manila on the 20th November; whence she departed on the 24th, and anchored in Hong-Kong harbour last night at 8 o'clock.—Ibid. Nov. 28.

OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE'S CONDUCT.—Some days ago the community was startled by a rumour that the Governor, acting under instructions from Earl Grey, was to institute an investigation before the Executive Council into certain allegations against the Chief Justice. The proceedings being necessarily private, it rests with the colonial minister to determine whether or not it would be for the interests of the public service to disclose the particulars. The proceedings have excited a very general sympathy towards the Chief Justice.—Ibid.

MANILLA.

SEVERE GALE.—Manilla was visited, on the night of the 7th, by a gale of wind more violent than any experienced here since the great Typhoon of 1831. The bark Amistad, schooner Metioto, Spanish brig Aristide, French ship Marie, and British brig Lady Margaret, were driven on shore in front of the town, but were all subsequently got off with trifling damage. All the ships in the bay dragged their anchors, and suffered more or less from the heavy sea. The reports from the provinces have not yet come in, but much injury to crops and disaster to the coasting vessels are anticipated. The effects of this gale may affect the prices of hemp and sugar, and the dealers in the latter are anxious to hear from the interior before making any large contracts. The Rob Roy (opium clipper) from Singapore, with 350 chests of opium, came in on the 13th in distress, with loss of masts, sails, &c., and considerable damage to her cargo, sustained in a second gale on the night of the 12th. In this no damage was done to the shipping in the bay, though the wind was very violent for a few hours.—China Mail, Nov. 28.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, January 25, 1848.

In a few days an event will, to speak in sporting phrase, come off, which will be a memorable one in the annals of the East-India Company. The case of the Rajah of Sattara, we need not inform our readers, is one which has for years afforded matter for fierce controversy. The Rajah is now dead, and it might have been expected that the memory both of his alleged crimes and his alleged wrongs would have died with him. But a General Court has actually been convened to reconsider questions which have already been discussed ad nauseam. What is to come of this resurrectionist movement, it is not easy to say. Whether or not a dead man should sit on the throne of Sattara would seem to be a very unprofitable subject of dispute. Suppose it be decided that he should, what is to be done? Are his remains, after being duly prepared to avoid unpleasant consequences, to be marched in solemn procession to the seat of his former power, and there solemnly placed on the musnud amidst salutes of artillery, and other demonstrations befitting such an occasion?

"And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoners without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth, though his bones be marrowless and his eyes lack speculation, sits again on the throne of Sattara. And this accomplished—what is to follow? Is there to be dance of the dead in the style of Bombastes Furioso, or is solemnity to be still the order of the day? Is the dead man to remain enthroned in sepulchral state, to receive the homage of his subjects, and exercise the rights of sovereignty under the advice of the British resident? This might not be a bad arrangement; for, far different the general run of native princes, the resident would certainly find the Rajah a very unresisting and persuadable person, neither openly rebelling against the advice given him, nor seeking to defeat its efforts by underhand intrigue. "Dead men tell no tales;" and dead men give no trouble to those about them. The plan is new; but if it should answer in this instance, it might be well to try it in others. Native princes, while living, are sometimes rather unmanageable—when dead they become powerless. Let the present incumbents of dependent thrones in India be declared incumbents in perpetuity,—not only in life but in death. When the common lot of man overtakes them, let their skeletons be invested with the rights formerly possessed by the living man. Much discussion has taken place as to the merits of the half-and-half governments which are maintained in some of the states in India; and it is the opinion of many that there are evils inherent in them which cannot be removed but by getting rid of the system. That which we are proposing would get rid of it in the quietest way possible, and would effect an important revolution without noise or disturbance. We admit we should never have thought of it but for the movement of the Rajah of Sattara's friends. As certainly as "when the brains were out the man would die," we had always imagined that when the breath was out the sovereign was defunct. Thus, however, do not think the Rajah's advocates. Of course they do not call a General Court for mere talking's sake. MARK ANTONY made an oration over CÆSAR's body, but he had a motive.
Now the king,"

"Now let it work; mischief thou art afoot, Take thou what course thou wilt."

Mischief must not be presumed to be the object of those who are disturbing the ashes of the Rajah of Sattara. They must in charity be supposed to have some purpose other than mischief, and what that purpose is, unless it be to restore the Rajah dead to that place which they were unable to obtain for him living, it is not possible to guess.

WHOEVER appreciates the importance of maintaining the character of the army in India must deeply lament certain occurrences which, within a brief period, have painfully pressed upon the public attention. Four officers have been convicted of dishonest conduct in regard to pecuniary affairs, while the insubordination and violence manifested by the men of various regiments of the Royal army have been altogether unprecedented. The causes of these afflicting facts we have not space to discuss, but it is highly important that they should be investigated by those to whose keeping the delicate trust of preserving our military honour is committed. It is indispensable that something should be done to prevent the recurrence of such circumstances—to maintain among the officers of both armies that high and chivalrous tone of feeling which is their proudest boast, and among both officers and men that spirit of implicit and cheerful obedience and those habits of strict subordination, without which an army becomes almost as dangerous to its employers as to their enemies.

THE mode in which the government of India is carried on is remarkable. It is one which no philosophic dreamer would ever have devised, but its practical effects have probably been far more beneficial than any which would have resulted from a more scientific machine. Extraordinary in itself, it is the creature of the extraordinary circumstances which have given to Great Britain the empire of India. When the East-India Company was exclusively a trading establishment, meetings of the partners therein naturally formed part of the system by which it was governed. Hence its General Courts, periodical and special. As its power extended, and its duties became more important, it was found necessary to guard those Courts from being made the instruments of selfish or ambitious men, for attaining their personal ends. All practicable care was taken to render them really exponents of the will of the majority of the proprietors of East-India stock. Without doubt, the provisions intended to effect this purpose have sometimes been evaded—men have now and then crept into the Court in the character of proprietors, whose qualification was purely colourable;—as persons get into Parliament who can hardly raise money enough for the hire of a cab to carry them there,—the law requiring a certain property qualification, which these honest persons are ready at any time to swear that they possess. Still, as far as the East-India Company is concerned, such cases have not been numerous. The attendants in General Courts have, for the most part, been bona fide holders of the stock which they professed to represent, and the impression that this was the fact has given to their opinions a weight and influence which the brawling of a set of roving demagogues could never have commanded.

At this time the direct power of General Courts is small. Their assent is necessary to give effect to a certain class of measures, but in all other cases they cannot vary any measure which has been determined on by the Court of Directors, and approved by the India Board. The power of the General Court is not, however, to be estimated by the amount of business in regard to which they have a direct veto. Their representations have always commanded great attention, and will continue to do so, unless the character of their proceedings should become such as to render them unworthy the respect of statesmen. So long as the opinion of General Courts can fairly be taken as the voice of the British Indian public, that opinion will rarely be uttered in vain. But if the courtroom should become but another National Hall for professional spouters and hireling grievance-mongers to mouth inflated inanities, and submissive listeners to give them effect, by voting as they shall be bidden by their interested and unprincipled leaders, the influence of the popular branch of the Indian Government will be at an end; its voice will be utterly disregarded, and it will sink into degradation and contempt. This fate it will continue more and more to deserve. When the place where English gentlemen were wont to assemble to discuss the interests of the most important dependency of their country, shall be only a stage whereon frothy mountebanks may advance their own, who shall regard what may be said or what may be voted there? To take part in the proceedings of such persons—to aid in such a mockery of public business—will be felt to be about as disreputable as to be the representative of a new metropolitan borough; respectable men will avoid the contamination of the society with which they would thus be brought into contact. Men of business will be unwilling to waste their time in gracing the triumphs of demagogues. These latter will be assiduous and unremitting in their attendance. It is their vocation—something they must do to entitle them to the wages for which they are content to let out their libellous tongues. But those who follow honest means of providing for themselves and their families, cannot afford to throw away that time, which to them is money. What will be the end of such a state of things? Probably this,—that the Legislature, becoming disgusted with the maintenance of a slander and sedition shop under the roof of the East-India Company, will refuse to tolerate it, and by statutory enactment will deprive the proprietors of East-India Stock of those powers of discussion and deliberation which, for a long series of years, have been so usefully exercised in their General Courts. Let the Proprietors look to this. If they value their ancient rights, let them bestir themselves to preserve them by determining that General Courts shall become what they ought to be, and what they once were—assemblages for the calm and decorous discussion of grave and important questions relating to India and its government—not meetings where men, too lazy to work with their hands, and too ignorant to merit any higher employment, may pick up the means of enabling them to avoid the visits of sheriffs' officers; and though scarcely able to spell the words which they utter, may stave off starvation by pouring forth torrents of venomous abuse upon all whom they are required to abuse by those who hire them. Such men have a double motive for performing their work zealously. They earn their pay thereby, and they have a morbid gratification in trying to bring down the characters of the honourable, the just, and the good to a level with their own,—or lower, if that were possible. But again we say, let the Proprietors of East-India Stock—let the real members of the East-India Company look to it. There is disgrace—there is danger impending over them,—and once more we say, let them look to it.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

BAIL COURT, Nov. 22.—In re Preston, an infant—Habeas Corpus.—(Before Mr. Justice Patteson.)—His Lordship gave judgment. It was an application on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Templar for a writ of habeas corpus, in order to have the son of Mrs. Templar by a former husband delivered over to a person named Allen. It appears that Mrs. Preston (now Mrs. Templar) was left in India with two children. The mother of Mrs. Preston's deceased husband was a woman of some property, living in England, and she made an offer to the widow to take the charge of the children and bring them up. Ultimately the child in question was sent over to the grandmother, who afterwards went to Germany, and left the child at a school there. She died soon afterwards, having made a will appointing Mr. Potts and Mr. Hutchins her executors and trustees of the property. The above-named gentlemen were also appointed trustees and guardians of her grandchildren, but the latter, of course, was not a valid appointment, because it was one which she had no right to make. It further appeared that, after her death, Mr. Hutchins, with consent of the other executor, took the entire charge and management of this particular child. After the mother had married again, a power of attorney was sent over, executed by her and her second husband, authorising certain persons to demand the child, and to make it a ward in Chancery. The affidavits stated that it was her intention to place the child under the care of a Mrs. Allen; but it was sworn that she (Mrs. A.) was not a proper person to have the charge of the child, she being a person who let out lodgings to people of a low condition. He had looked into the authorities, and did not find any instance of such an application being made by a person not resident in England giving a power of attorney, and he doubted very much whether the Court would allow it to be done. Sitting in a court of common law, and looking at the particular circumstances of the case, he did not think he should be justified in changing the custody of the child. The rule must therefore be discharged.

WESTMINSTER SESSIONS HOUSE, DEC. 3.—Robson and another v. the Queen.—(Before Serjeants Manning and Jones, and Messrs. Cooper and Mellor, Commissioners; and a Jury.)—This was a petition of right, presented to the Queen by Catherine Robson and Isabella Ainslie, claiming to be co-heiresses of Samuel Troutbeck, who died at Madras, 1785, and whose property had lapsed to the Crown through supposed failure of heirs.

Mr. M. D. HILL, who, with Mr. Anstey, appeared for the claimants, stated the case. Samuel Troutbeck was born in Wapping, in 1700. He was a member of a family which, in 1604 and previously, was settled at Bowness, on the Esk, in Cumberland. At 19, he and his half-brother Benjamin became seamen on board the King George, East-Indiaman. That vessel was wrecked off Sedras, in 1721, when the name of Samuel Troutbeck appeared in the muster-roll; his brother Benjamin was drowned. Having made his way to Madras, Samuel engaged in trade, and in the course of a long life realized a large fortune, amounting at the time of his death, in 1785, to £140,000. In 1780 he made his will, leaving his property to certain charities in Wapping. This will, however, infringed the law of Mortmain, and was consequently null and void. The usual proceedings in such cases were adopted, and no claimant making a good title, the property was, in 1816, handed over to the Crown, and was expended in building the Pavilion at Brighton. In the same year, a solicitor, named Derby, happened to mention that this property had been made over to the Crown. A female descendant of the Bowness Troutbecks hearing this, told Mr. Derby that a very curious document existed respecting the family, which was placed in the hands of that gentleman, and proved to be a "Narrative" written by a John Troutbeck. This document went far to prove the present claimants the next of kin, and shewed that their grandfather, George Troutbeck, was uncle of the testator; consequently the present claimants were first cousins once removed of Samuel Troutbeck, the testator. The author of the "Narrative," John Troutbeck, was also a first cousin once removed of the testator, being the great-great-grandson of the testator's great-grandfather, George Troutbeck, rector of Bowness. This John Troutbeck was a surgeon, and in 1771 went to Madras, where he made acquaintance with Samuel Troutbeck, and was received by him as a relation. In 1774 he again visited Madras, and then the testator made a will in his favour. Such being the case, John Troutbeck left a power of attorney in the hands of a Mr. Bromley, to act in case of Samuel's death. A dispute, however, arose between Samuel and John, and the former made a new will, leaving his property, as before stated, to a charity school in Wapping. The "Narrative" having in the year 1819 come into possession of some gentlemen named Wharton, they placed it in the hands of those whom they believed next of kin. The Court of Chancery having, as stated, paid the amount over to Government, a memorial was, in 1824, presented to the Treasury. After some delay, the Crown consented to re-open the case, and it was referred to a Master in Chancery. The Treasury solicitor greatly opposed the claimants, and set up a rival claim. Eventually, the Master declared the "Narrative" inadmissible; but in 1831 Lord Brougham held that it was admissible, and directed an issue to try the point. The writer of the "Narrative," John Troutbeck, had fallen into error in one instance; the father of the testator was Samuel, and he had a brother Benjamin, and the writer of the "Narrative" had confounded these two with the sons of Samuel,—Samuel the testator, and his half-brother Benjamin. It was clearly proved that Samuel, the father of the testator, had two brothers, Benjamin and George. The issue of Samuel's first marriage was Samuel, the testator. His second marriage was with the widow of his brother Benjamin; the issue of which marriage was Benjamin, the half-brother of the testator, and who was drowned in the wreck of the King George. George, the uncle of the testator, went to Ireland, and from him were descended the present claimants, being his grandchildren maternally. The issue directed by Lord Brougham was tried at York, and from various causes the verdict was in favour of the Crown. Four years afterwards, the counsel engaged in that issue for the plaintiffs signed a certificate of their professional and personal opinion that Catherine Robson and Isabella Ainslie were the next of kin of Samuel Troutbeck. This opinion was signed by Frederick Pollock (now Chief Baron), John Blackbourn, Thomas Starkie, William Brougham, and W. Loftus Lowndes. A motion was made before the Lord Chancellor for a new trial, but refused on technical grounds alone, the judge deeply regretting that he could not legally grant the rule. Since the trial at York, a most important piece of evidence had been discovered.

The executor to the testator Samuel was a Mr. Pelling. The grandson of Mr. Pelling was a Mr. Dent, who had made an affidavit to the effect that Mr. Pelling told him (Mr. Dent) that Mr. Samuel Troutbeck, in the course of their frequent interviews, had conversed with Mr. Pelling respecting his (Samuel Troutbeck's) relations, and that Mr. Troutbeck had mentioned three members of his family, namely, his brother Benjamin, who was drowned; his uncle George, who went to Ireland, and was grandfather of the present plaintiffs; and a John or James Troutbeck, Mr. Dent could not say which. Further; Samuel Troutbeck, the testator, stated to Mr. Pelling that he had frequently made inquiries respecting the descendants of George Troutbeck, his uncle, but could not find any; he added that, if there were any, they were his next of kin. Mr. Dent's affidavit could not be received in a court of law, from various reasons, which it would take too much space here to state. In consequence of the certificate of the counsel engaged at York, a reference was made to Mr. Ord and Mr. More O'Ferrall. Mr. Ord died before the result was published, but his report was afterwards laid on the table of the House of Commons, and was highly in favour of the applicants. In 1833, Sir W. Holmes said, "The fact is, you can't have the money; we have spent it." An appeal to the House of Lords for a new trial was then made, but resisted on technical grounds alone, Lords Brougham and Cottenham both favouring the claimants.

The remainder of the day was occupied in dry details of proof, and in the examination of one witness, Mrs. Hannah Bowles, a lady nearly 80 years of age, who had given Mr. John Troutbeck's "Narrative" to Mr. Derby.

Saturday was occupied in taking the evidence of the Chief Baron; Mr. Warburton, M.P., who had formerly brought the case before the House of Commons; Mr. B. Hawes, and Mr. J. Parkes, the newly-appointed Master in Chancery, and who was formerly an attorney, and conducted the case for some time.

Monday was occupied in hearing the evidence of Mr. Jones, the academician, and Mr. Wharton.

Tuesday was taken up in formal proof. The Commissioners, considering the form of a petition of right to be constituted for the satisfaction of the conscience of the Crown, decided on the admissibility of Mr. Dent's affidavit. A letter was handed in from Lord Brougham to Mr. Wharton, in which the writer stated that both he and Mr. Justice Littledale, who had tried the cause at York, were morally convinced of the justice of the claim now set.

On Saturday, the 11th, the CHIEF COMMISSIONER summed up. The petition of right, he said, originated with Magna Charta; previously to which, the Crown could be sued like one of its subjects. He then went through the pedigree set up by the claimants, in which they trace their relationship back to Sir Robert Troutbeck, who was perpetual curate of Newton, in Cumberland. It was an old custom, he said, to call curates, Sir, as in Shakespear there was Sir Hugh Evans and Sir Oliver Martext.* The error in the "Narrative" of John Troutbeck had been accounted for, and he considered it a most important document. After some further observations, the jury were dismissed to consider their verdict.

They shortly after brought in the following verdict:—

"We find that Catherine Robson and Isabella Ainslie are the next of kin and heirs at law to Samuel Troutbeck, the testator; and that the amount of the proceeds of the real and personal estates of Samuel Troutbeck, seized in the hands of King George the Third, by interest in the Three per Cent. Consols, down to the month of June last, amounted to £435,759."

CONSISTORY COURT, DEC. 15.—Deane against Deane.—This was a suit for divorce by reason of adultery, promoted by Mr. Henry William Deane against Louisa Anne, his wife. The parties were married at Calcutta in January 1840; two children were the issue of that marriage. Mr. Deane, a civil servant of the East-India Company, was stationed at Muzaffernagur; and Mrs. Deane and one of the children, being ill, went in 1843 to Missouri in the Hills, residing with Captain and Mrs. Bowles, the latter of whom was a cousin of Mrs. Deane. Among the visitors to Captain Bowles was a Cornet Travers, of the 3rd light dragoons. Mrs. Deane left Captain Bowles's house, and took up her abode at Cornet Travers's hut, where and with whom the act on which the present proceedings were founded was committed.

Dr. LUSHINGTON pronounced for the divorce.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—DEC. 20.—Regina v. J. Charritte, Sir W. Young, Bart., and Others.—At the conclusion of Mr.

* Another instance is furnished by the curate Sir Roger, in Beaumont and Fletcher's admirable comedy, the "Scurful Lady," recently so splendidly and successfully revived by Mrs. Warner.

Crowder's speech, Mr. Cockburn proceeded to address the jury on behalf of Sir W. Young. He said that Sir W. Young was between seventy and eighty years of age, and after serving his country under the East-India Company for a considerable period of time, had been honoured by that Company with one of the highest appointments they could bestow. For three-quarters of a century he had maintained a character of unspotted honour and integrity, and he was now beset by years, and brought by infirmity to the verge of the grave. They would therefore believe him (Mr. Cockburn) when he expressed the anxiety which he felt in addressing them on behalf of so old a man arraigned in a criminal court upon a charge of such a nature. He thought he would be able to show them that the case of Sir W. Young was essentially distinguished to that of Capt. Charritie. The latter was charged with having received money for the cadetship, and also with conspiring with other persons for that purpose; the former was charged with conspiring, and also with aiding and abetting the other parties accused. The jury would therefore bear in mind that Sir W. Young was not charged with committing this misdemeanour. He was charged with aiding and abetting his co-accused, not in committing the act, but in concealing it. This was a point to which he (Mr. Cockburn) wished their attention particularly to be drawn, because, however much it was to be regretted, it was in trying to conceal the share which other people had in these transactions that Sir W. Young was culpable, and there was not one tittle of evidence against him in any other respect. How did the prosecution propose to make out the charge against him? By his own evidence furnished at his early examination. He (Mr. Cockburn) had no right to complain of the present proceedings; they had been rightly instituted, and the East-India Company had only done their duty in that respect, for it was of the greatest importance to the public interests that the patronage of the Company should be administered without the suspicion of corrupt influences. Yet, while he admitted this, he did not approve the excessive zeal with which the prosecution had been carried on, and the manner in which the parties accused had been interrogated before the Secret Committee; the evidence given there being afterwards most unfairly brought to bear against them. This committee, this secret tribunal, unknown to the regular administration of the law, had brought suspected parties before them, and with none present but themselves, their secretary, their solicitor, and their shorthand writer, searched into the recesses of their inmost souls. He (Mr. Cockburn) would ask the jury whether in the whole course of their experience they had ever known a case where examinations had been conducted with greater severity than before that committee. (The learned counsel here drew the attention of the jury to the manner in which Capt. Charritie and Sir W. Young had respectively been invited to give their evidence before the committee.) There was nothing in the terms of the intimation made to Sir W. Young on that occasion which could have led him to suppose that what he then stated was to furnish the materials for criminal proceedings against himself. He (Mr. Cockburn) complained that no intimation was given to Sir W. Young that he might be a party implicated when they subjected him to such a process of moral torture. It was not the first time that prosecutions of the kind had taken place, but he believed himself justified in saying, that it was the first time that examinations of such a character had been sought to be made evidence against the parties, and that the East-India Company, arming itself with a power unknown to the constitution and laws of England, had used its great political power to crush persons accused by it on their own testimony. But for this inquiry and the searching interrogatories to which Sir W. Young was thus improperly subjected, not even the fragment or rag of a case existed against him. The Attorney-General had made it the ground of a charge against Sir W. Young, that he had not observed secrecy as to that inquiry, which was confidential in its character; but his learned friend the Attorney-General seemed to have taken a wonderfully one-sided view of the matter, when evidence, which was to be considered by Sir W. Young as confidential, was actually used upon a criminal prosecution against him by those imposing that condition. He hoped to be able to satisfy the minds of the jury beyond all doubt, that there was no ground for the charge brought against Sir W. Young, that he aided and abetted the other parties mentioned in the indictment in the corrupt sale of a cadetship. For this purpose it would be necessary for him to call attention to the facts, and to point out the distinction which existed between the case of Sir W. Young and that of Capt. Charritie. (The learned counsel here referred to the transactions of June, 1844, and to the relations which had for some time previously subsisted between Sir William and the captain.) The former, who was too old and infirm to transact his own business, had employed Capt. Charritie to act for him, who had done so with such fidelity and zeal that Sir William had promised him the next nomination. There was nothing in this to excite suspicion; yet, because the promise had been twice made, it was imputed by the chairman of the Secret Committee as showing a corrupt motive. With reference to all the other transactions in 1844 he had nothing to do; for it might be proved that Captain Charritie had received certain money, and from that fact they might draw the inference that it was for the cadetship promised by Sir W. Young, but there was not the shadow of a suspicion that any portion of that money had found its way to Sir William or was received by him as the consideration for that promise. Now, here was a great and powerful body, only less powerful than the government of the state, bringing its whole influence to bear upon this case, searching into every channel of information, inducing bankers even to submit the accounts of their customers for inspection. The accounts of Capt. Charritie were inspected behind his back—submitted by his own bankers, between whom and their customers he (the learned counsel) had always thought that confidence was to be preserved—and given to the company to be used by it at its will and pleasure in order to crush him. No punctiliousness had been observed, and if there had been the slightest shadow of evidence that any portion of the money had found its way to Sir W. Young, would it not have been produced on the present occasion? In 1844 would there have been more caution observed in the conduct of the transaction between Captain Charritie and Sir W. Young, than there was between Capt. Charritie and the other parties concerned? The jury, therefore, had this strong fact before them, that having the whole history of the transaction revealed in all its particulars, and the money traced into the hands of one of the parties, there was nothing that could lead even to the surmise that any part of that money had found its way into the possession of Sir W. Young. He (Mr. Cockburn), therefore, was at a loss to understand how, in the absence of such proof, it could be held that Sir W. Young could be made answerable. Sir W. Young, in giving the appointment to Capt. Charritie, was dealing with a man admitted to be on the most intimate footing with him, and who had been his friend for a long series of years. Capt. Charritie had no interest to screen Sir William at his own expense, yet the jury would find him taking upon himself the entire blame of that matter, because the man knew that he was bound in justice to tell the truth to the committee in that respect. It was said that Sir W. Young ought to be made answerable, because the papers confirming the appointment of young Mr. Wotherspoon contained an inaccurate representation, stating, as they did, that the appointment was given at the recommendation of old Mr. Wotherspoon, and not on that of Capt. Charritie. Did the jury, however, think that a director looked minutely at all these papers. Capt. Charritie filled them up, and because the statement in question, happened to be inaccurate, Sir W. Young was sought to be made a guilty party, under the present indictment. Nothing was better known than that a certain degree of laxity prevailed in such matters, a laxity which was perhaps to be avoided, but to which it would be fatally dangerous to attach any degree of suspicion. The principal delinquent in this case was Mr. Wotherspoon. The next was Mrs. Stewart, who was not to be found. Mr. Rallett and Mr. Trotter, there could be no doubt, had also been mixed up in the matter, but how they had been brought in contact with each other, had not been explained. The jury would observe, however, that not only was Sir W. Young not brought into contact with them, but there was no ground for believing that he had ever had anything to do with them. With respect to Capt. Charritie, it was far from being his wish to defend that man's case. It was to him a matter of indifference whether or not Captain Charritie participated in the transaction, but he contended that there was nothing improbable or unreasonable in Sir W. Young's giving the appointment to his friend and agent. He now came to the year 1846, two years later than the period to which he had been alluding. By that time, Mrs. Stewart had got mixed up in other transactions, and, in consequence, her conduct had been brought under the consideration of the authorities of the India House. She had been induced, it appeared, to let out the fact that she had paid money for a cadetship for young Wotherspoon, and thus the inquiry had originated. Among the first persons summoned before the secret committee to investigate the matter was Sir W. Young. He would not attempt to conceal that Sir W. Young, led on perhaps from one false step to another, had made unfounded statements before that committee, but no imputation of guilt attached to him in 1844, and any evidence which could possibly bear upon him under the indictment was utterly ineffective. He (Mr. Cockburn) would now ask the jury to consider whether there was nothing to account for Sir W. Young's conduct when examined before the secret committee? It was shown that he was a gentleman far advanced in years, and of a nervous temperament, which was aggravated by bad health. His mind, though not so obscure as not to understand what was going on, had become greatly impaired, not only from the above causes, but from having passed the greater part of his life under the burning sun of India. Having been informed that a piece of patronage which he had exercised had attracted suspicion in regard to others concerned in it, and that the irregularity of the papers signed by him in respect of that patronage might involve him in trouble, he was probably induced to adopt a course of conduct which he thought would put an end to all inquiry on the subject. He (Mr. Cockburn) did not wish to press unfairly or harshly upon Captain Charritie; he would say nothing of him which he had not said of himself, but he would say that the contrivance for stopping the inquiry and satisfying the committee proceeded from that gentleman and not from Sir W. Young. Captain Charritie could have had no object in taking the blame upon himself as he had done. He might have argued, that by throwing the guilt of the transaction on the powerful director he stood a better chance than by shielding him at his own expense; but he had not done so; he declared that he had been induced to do what he had done of his own accord, and had never consulted Sir W. Young. He (Mr. Cockburn) thought that he had now accounted for the motives which had actuated Sir W. Young, and it was in order to do so that he had directed his examination of the witnesses to the age and infirmities of Sir W. Young. He did not for a moment pretend to say that these considerations justified his conduct; but they afforded some explanation how a man who for seventy years had lived in the world without reproach should have allowed himself at last to be betrayed into a course of conduct which neither he himself nor those connected with him, could speak of without regret, or look back upon but with shame. He would ask the jury whether, from what passed before the secret committee alone, and with nothing to connect that evidence with the previous transactions, they were prepared to say that Sir W. Young had aided and abetted the other parties indicted? The statements which had been drawn from him before the secret committee had been extracted by the exercise of an inquisitorial power, one that should not be upheld by courts of justice administering the law upon sound principles, and he believed that evidence obtained by such unconstitutional means would be treated by the jury not only with a certain amount of discredit, but also with some degree of indignation. Why was it that the law of England prohibited the interrogation of a party accused? It was because it proceeded on the safe and salutary principle that a man in such circumstances was not in the entire and full possession of his faculties, and should not be subjected to any inquiry which might lead to his own inculpation. He asked the jury, therefore, to approach that part of the case with all caution, seeing that a power had been brought to bear upon the ordinary administration of justice, not only opposed to our law, but abhorrent to the best principles of justice in every civilized country. When the jury had considered the case against Sir William—when he showed them that, in the face of the world, he had maintained a character of the highest honour and distinction, he trusted they would come to the conclusion that the change now brought against him had not been made out. He (Mr. Cockburn) had mentioned his age and infirmities. He did not appeal to their commiseration and pity on that score, but he would ask them to take these things into consideration as accounting for that lamentable departure from truth which he was forced to admit. Sir William was advanced to a remote period of life, and stood upon the verge of the grave. At that very hour he awaited the verdict of the jury upon a bed of sickness, from which in all human probability he was never destined to rise; and when he (Mr. Cockburn) said that his anxiety was deep in respect of this case, he admitted that it was not so much in reference to Sir William, who would soon be removed from the present scene, as for the heritage of an unsullied name, which he hoped to leave behind him, and for that family to whom, in a very short period of time nothing but their father's heritage would remain.

The following witnesses to character were here called on behalf of Captain Charritie:—Captain Probate, Captain Porter, Captain Nairne, Mr. Hodgkinson, Mr. James Hutchinson, Mr. Edward Jones, Mr. Henry Scales, and Mr. George Stone.

The following witnesses bore similar testimony to the high and hitherto unblemished character of Sir W. Young:—Mr. Haddon, General Parkinson, Mr. Henry Martin, Mr. Henry Boulton, Colonel Anslow, and Mr. George Baker. There were many other witnesses in court, but they were not called.

The Lord Chief Justice, in charging the jury, said, that the indictment before them was one which charged Captain J. Charritie and Sir W. Young with a very serious offence. Capt. Charritie had evidently moved in most respectable society, and Sir W. Young's character was vouched for by the fact of his having been a director of the East-India Company for many years. As to the witness Wotherspoon, it was clear that he was an accomplice in the transaction, and that his testimony required confirmation according to the rules of law. Again, as to the examination of Captain Charritie and Sir W. Young before the East-India Company, observations had been made which gave an air of some mistrust to evidence so produced. He thought that there was considerable danger in any party trusting himself to conduct such an examination, who appeared to do so in a situation of authority, and he had always viewed with disapprobation the practice which existed in foreign countries, where the magistrate set his wits against the prisoner in order to drive him into falsehood. But he must say that the examination in question stood upon an entirely different footing. Whether it had been conducted throughout with perfect moderation, or whether too great a degree of acuteness as to particular matters may not have existed in the course of the investigation, might be doubtful; but that it was proper to appoint a committee to inquire into the corrupt practices alleged, no one could doubt. He knew nothing of more importance, if we wished to protect public morality, or to guard the honour of ourselves and our families, than to check by the whole weight of authority the existence of bribery and corruption in society; and when the East-India Company heard that such practices existed in connection with their patronage, it was highly necessary and proper that they should institute a full and searching examination. It did not follow that because a person was under a charge any advantage should be taken of him by such a proceeding, for he did not stand in the same situation as a poor ignorant pauper, who might be betrayed into admissions to the prejudice of his case. But what was the real state of things here? Sir W. Young, one of the parties accused, in his character as director was concerned in interest and honour to pursue the inquiry, and when called to attend before the directors, he (the Lord Chief Justice) would have thought that his most anxious wish would have been to press for the fullest information of every circumstance, and to make himself one of the directors' party, instead of considering that they were doing anything to his prejudice. It was very important to observe, that the inquiry in the India House, when Sir W. Young was called on to give information, took place nine days after the letter of the 12th of September, so that at that time he was aware that Captain Charritie was starting some scheme for him in order to stifle inquiry. He (the Lord Chief Justice) should have thought that such a proposition, made to a man in Sir W. Young's position, would have been treated with the greatest scorn and indignation. The more one heard of the character of that gentleman the more was his surprise that the offer of Captain Charritie had not been repelled by him, and that he did not give the fullest account to the directors of all that had been done by him. On the whole, it appeared to him that the inquiry at the India House had been conducted, he would not say in the manner that should be applied to all such cases, but in such a way as not to give any of the parties just cause of complaint. Sir W. Young, it was urged, was bewildered; but this could hardly be, as, on the 12th, he received notice of the intention to call him before the committee, and he was not examined till the 21st. Nor could he (the Lord Chief Justice) point to a single thing which it was possible to lay before a reasonable man, as shewing the state of fever and agitation which his mind was alleged to be in. There could be no doubt that a fraudulent attempt had been made for the purpose of setting up an untrue defence, and that not only Captain Charritie and Sir W. Young, but Mr. Wotherspoon, sen., also joined in that attempt. Mr. Wotherspoon had a case made out against him as much as the other parties, and he (the Lord Chief Justice) thought that few juries would think that he had not advanced the money for the purchase of the appointment.

The jury then retired, and after a few minutes' absence, returned a verdict of Guilty against Captain Charritie on the first and seventh counts, and of Guilty against Sir W. Young on the seventh count.

On the 13th instant, Mr. Cockburn gave notice that when the defendants were brought up for judgment, he should move for a new trial on the grounds of misdirection by the learned judge, and of the verdict being contrary to evidence.

Errata.—In a former number, the name of Sir Frederick Thessiger was omitted from the list of counsel for the prosecution. The name of the principal witness was incorrectly spelt Watherspoon instead of Wotherspoon.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, JAN. 19.—Venables v. The East-India Company.—The arguments in this case, which was opened on the 9th ult., were resumed to-day. The question raised related to executor survivorship, and was of considerable importance. The plaintiff was executor to one Lewis Tongue, and commenced the present proceedings to recover from the defendants 2,000*l.*, East-India Stock, the property of the deceased. To this demand the defendants pleaded that the plaintiff left a will wherein A. and B. were named as executors; that A. renounced, but B. took out probate: afterwards B. died, leaving A. surviving him. Letters of administration were then granted to the plaintiff, though A. had not renounced the office of executor since the death of B. To this there was a general demurrer, so that the question was, the validity of the letters of administration granted to the plaintiff on the death of B.

Mr. PEACOCK was for the defence, and Mr. BUTT having replied, the court took time to consider their judgment.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COIMBATORE COTTON AND ITS PROSPECTS.—In February last, the Commercial Association, through their president, Mr. J. A. Turner, addressed a letter to the East-India Company, suggesting that, as the improvement in the quality of the cotton grown by Dr. Wight at Coimbatore seemed to have been greatly owing to his having sown it earlier than the time usual in India, the experiment should be tried of sowing still earlier. The Court of Directors immediately forwarded a copy of Mr. Turner's letter to Dr. Wight, with instructions to try the experiment therein recommended. Dr. Wight did so, and letters have been received from him, stating with what success it has been attended. The plants on the portion of the land which he sowed in the latter part of May, instead of in July, as previously, were, when he wrote (the latter end of September), drooping exceedingly; he did not, however, despair of getting a second crop should the weather become more favourable than it then was. Indeed, during the whole season, the weather had been of the most unfavourable character; a much smaller quantity of rain than usual having fallen in July and August, whilst in September drizzly weather had come on, and spoiled a great portion of the crop in the pod. The experiment will, therefore, be repeated this year, in order, if possible, to test the effect of this system of cultivation in an average season; and at the same time the seeds will be sown on new land, in order that it may be seen whether the partial failure of the experiment last year has been at all caused by the soil on which it has been tried. Samples of the early-sown cotton, both of such as had duly arrived at maturity, and of such as had been damaged by the drizzly weather, have been received. The first description is considered as good as New Orleans cotton; while Dr. Wight states that he expects the other will be good second-rate cotton when it has passed through the gin.—Manchester Guardian.

DELAY OF THE INDIAN MAILS.—In consequence of the delay in the arrival of the last overland mail, the East India and Chinese Association addressed a letter to the Lords of the Admiralty on the subject. This letter contained three complaints: first, that in consequence of the Pacha having replaced the Erin, (returned damaged), the former, with the mails, did not reach Malta till the 22nd of December. Secondly, that by the contract these mails should have been dispatched from Malta to Alexandria on the 15th or 16th of December; and, thirdly, that the overland Bombay mail should have been forwarded by the French steamer. Such a course of proceeding, the association assert, being permitted by the postal convention. On the receipt of this letter, the Lords of the Admiralty forwarded a copy to the P. and O. Company, at the same time intimating their wish for an explanation. In the above complaints the company reply: first, that the Erin having been damaged in a storm, and returned for repairs, which would occupy ten days in effecting, the company transferred the mails to the Pacha, which reached Malta on the 22nd, and returned without cargo or passengers. By this voluntary act the company lost £1,500. Secondly, that they cannot command the winds and waves; and it was owing to a great storm that the mails did not arrive at Malta on the 15th or 16th instant. And, thirdly, that they are not aware of any convention by which British mails are allowed to be carried under a French flag. The conveyance of the Bombay mail between Southampton and Alexandria, being unremunerative to the company, will shortly be resigned by them.

Messrs. TRUMAN AND COOK.—A meeting of the creditors of this firm took place on the 22nd ult., when a statement of the affairs of the house was submitted. It showed the liabilities of the firm, to the present time, to be £319,790, and the assets £326,394. The house proposes to pay 20*s.* in the pound, by the following instalments, which do not, however, carry interest, namely, 5*s.* on the 18ths of January, May, and September, respectively, and 2*s.* 6*d.* on the 18ths of January and May, 1849, respectively. Messrs. Joshua Bates, Henry D. Blyth, and Eric Erickson were appointed trustees. Small debts, not exceeding £1,500 in the aggregate, were ordered to be liquidated in full. Mr. Cook and Mr. Windsor will conduct the business during liquidation. Rumours having been afloat respecting the conduct of the house, Mr. James Cook has addressed a letter to the editor of the Times (Dec. 23), in which he denies that he ever applied (as stated) to the Bank, or to two other bankers, for assistance; he also denies having exhibited a list of twelve houses whose suspension was certain if such assistance were refused.

Messrs. CARGILL, HEADLAM, AND CO.—It is with great regret that we announce the suspension of this highly respectable firm of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The cause of this proceeding is this: Messrs. Hawarth, Hardman, and Co., the Calcutta correspondents of the house, during the last season, drew to a very large extent on Messrs. Cargill, Headlam, and Co. The bills of the Calcutta firm were duly accepted, in the expectation of the produce forwarded by that firm arriving in this country and covering the amount drawn by Hawarth and Hardman. This, however, did not take place, owing to the great want of tonnage at Calcutta. There was no need of stopping at the present time, as the firm had received remittances to a considerable extent by the last mail; but feeling that they could not meet the bills which would fall due in a short time, they determined on the present step. To their great credit, it is stated that during a period of reckless and almost universal speculation, neither the partners nor the clerks held one single railway share, one bushel of wheat, or speculated in any other manner.

NORTH-WEST BANK OF INDIA.—A short time since, a set of bills of this bank were refused acceptance by Messrs. Glynn and Co., the London agents, a circumstance that excited some little attention; but it was discovered that the refusal was owing to a misconception of either the clerk or the party presenting the bills, and on this discovery being made, the bills were duly accepted.

THE CHURCH IN CHINA.—It is rumoured that a bishopric will be founded at Victoria, Hong Kong. The sum required is 20,000*l.*, of which 18,000*l.* is already collected, including 5,000*l.* to be devoted for the purpose of a college.

TRADE AT CEYLON.—The total value of all imports in Ceylon in 1845, was £1,464,787, and the amount of duty paid £111,861. The value of exports was £572,008, and the duty £32,561. The Custom's expenses were £9,256, of which £7,728 were fixed salaries.—Parliamentary Paper.

News.—Fraser's Magazine, in speaking of newspapers, states that "Hong Kong has its Gazette." We shall be obliged to the editor of Regina if he will favour us with a copy of the paper in question.

DIAMOND HARBOUR DOCKS AND RAILWAY.—It has been determined to abandon for the present the project of constructing docks at Diamond Harbour, and connecting them by railway with Calcutta, and the subscribers will receive a return of 3*s.* 6*d.* per share. The statement of accounts showed the receipts to have been 11,314*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*, and the expenditure 4,907*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.*, leaving a balance of 6,406*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

THE LATE LIEUT. WADE.—The Misses Wade, sisters of Lieutenant C. F. Wade, R.N., of the Diado, and who was killed in an attack on the Borneo pirates, have received 100*l.* from the Queen's Bounty Fund.

APPOINTMENT.—Walker Charles Metcalfe Plowden, Esq. has been appointed consul in Abyssinia. The appointment has been appointed, it is said, for the purpose of extending our relations with that country. Mr. Plowden will reside at Massoah, a port on the Red Sea, dependent on the Ottoman empire.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Savindroog; or the Queen of the Jungle. By CAPTAIN RAFTER, late of the 95th Regiment. 3 vols. London, 1848. Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans.

CAPTAIN RAFTER has selected a subject which is almost new to the reader of romances; but that he has made a judicious choice, few who read this work will hesitate to affirm. Savindroog pleases not only by its intrinsic merits, but also by its novelty; and in stirring scenes, characteristic sketches, and animated conversation, it need not fear comparison. Most of the descriptive portions are very well written. Among the best are the account of the tournament, in the second volume; the fulfilment of the prophecy against Kempé Goud, the Bheel chief; the flight of Kistna, and the beautiful Cashmerian fawn-eyed maid, Lachema. The death of the Charun, in the first volume, is strikingly told; we regret that its length prevents our extracting it. In his characters, Captain Rafter is peculiarly happy. The savage wildness of Kempé Goud is natural and well sustained, and the impetuous daring of Kistna well becomes him. The smaller characters of Lillah and Vega are equally well drawn; while Lachema, the Queen of the Jungle, is an exquisite portrait. We cannot stay to analyze the plot of this work, but must content ourselves with congratulating its readers on the dénouement, whereby Lachema becomes the happy bride of her devoted Kistna, and Kempé dies at the hands of Vega, from whom the Bheel chief has estranged the affections of Lillah.

From an intimation in the preface to these volumes, we learn that the writer does not intend to rest his literary fame on this work alone. Previously to his second appearance as an author, we desire to offer a word or two of advice: first, we may remark that the abundance of Hindustani phrases in the text, and their translations in the notes, be somewhat retrenched; and secondly, that in a book intended for general reading, a very strict supervision of its contents be exercised. We do not say this with any intention of detracting from the merits of these volumes, but only to put their author on his guard.

With a few extracts we shall close our notice of a novel that displays originality of design, shrewdness of observation, considerable reading and knowledge of character, and a happy talent in working out a rich collection of materials.

Our first quotation will be a noonday calm:—

"It was verging towards noon in the jungle, and the orb of day was holding its brilliant course through the heavens, shining with an intensity unknown except within the tropics. Limpid streams were sparkling down the rugged sides of the wood-covered hills, flinging their light and silvery spray from rock to rock, over which the graceful bamboo spread its feathery branches; while many-coloured flowers crowned the overhanging crags, waving, like the banners of elfin warriors, in the sluggish air. The coo!, or nightingale of Hindoostan, was nestling among the leafy bowers of the mango tree; and, while draining its rich nectareous juice, poured forth in hurried strains, as if inebriated, her soul-entrancing melody. The dove had taken shelter in a thicket of odoriferous shrubs, and was faintly cooing to his companion. The vulture was pluming his haggard wings, by the margin of a lake profusely overspread with the lotus. Overcome by the noon-day heat, the hawk had ceased to persecute the timid hill chirore;* and the crane, exhausted by the meridian sun, stood idly by the plashy rill, his watchful eye half-closed in sleep, and no longer searching out his finny prey. Even the fatal naga,† yielding to the sleepy influence of the hour, folded his terrific crest in unwilling truce; while the drowsy bee, couching in the hollow petals of the lotus, was humming himself to his mid-day repose."

The following is a description of an Eastern beau:—

"He was a gay and handsome youth as ever laughed at wrinkled care, or bent his knee in homage at the shrine of beauty. The excessive neatness of his dress and person, redolent of countless perfumes, confessed the anxious solicitude with which his toilette had been attended to. The darkness of his roving eye indicated the care with which the jetty kohol had been that morning drawn by the bodkin's point inside the lids; and his black moustache and curling beard seemed perfectly fresh from the experienced hands of his favourite hirjam.‡ Shining with oil of roses a zulf, or love lock, dangled behind the ear, sweeping gracefully from under the turban of the youthful hero, who wore a silken jubba, or mantle, covered with rich embroidery; under which appeared an ulkhauk, or vest of flowered chintz, sparkling with jewels. His graceful figure was set off in the very acme of Oriental daadism, by the tightly-girded shawl-cummerbund, which, while it compresses the waist, gives expansion to the chest and shoulders. A golden-hilted scimitar was suspended by silver links from a snow-white belt, or girdle; and his buckler, the manufacture of Sylhet, was covered with the skin of the rhinoceros, which by a peculiar process was rendered as clear and transparent as crystal: it was painted and gilt in the beautiful manner of Hindoostan, and it was further adorned with bosses of silver, richly chased and ornamented, and unstained by the toils of camp or battle. He rode a light-coloured charger, of the fleet and docile breed of Nejd,§ whose mettle he displayed with grace and skill in many a curvet and demi-volt, while every pace and action of the noble animal evinced his pure descent and gentle blood."

Our next regards jungle pleasures and pains:—

"Amidst the mighty labyrinth the sweet-scented Areka palm rears its slender and graceful stem; while the tendrils of the betel cling round it lovingly, and put forth their pale green buds as if grateful for the support. The broad-leaved plantain waves its rich satin foliage in the breeze, and offers its delicious fruit to the hungry wayfarer: the cooling tamarind, the milky cocoa-nut, the nectareous mango, and the gigantic pumbalo yield him a beverage unequalled by art and unsurpassed in nature; while innumerable birds, of varied note and plumage, cheer him as he explores the mazes of the jungle, with their simple but ever grateful strains. Often, however, amidst those sylvan shades, so favourable to solitary musing and unsophisticated enjoyment, some lurking snake or beast of prey invades the traveller's repose; or men, still more savage, pollute the calm and silent forest with scenes of rapine or of blood, that make humanity shudder at its own superior cruelty."

The following portrait scarcely accords with European notions of a divine, except with regard to the "direful penance" undergone by some modern ecclesiastics with respect to their bodily sustenance:—

"At the sound of the Brahmin's voice there issued from a neighbouring thicket a being of unearthly appearance and ghastly frame, whose wild and haggard look and glittering eye few could gaze upon unappalled. Round his lank and hollow waist a ragged cummerbund was loosely tied, between whose greasy folds the horn hilt of a dagger was visible: the rest of his body was naked. From his head his matted elf-locks descended in wild confusion; some twisted like ropes, and tied round his hollow temples, and others trailing on the ground. His beard reached nearly to his knee, tangled, matted, and filthy. His bending figure, gaunt and stark, was powdered with ashes; and his withered limbs displayed many a lasting token of direful penance by fire and steel."

Here is an account of the state of chivalry among the Rajpoots:—

"One of the most interesting customs of a singular people is that which prevails amongst the Rajapoot nation, of selecting a champion on the part of some princess or damsel in distress, amongst the cavaliers of her acquaintance. This is done by transmitting to him a rakhi, or bracelet, by which he becomes the Rakhi-band-Banú, or bracelet-bound brother of the fair; and thenceforward deems it incumbent on him to devote himself exclusively to her service, as her sworn defender on all occasions of difficulty or danger. The acceptance of the pledge and its return, is by the katchli, or corset of satin, or gold brocade and pearls; which, as defending the most delicate part of the structure of the fair, is peculiarly appropriate as an emblem of devotion."

The arrival of the "bracelet-bound brother," who is Kistna in disguise, and his interview with the "distressed princess" Lachema, is thus described. On the subject of lovers' eyes, the gallant captain speaks with an authority that would seem to indicate personal experience in such matters:—

"Trembling with indefinable emotions, the Yogie bowed his hoary head and raised his hand to his brow in a silent salaam. Words indeed were unnecessary; for the simple and customary action displayed, for an instant, a diamond bracelet on his wrist, which he pressed with adoration to his lips. One glance alone sufficed for the delighted Lachema: it was he! it was Kistna himself—her lost, lamented Rakhi-band-Banú! Then raising to his eager sight the portrait ring he had placed on her bridal finger, she turned it mutely toward to her breast. There is a spell in the eyes of lovers which, like the vivid lightning, flies with rapid glance from soul to soul; soothing all angry passions, and blotting out from the memory all former ills and sufferings. That spell had passed between the Yogie and the Fawn-eyed Maid, unseen, undreamt of by Kempé and the Bhaat."

One more extract, and we have done. It is the description of the firing of the jungle by Kistna, to avoid pursuit when fleeing with Lachema:—

"Patched and withered by the long continued heat of autumn, the reedy jungle, totally drained of sap and moisture, blazed with an intense though transient fury; and in a short space of time, of all the mighty mass which had extended for many miles around in every direction, the ashes alone now remained in smoking heaps upon the blackened earth. The wheels had altogether disappeared; the cries and groans of the sufferers, both brute and human, had partially ceased, or were only heard faintly and at intervals, as if too much exhausted to struggle longer with their destiny; and the smoke having cleared away, the delighted fugitives beheld at a short distance before them, crowning the pinnacle of its lofty site, the sacred temple of Mailcottah."

New French Grammar, with Exercises adapted to the Rules; comprehending, in a most simple, easy, and concise manner, every thing necessary. By F. C. MEADOWS, M.A., of the University of Paris. London, 1848. W. Tegg and Co.

At a time when French is spoken by every one, the publication of a new grammar requires no apology; and still less does Mr. Meadows' work stand in need of any "extenuating circumstances." He has performed his task in a manner highly creditable to himself, and without doubt profitable to the pupil. The exercises in English to be translated into French, at the end of the grammar, claim particular mention, from the circumstance of their being natural and idiomatic,—both qualities somewhat rare in French exercises or phrase books. The rules are very clear, and in all respects this is an excellent introduction to a knowledge of the French tongue, and may take its place by the side of the very best grammars existing.

Sketches of Protestantism in Italy, Past and Present. Including a Notices of the Origin, History, and Present State of the Waldenses. By ROBERT BAIRD, D.D. New York, Glasgow, and London. Collins.

This is a very agreeable work on a very interesting subject. We are accustomed to consider Protestantism and Italy as two terms that ought never to be brought into connection. Dr. Baird shews that this view is erroneous, and his retrospect of the efforts of Italian reformers during the earlier struggles of Protestantism, as well as his notices of the present religious condition of the country, the result of actual observation, will be found replete with interest. The author is a Presbyterian, and his peculiar opinions on this point, as is generally the case with his brethren, peep out sometimes rather unnecessarily; but this may be passed over, in consideration of the pains which he has taken to gather accurate information, and the generally judicious manner in which he dispenses it.

The Parlour Library, No. X. Memoirs of a Physician. By ALEXANDER DUMAS. Part I. Joseph Balsamo. Vol. II. London and Belfast, 1847. Simms and McIntyre.

THE second volume of this spirited and entertaining romance,—one of Dumas's best,—fully sustains the opinion which we expressed on the appearance of the first. To say that it shews great vividness of imagination is to say no more than what may be affirmed of all Dumas's works. We shall not by any explanation of our own forestal the pleasure which our readers will derive from the perusal of this novel; but we recommend such as desire a few hours' amusement to seek it in the "Parlour Library." One part of this work particularly deserves mention; namely, the explosion of the fireworks and the consequent retreat of the crowd of spectators. A better or more truthfully described scene we never read. The description of Rousseau's and Philip's search among the dead afterwards is also fearfully true to nature.

The Parlour Library. No. XI. The Emigrants of Ahadarra. By WILLIAM CARLETON, Esq. London and Belfast, 1848. Simms and McIntyre.

Or all subjects of existing interest, Ireland is the most pressing, the most inexplicable, the most appalling, and apparently the most hopeless. With a country fertile beyond most others—with a vast line of coast on which fisheries, the most abundant and most productive, might be established—with ports and harbours which seem destined by nature to become the seats of an extended and profitable commerce—why is Ireland poor, turbulent, and wretched? This question is pre-eminently the question of the day, and a work on such a subject, from so popular a writer as Mr. Carleton, cannot fail to command a host of readers; more especially when offered at the almost inconceivably cheap rate at which Messrs. Simms and McIntyre provide agreeable reading for those who must otherwise be content to forego this source of amusement. This work, it must be stated, is not a reprint, but an original production, written expressly for the Parlour Library. An immense sale only can remunerate the spirited publishers, and we sincerely hope that their efforts on behalf of the public may meet with the success which they deserve.

The Parlour Library. Extra Volume. The Count of Monte Christo. A Romance. By ALEXANDER DUMAS. In three vols. Vol. I. London and Belfast, 1847. Simms and McIntyre.

MESSRS. SIMMS and MCINTYRE have here added an extra volume to their very well-selected series of Fictions, of which some dozen works have already appeared in the "Parlour Library." This step has, we presume, been rendered necessary by the great success of the collection itself. The choice of the new work, the Count of Monte Christo, has certainly been most happy, it being one of the best romances of that most mercurial of Frenchmen, M. Dumas, who rules the destinies of the Théâtre Historique (no trifling task), shoots lions in Algiers, writes romantic reports of Spanish marriages, with equal sang froid, and, after all this, just pour passer le temps, finds time to challenge any one who may chance to differ with him on the very inconsiderable question of his (M. Dumas'), being bound by the usual laws of good faith.

From this work, and also from several of those recently issued from our own press, we suspect that the dashing and mysterious heroes of Lord Byron are to reappear, talking prose instead of poetry; as the Monte Christo of Dumas, the Sidonia of Disraeli, and one or two others we could name, are but skillfully varied versions of Lara and the Corsair; indeed Dumas has almost challenged this comparison in his description of the island in the Mediterranean, which at once recalls the Corsair's isle of Byron.

We shall leave the plot to our readers, merely premising, that such wonders are performed as a fortune, sufficient to make the De Rothschilds and the De Mosés turn yellow with envy, alone can bring about; and in recommending all our readers to procure forthwith this very fascinating book, we cannot do better than repeat a story current respecting the Novelle Héloïse of Rousseau. On the evening of the day on which this work was published, it was sent to a young countess, one of the beauties of the French court, at the moment she was about to quit her toilet for the brilliant saloons of a court ball. She opened the first volume; a few moments more saw her seated, eagerly devouring its contents. The ball commenced and ended without the presence of our heroine, and night melting into dawn, discovered the lady still seated, reading the last page of the book by the light of the expiring taper, and looking almost as white as the powder in her hair.

Now, though Monte Christo has nothing in common with the eloquent pages of Rousseau, except its power of fixing the attention, and perhaps M. Dumas and his literary coterie may think the work referred to very rococo, we have only done our duty, in order to warn Miss Smith or Miss Jones of the probable consequence of opening Monte Christo, just as Betty is about to announce that the fly is at the door to take her to the Wiggins's party, at Camberwell or Hoxton.

And that the conditions of the said contract may be had on application at the Secretary's Office, where the proposals are to be left, any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the said 2nd day of February, 1848, after which hour no Tender will be received.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, 19th Jan. 1848.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That a Special General Court of the said Company will be held at their House, in Leadenhall Street, on Wednesday, the 2nd of February next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at the desire of nine Proprietors of East-India Stock, as expressed in the following letter, viz.:-

"London, January 15th, 1848.

"To the Chairman and Directors of the East-India Company.

"Honourable Sirs,—We, the undersigned Proprietors of East-India Stock, duly qualified by law, request that you will convene a Special General Court of Proprietors, for the purpose of taking into consideration the accompanying resolutions, and that you will be pleased to publish the same with this our requisition.

"We have the honour to be, Honourable Sirs,

"Your obedient servants,

(Signed) "ROBERT J. BAGSHAW, JOSEPH HUME, CHARLES FORBES, J. SULLIVAN,
JOHN POWDER, ARTHUR JAMES LEWIS,
J. W. GRAHAM, GEORGE THOMPSON,
CHARLES GRANT.

"Resolved, That as the peace and security of our possessions in India depend mainly on the faithful observance of existing treaties, it is most important that the East-India Company should maintain all engagements with the native states with inviolable good faith and honour.

"That a treaty of perpetual friendship and alliance between the Hon. East-India Company and His Highness Maharaja Pertaub Shean, his heirs and successors, was concluded on the 25th of September, 1819, and afterwards duly ratified, by which, in consideration of the antiquity of the house of His Highness the Raja of Sattara, and for state reasons of paramount importance, the British Government agreed to cede perpetual sovereignty to him, his heirs and successors, the territory of Sattara, for the maintenance of his family in comfort and dignity.

"That His Highness, the late Raja, for upwards of 17 years governed his country, and fulfilled all the conditions of his treaty with the British Government in so exemplary a manner, that in December, 1835, the Court of Directors unanimously, with the sanction of the Board of Control, sent a sword of honour and a letter to His Highness, which letter was expressed in the following words:—

"Your Highness,—We have been highly gratified by the information from time to time transmitted to us by our Government, on the subject of your Highness's exemplary fulfilment of the duties of that elevated situation in which it has pleased Providence to place you.

"A course of conduct so suitable to your Highness's exalted station, and so well calculated to promote the prosperity of your dominions and the happiness of your people, as that which you have wisely and uniformly pursued, while it reflects the highest honour on your own character, has imparted to our minds the feelings of unqualified satisfaction and pleasure.

"The liberality, also, which you have displayed in executing, at your own cost, various public works of great utility, and which has so justly raised your reputation in the eyes of the princes and people of India, gives you an additional claim to our approbation, respect, and applause.

"Impressed with these sentiments, the Court of Directors have unanimously resolved to transmit to you a sword, which will be presented to you through the Government of Bombay, and which, we trust, you will receive with satisfaction, as a token of their high esteem and regard.

"With sincere wishes for your health and prosperity, we subscribe ourselves, in the name of the Court,

"Your Highness's most faithful friends, (Signed) "W. S. CLARKE, Chairman.

J. R. CARNAC, Deputy."

"22nd December, 1835."

"That notwithstanding this unexampled testimony to his merits as a sovereign and as a man, the late Raja of Sattara was deposed by the Government of Bombay on the 5th of September, 1839, for an alleged breach of treaty, and has recently died an exile at Benares, solemnly protesting his innocence, and never ceasing to demand, to his dying hour, the opportunity of proving it.

"That Major J. D. Carpenter, the officer who had the custody of the Raja's person, and was in constant communication with him for more than seven years, from the time of his arrival at Benares up to the day of his death, wrote his own deliberate opinion, when called upon, in his letter to the Governor-General, dated Benares, 25th May, 1846, in the following words (see Parliamentary Papers, No. 711 of 1847):—'To this end I carefully studied the whole of the voluminous documents connected with his (the Raja's) case, and the result was a belief in his evidence; and this belief I pledged myself to prove it (his innocence), if permitted to do so, in his letter to Sir Henry Hardinge, of the 12th December, 1844, forwarded through me, which pledge I am fully persuaded he (the Raja) is ready to redeem.'

"That it further appears that the whole of the late Raja's private property was seized, contrary to a distinct written pledge, under the hand of Sir James Carnac, Governor of Bombay, confirmed by three notes from Colonel Ovens, the political resident at Sattara; which property was never restored.

"Therefore, resolved, that considering the responsible functions intrusted to this Company by the Legislature, and having regard for the honour of the empire and the security and good government of the people and princes of India, the Court earnestly recommends to the Court of Directors to obtain the sanction of the Board of Control to the instituting of a public and impartial inquiry into the charges brought against the late Raja of Sattara, and into the manner in which the published evidence against him has been obtained, in order that the truth or falsehood of that evidence may be made manifest, and the British Government purged from the imputation of having treated the late Raja of Sattara harshly, illegally, or vindictively."

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, London, 12th Jan. 1848.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA

COMPANY hereby give notice, That the Finance and Home Committee will be ready, on or before Wednesday, the 26th day of January, 1848, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, to receive Tenders, sealed up, from such persons as may be willing to supply the Company with 200 Tons of Coal, of either of the undermentioned sorts, to be delivered at Point de Galle, in the Island of Ceylon, viz.:-

WEST HARTLEY COAL,
BUDDLE'S HARTLEY COAL,
DAVISON'S WEST HARTLEY COAL,
HARTLEPOOL WEST HARTLEY COAL,
STEWART'S WALLSEND STEAM COAL,

The Tenders are to be made according to a form, which may be had upon application at the Marine Branch of the Secretary's office in the East-India House, with Conditions annexed; and the Tenders are to be left at the Secretary's office at any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the 26th day of January aforesaid, after which hour no Tender will be received.

It is the wish of the proprietors that the MONTHLY TIMES should be acceptable to all classes of readers; and with this view its contents are varied so as to include every thing of interest to the soldier, the civilian, the clergyman, the lawyer, and the merchant.

Parties desirous of sending their friends an agreeable and useful gift, can order the MONTHLY TIMES of Messrs. SMITH, ELDON, and Co., 65, Cornhill; Mr. RICHARDSON, 23, Cornhill; Messrs. Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall Street; or of any respectable News-vender.

ROWLANDS' UNIQUE PREPARATIONS.

Under the special Patronage of Her Majesty the QUEEN, H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT, the COURT and ROYAL FAMILY OF GREAT BRITAIN, the several Sovereigns and Courts of Europe, and universally preferred and esteemed.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.—The unprecedented success of this discovery in restoring, improving, and beautifying the Human Hair, is too well known and appreciated to need comment. The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, and the high esteem in which this Oil is universally held, together with numerous testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proof of its merits.

ROWLANDS' HAIR WASH.—A preparation from the choicest Oriental Herbs, of peculiarly mild and detestive properties. It pleasantly and effectually cleanses the Hair and Skin of the Head from Scurf and every species of impurity, and imparts a delicate fragrance.—3s. 6d. per bottle.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.—An Oriental Balsamic Preparation of singular efficacy in thoroughly purifying the Skin from all Pimples, Spots, Blotches, Redness, Freckles, Tan, and Discolorations; in producing a healthy freshness and transparency of Complexion, and a softness and delicacy of the Skin. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Beware of spurious KALYDORS, which contain mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the complexion, and by their repellent action endanger health.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a white Powder for the Teeth, compounded of the choicest and most recherché ingredients of the Oriental Herbal, of inestimable virtue in preserving and beautifying the Teeth, strengthening the Gums, and in giving sweetness and perfume to the Breath.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

ROWLANDS' ALSANA EXTRACT, for the Tooth-ache, Gum-boils, and Swelled Face, and which, by constantly using, prevents those maladies. In the anguish of excruciating pain, it affords instantaneous relief. Perfectly innocent in its nature.—8s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. per bottle.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, who, to compounds of their own manufacture, give the titles of "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," some under the implied sanction of Royalty and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at deception, while they copy the Labels, Hills, Advertisements, and Testimonials (substituting fictitious names and addresses for the real and the original preparations). The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," "ROWLANDS'" and the wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS'" preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

IMPORTANT PATENT IMPROVEMENT in CHRONOMETERS and WATCHES.—E. J. DENT, 82, Strand, and 33, Cockspur Street, by special appointment Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Queen and H. R. H. Prince Albert, and who obtained the high distinction of receiving the Government Reward for the unparalleled performance of the best Chronometer ever submitted to twelve months' public trial, begs to acquaint the public that the manufacture of his Watches, Chronometers, and Clocks is secured to him by three separate patents, respectively granted in 1836, 1840, and 1842.—Silver Lever Watches, jewelled in four holes, £6 6s. each; in gold cases, from £8 to £10 extra.—Gold Horizontal Watches, with gold dials, from £8 8s. to £12 12s. each.—DENT'S "Appendix" to his recent work on "Time-keepers" is now ready for circulation.

WORTHY OF PUBLIC ATTENTION!!!

CHAPMAN'S UNIVERSAL PILLS, a combination of the most approved virtues of the Vegetable Kingdom, blended together in such due and just proportions, as to form at length an article which, they confidently venture to affirm, will be found superior to any thing of the kind hitherto made known; they contain not a particle of Mercury, or any other pernicious ingredients, but act almost imperceptibly, but none the less surely, as a gentle purifier of the blood and invigorator of the system. Their private use has been for many years co-extensive with that of the Universal Salve, to which they will be found most valuable agents.

The Proprietors might say much in their favour, and would enlarge upon their merits, were they not anxious that they should stand upon their own, and not have the appearance of being (as is too commonly the case) puffed into notice. They will, therefore, content themselves by saying that, in all cases of Bilious Attacks, Indigestion, Constipation of the Bowels, Sick Head-ache, frequent Nausea, Chronic Rheumatism, Lumbago, violent Cold or Cough, Jaundice, and in short all Internal Diseases, their aid will be found to be invaluable.

Sold in boxes, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each. Wholesale Depot, 5, Swallow Place, Regent Street.

R. WEDGEWOOD'S PATENT MANIFOLD

R. WRITER, established forty years, for copying letters, invoices, &c., in duplicate and triplicate. The invention completely supersedes the use of the ordinary pen and ink; it produces a letter and its copy at one operation, both as plain and indelible as if written with the blackest and most permanent ink, or, if required, a letter with duplicates and a copy, all in durable ink, and with a pen that requires no repairs. It is so simple in its operation, that the aged and infirm can use it with the greatest ease; is cheap and portable in construction, and affords an immense saving in time and expense to merchants, bankers, and solicitors, and indeed to all who have occasion to write much, and who desire to retain copies of their letters, or send duplicates abroad. Was patronized by their late Majesties King George the Third, George the Fourth, and William the Fourth; by the late Emperor Alexander of Russia, who presented the inventor with a superb diamond ring of great value; also by British and Foreign Ambassadors; the Observatories of Greenwich, Edinburgh, Cape of Good Hope, &c., and persons of rank, science, and ability, in situations official and commercial, from whom the patentee has received numerous voluntary testimonials of its utility.—Manufactory, 4, Rathbone Place, London.—Agents at Calcutta, W. TRACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, and D. WILSON and Co.—Orders received direct, or through the houses of agency in London.

BOOTS FOR INDIA.J. TROY (late of STUN'S), ANATOMICAL BOOT

MAKER, No. 376, Strand, London, begs to acquaint officers and gentlemen in India, that he has discovered a new process in the preparation of leather for Boots and Shoes, which renders it soft and pliable as kid, and as durable as calf; it is not affected by any degree of heat, will take a brilliant polish by the common method of cleaning, and is free from that disagreeable creaking noise so often complained of.

T. TROY also begs to call attention to the fact, that bad fitting boots, however large, are not easy, but cause corns and swellings in the joints, which are very difficult to be got rid of. He respectfully states that his anatomical knowledge of the foot enables him to combine ease with neatness, and that he only requires the measure and description of the foot to insure a natural-fitting and gentlemanly-looking boot. His prices are moderate, and his goods of the finest quality.

DIRECTIONS FOR MEASURING.

1. The number of inches round the ball or joints of the foot. 2. The number of inches round the instep. 3. The number of inches round the heel to the upper part of instep. 4. The length of foot when sitting. 5. The length of foot when standing. 6. Round the calf. If there be any peculiarity about the foot, lay it on a sheet of paper and mark round it with a pencil, giving thereby its exact form; or, if an old boot can be forwarded, nothing more will be required to insure a good fit.

Prices.—Wellington Boots, of the prepared leather for India, 30s. per pair; ordinary, 28s.; Shooting Shoes to buckle, 18s. to 20s. per pair.

Orders to be forwarded to J. TROY, 376, Strand, London.

The ICE PARAPHERNELIA, in which rough ice can be kept for several weeks, preventing the necessity of opening the ice house except occasionally.

The FREZZING MACHINES, by which different ices can be made in a few minutes; and from the constant agitation of the mixture during the process of freezing it is of the smoothest and finest quality.

The ICE PAIL, for ICING WINE, WATER, BUTTER, &c., either with rough ice or by artificial process.

The above articles of scientific discovery may be seen at the Manufactory only, 60, Jernyn Street, six doors from St. James's Street.

The NEW TOOTH-PICK BRUSH, thoroughly cleansing between the teeth, when used up and down, and polishing the surface when used crossways. The hair warranted never to come out. VARICOSE VEINS, WEAKNESS, FRACTURES, SPRAINS, &c.HUXLEY'S SURGICAL CAOUTCHOUC ELASTIC

STOCKINGS are now daily patronized by the leading members of the profession; their superiority over every other manufactured fabric, for artificial support, is admitted by all who inspect them; they afford an equal, comforting, and permanent pressure, on every portion of the limb, avoiding the excessive trouble of lacing; they are drawn on with the facility of an ordinary stocking, adding little or no size to the leg. The success that has attended every case submitted to them, through the profession or otherwise, has established the confidence of all first practitioners. H. and Co. are therefore enabled to guarantee a comfort and support hitherto unknown in any other form of bandaging. It is remarkable that every kind of surgical stockings lately used have a tendency to impede the free and healthy action of the muscles, thereby producing relaxation and great diminution of the limb. To be obtained at HUXLEY'S PARISIAN SHIRT WAREHOUSE, 5, Vere Street, Cavendish Square. Manufacturers of Patent Abdominal Belts. Directions for Self-measurement and the Articles forwarded by Post.

Also T. A. BRIDGE and Co.'s QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER, a celebrated remedy for Indigestion, Flatulency, Gout, Rheumatism, Spasms, Debility, and all nervous affections. OPTICAL INSTRUMENTS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

Orders from India, accompanied with a remittance, punctually attended to.

CARPENTER and WESTLEY, OPTICIANS, 24, REGENT STREET, WATERLOO PLACE, LONDON.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY, AND THE BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY.

J. KOHLER'S NEW PATENT LEVER INSTRUMENTS.

J. KOHLER having brought to perfection and obtained J. her Majesty's Letters Patent for the above invention, which he has applied to the CORNOPEAN, TRUMPET-CORNETTO, TROMBONES, and FRENCH HORNS, he can now with great confidence, after an experience of five years in bringing the action to its present state of perfection, recommend them to her Majesty's Army and Navy, and all professors and amateurs. The advantages that this patent gives to these instruments are,—

1. All the tones and semitones produced by the Patent Lever are quite as perfect as the natural notes on the instrument.
2. The intervals in the Diatonic and Chromatic Scales are perfect, the compass greater, and the most rapid and difficult passages may be performed with a precision, freedom, and fullness of tone, and comparative ease to the performer.
3. Combinations in harmony, which never before could be performed at all by any brass instruments, may now be executed with perfect ease, and ten or twelve instruments on this principle can produce a more rich and sonorous effect than twenty-four could do on the old principles. The harshness of tone in the former brass instruments is entirely done away with, and a set of these instruments, heard together, produces military and harmonious effects never before heard.

These instruments are now in use in her Majesty's Private Band, First Life Guards, Royal Horse Guards, Grenadier Guards, Fusilier Guards, Royal Artillery, 9th Royal Rifles, &c. Testimonials, drawings, and prices, forwarded on application at J. KOHLER'S Manufactory, 35, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London.

TO FLAUTISTS.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON (SOLE MAKER of the CELEBRATED CHARLES NICHOLSON'S FLUTES), takes this opportunity to inform the Musical Public in India and the Colonies that he now also manufactures Flutes on the principle of the talented Flautist, JEAN RICHARDSON, therefore all future orders should state whether a "NICHOLSON" or "RICHARDSON" Flute is required.

These instruments possess a remarkable brilliancy of tone, and are perfect in intonation and tune in every key; the superiority of style in the finishing department leaves nothing to be wished for by the connoisseur, and the plan adopted only by T. P. of seasoning the wood for extreme climates renders these instruments far superior to any others now manufactured.

The prices are the same as for the "Nicholson's" Flutes, and vary, according to their number of keys, from 11 guineas to 30 guineas; and purchasers, to prevent their being imposed upon, will receive a certificate, signed by the approved maker, thus—JEAN RICHARDSON and THOMAS PROWSE.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or by an order through their agent in London.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under-clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventative of the many diseases arising from check of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. This manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats: the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all irritating or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and this very general approval and consequent demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vigonia, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 152, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind, except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glennen undertake to furnish them in dozens or half-dozen to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free, at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 78s. per dozen, and Ladies', 68s. per dozen; and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 12s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 18s. per dozen to Bombay.

OUTFITS TO INDIA, BY SHIP AND OVERLAND.

Every particular connected with outfits to India, both for ladies and gentlemen, including detailed lists of requisite clothing, uniforms, &c. &c. for every appointment, with the necessary variations for the outfits of CIVILIANS, CADETS, ASSISTANT-SURGEONS, &c. together with every information respecting passage by ship and by the overland route, baggage, packing, &c., will be forwarded on application to Messrs. Thresher and Glennen, as above.

TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT.

From Alexandria to Suez, under direction of the Egyptian Transit Company, only 2 cwt. of baggage is allowed without extra charge, and no package of trunk should exceed 50 lb. weight.

THE REGULATION OVERLAND TRUNKS & CASES. Manufactured by Thresher and Glennen especially for the TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT, and for the cabins of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steam-ships to MALTA, ALEXANDRIA, and INDIA, can only be procured at their East-India Outfit Warehouse, 152, Strand, London.

All communications addressed to Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, 152, STRAND, LONDON, will have immediate attention.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL, MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRACTORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced managers) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus presenting MILITARY and NAVAL OUTFITTERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAILING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessaries to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burthened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DEPARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL. The SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. The WORKSHOPS for Clothing, at 41, Bishopsgate-street Within; for SHIRTS and CABIN FURNITURE, at 33 and 34, Nassau-place, Commercial-road; and for SHIRTS, STAYS, BRACES, &c., at LANDPORT, near PORTSMOUTH.

THE HAND-BEDSTEAD, weight only 17 lbs.

JOHN BESEMERES and SONS, CLOTHIERS, OUTFITTERS, and ready-made Linen Warehousemen, invite Cadets and overland travellers to India to inspect this Portable Bedstead, price 12s. 6d., invented and made only by them. Although so light, it is strong, compact, of full size, and may be used without a mattress; it passes readily into a bag 6 inches in diameter, 24 long. Bedstead, bedding, blankets, sheets, quilt, &c., packed in one of their (21s.) Waterproof Regulation Overland Trunks, weigh under 50 lbs. Lists of Outfit for Cadets and Assistant-Surgeons, and estimates of every expense, forwarded by post.—Outfitting Warehouses, Nos. 61 to 64, Houndsditch, London.

Communications for the Editor, and Advertisements, should be sent under cover to Messrs. Wm. H. Allen & Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

THE shortness of the period which has elapsed since the arrival of the last mail from India, and the general pacific character of the existing position of that country, alike forbid the expectation of receiving any very rousing intelligence by the present. In the PUNJAB local improvement is the fashion, and a very good fashion it is. Operations in the road and tank departments have been commenced, and the editor of the Bombay Times observes, "we should not be at all surprised were a railway to be opened betwixt Ferozepore and Lahore before the Maharajah parts with his present tutors." LENA SINGH is about to withdraw from public life, and to retire to the city of Benares, where so many devotees, real or pretended, drivel out the evening of life in what are called holy pursuits. The Dewan MOOLRAJ of Mooltan was anxious, it was said, to be relieved of the cares of government, and we suppose there would be no great objection to obliging him.

In the British territory adjacent to that of the Sikhs, projected improvements were scarcely less rife than among our neighbours. It has been resolved to spend 10,000*l.* per annum on the cultivation of the tea-plant on the banks of the Beas, and at Anarkullee, and Kolghur, in the Simla jurisdiction. The valleys in these districts are reported to be well adapted for the purpose. Cultivators are to be imported from China, as well as seed, and the experiment is to be forthwith commenced under the superintendence of Dr. JAMIESON.

The story of the intended murder by starvation of the wife of the NIZAM's brother and several slave-girls—a story scarcely credible in itself, and on which some discredit was subsequently thrown—is now said to be true. The rescued lady has been placed under the protection of her father. Verily, in these native states, the security of life is great!

On the GOOMSOORE disturbances the following information is found in the Madras Athenaeum of the 23rd of December:—

"Letters from Chokapaud of late date mention all being pretty quiet there now, and the ryots coming in to many of the villages some days ago, although Lieutenant Hughes, who commands a detachment at a village near Chokapaud, was fired on at intervals for two days; but the only damage done was one man slightly wounded. In our issue of the 2nd inst. we made a slight mistake in saying that Major Russell's party got to Chokapaud easily. The party, it appears, started from Gullery on the evening of the 13th, and encamped for the night at a village near Badingiah. They were not molested that night, but the next day they had not proceeded far before they were fired on, and, after marching about six miles, they came to a stockade. It was situated in a most advantageous position, being in a narrow pass rising nearly perpendicularly thirty or forty feet. From the dense jungle around, it was not easily turned; however, the grenadiers and fourth company of the 18th N.I. walked into it in good style. A havildar was slightly wounded, but is doing well. It was slow work the rest of the day, as flanking parties were obliged to keep the coast clear, and it was late before they encamped. On the 15th they were fired on till close to Chokapaud, the rebels or bungoas' attack being principally at the baggage; but from the good arrangements nothing was lost, which, considering the wretched cattle furnished by the commissariat, is most praiseworthy. Major Russell had six wounded, including a jemadar of a party from Rok-labab (we believe it is), and which joined him during the firing of the 15th. This party, consisting of a company of the 41st N.I. and part of one of the 18th N.I. had marched through the Duspualla country; it returned next day by the route Major Russell had come. The party under Lieut. Tombs consisted of a company of that regiment, and part of one of the 18th, with Lieut. Jacob. They were fired on, and the road stockaded; but, we believe, only one man of the party (a havildar of the 41st regiment) was killed, and none was wounded."

The death of the GUICOWAR is reported, and the arrangement of his raj is subject of speculation.

The Governor-General arrived at Calcutta on the 11th of December, after an absence in the upper country of two years and a quarter. He was received with enthusiasm. A public meeting was convoked at the Town-hall to vote an address of welcome, which, having been carried amidst loud acclamations, was presented on the 15th. The address and Lord HARDINGE's answer will be found in another part of our publication. His Lordship, in quitting India, bears with him the hearty good wishes of the entire community which he leaves behind, European and native. May he enjoy many years of peace and happiness at home!

The state of the commercial world was still unsatisfactory. Rumours were afloat affecting the stability of several firms, and two in addition to those previously reported had succumbed to the pressure, viz. COLVILLE, GILMORE, and Co., and B. T. FORD and Co. Ample particulars of the estates of various insolvent houses will be found in other columns.

The private intelligence received by the mail is not of a character to remove the gloom created by the reports furnished through the medium of the press. The letters received from Calcutta speak in the most discouraging terms of trade in that quarter, and represent all mercantile transactions as completely at a stand. One correspondent writes that ten firms have already suspended operations, and that six others would in all probability be compelled very shortly to adopt the same course. Those desirous of making remittances were entirely at a loss what channel to select, and, for want of confidence in any private firms, have adopted the plan of sending their correspondents post bills of the Bank of Bengal, which bills must, as a matter of course, be sent back to India again as remittances from this country, being payable only in Calcutta. This we believe to be a new feature in the exchange between the two countries.

From the other presidencies there is little or nothing to report; but in regard to commercial and monetary affairs they are at least quiet.

BENGAL.

THE BOTANIC GARDEN AND THE LATE MR. GRIFFITH.

Now that the cold weather has set in, in a sufficiently marked manner to render a day's excursion on the river, and a rural walk pleasant, even to the softer sex, it may not be amiss if we draw attention, in a few lines, to the changes which have been effected during the year, and which now appear to have nearly approached completion in a locality which, though situated on the other side of the water, has long been a favourite resort during the brief period of the year when the solar rays may be treated with impunity by a foreign resident in a tropical climate. It will, we doubt not, be equally as gratifying to such of our readers as have not lately visited the Botanic Garden, as it was to us, to observe the improvements that have been accomplished during the present year, in various parts, but more especially on the eastern side. This portion, formerly a waste spot, has been completely opened out by walks, flower-beds, and shrubs, the latter dotting the whole area, and giving it an appearance pleasant to the eye. We understand that in many of these alterations and improvements, the present officiating superintendent has been merely carrying out the elaborate plan drawn up by the late Mr. Griffith during the short time he was in charge of the institution, and which met the approval of Government. These improvements, unfortunately for the cause of botanical science, his premature death prevented his accomplishing. It must be a source of gratification to his talented associate and friend to have had an opportunity afforded him of carrying his intentions into effect. Nor can we doubt that that eminent botanist, Dr. Falconer, who will now so soon have the superintendence of this noble institution, will make a point of fully completing what his predecessor had designed.

It would be unpardonable were we, before closing this short notice, to admit adding, that during the past week, the garden has been enriched by an exceedingly neat cenotaph to the memory of Mr. Griffith, bearing on one side the following inscription:—

WILLIAM GRIFFITH,
Distinguished by the zeal and activity with which he imparted the knowledge
HE HAD HIMSELF ACQUIRED by personal investigation in the different provinces of British India, and in the neighbouring Kingdoms, from the banks of the Helmund and Oxus to the Straits of Malacca, where, in the capacity of a Civil Assistant Surgeon,
HE DIED 9TH FEB. 1845, in the 34th year of his age, and the 13th year of his public service in India.
His early loss was deeply deplored by the head of the Government of India, and by the leading natural historians of his time.
His large collections of plants and MSS. were bequeathed to the Honourable the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.

And on another these few lines:—

ERECTED BY HIS BROTHER, AND A FEW PRIVATE FRIENDS, WITH THE PERMISSION OF GOVERNMENT.

On the reverse sides are Latin and Persian inscriptions of a similar nature.

The garden now possesses four monuments. One to Kyd, its liberal founder; another to Roxburgh, its talented superintendent for many years; a third to Jack, a zealous contributor to botanical science; and a fourth to Griffith, who, to use the words of one who, appreciating his merits, has well remarked that—though his career was short, “he has left a name and a fame behind him which but few can attain to, even with patriarchal years.” A fifth monument was suggested not long since, to the memory of Buchanan Hamilton. We trust this may be erected, for his valuable labours richly deserve some such record at the hands of the Government, whose faithful servant he was, and perhaps a more fitting spot than the Botanic Garden could not be found.

THE COMMERCIAL CRISIS.

MESSRS. LAKE HAMMILL AND CO.

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs Lake Hammill and Co. was held yesterday, when a statement of affairs was submitted to the meeting, shewing assets, Co.'s Rs. 10,15,934; to meet liabilities, Co.'s Rs. 9,08,265. It was proposed and seconded that the estate should be wound up by the present partners, under their inspection.—Bengal Hurkaru, December 11.

MESSRS. COLVILLE, GILMORE, AND CO.

At a meeting of the creditors of Colville, Gilmore, and Co., held this day at their office, John Allan, Esq., in the chair, a statement of their affairs was submitted, exhibiting the following results:—

Liabilities to the Union Bank, after deduction of the estimated proceeds of the indigo of the past season, pledged to the Bank, and other available securities held by it	Rs. 14,35,700
For which the bank holds mortgages over various indigo concerns, of which a list was produced, for ..	14,95,000
To other parties not secured the firm is indebted to the amount of	4,05,000
To this amount is to be added bills expected to be returned in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Barclay, Brothers, and Co., the whole of which had been provided for by remittances £52,760, or	5,27,600
To meet the above uncovered engagements there are balances due to the firm which may be looked upon as immediately recoverable	3,00,000
And property to the value of	72,000

Exclusive of what may ultimately prove good of the large amount of Rs. 43,00,000 standing at the debit of indigo and other trading accounts in the books of the house.

Proposed by Mr. M. Gladstone, seconded by Mr. Molloy.

That the meeting be adjourned, for the purpose of considering the best course to be adopted, till Friday the 24th instant, at 3 P.M.

Proposed by Mr. Thomas, seconded by Mr. Kettlewell.

That Messrs. Oswald and Gladstone be requested to act as trustees, to collect all sums due to the firm, and disburse what may be required for the office establishment and personal expenses of the partners until the next meeting.—Calcutta, December 11, 1847.—Bengal Hurkaru, Dec. 13.

We are requested by Messrs. Colville, Gilmore, and Co., to correct a misapprehension which might arise in regard to the amount standing at the debit of indigo, and other trading accounts in the books of the house, estimated at Rs. 43,00,000. From that amount are to be deducted the outlay for the past season's indigo, the value of the concerns over which security to the bank and others has been given, and other good assets taken into the general statement of their affairs, which will reduce the amount of bad and doubtful debts due to the firm to considerably less than Rs. 26,00,000, though the precise amount cannot be estimated until their books are closed.—Ibid., Dec. 14.

UNION BANK.

A special meeting was held on Saturday, when the following report was read and adopted after a long debate.

Report.

"Some shareholders of the Union Bank having availed themselves of their undoubted right to have a special general meeting of shareholders called for this day, the directors think it due to the body of proprietors to lay before the meeting such report as they are at present enabled to make on the affairs of the bank.

"The failures of Messrs. Cockerell and Co.; Colville, Gilmore, and Co., and Lyall, Matheson, and Co., entail severe losses on the bank, the probable extent of which may be learned from the following statements, which the failures of these houses enable the directors to lay before the meeting without any violation of banking propriety:—

The failures of London houses will bring back upon the bank returned bills to the extent of eighteen lacs and a half of rupees, of which four lacs and a half are understood to be secured; a considerable addition will be made to the debts of the fallen houses on account of claims in respect of these returned bills.

The misappropriation of bank post-bills sent to Messrs. Cockerell, Larpet, and Co., has obliged the bank to provide for a payment of four and a half lacs of rupees, which they could not anticipate that they would have been called on to make.

Besides this gloomy catalogue of losses, the directors feel that it is every way desirable that the shareholders should have before them a full and precise statement of the position of the bank. They regret that it is not in their power to make such a statement at present. They feel that, in order to be satisfactory, it ought to shew a full account of the bank's liabilities, an accurate and precise account of its assets, distinguishing such as may be made speedily available from such as it will require time to realize, and to embody a well-considered plan for future management.

The examination of the liabilities of the bank may be almost said to be concluded. The examination of its assets is now engaging the anxious and constant attention of the directors, and from the securities in which many of them are locked up, it is an examination which requires close investigation and much time.

The establishment has been minutely inquired into, and a considerable reduction in the charges of management has been resolved on.

The directors have no doubt that, at the usual half-yearly meeting, in the next month, they will be enabled to lay before the shareholders a full and clear statement on all the above matters, and they take this opportunity of publishing their confident belief, that such statement will shew the solvency of the bank, and calm the apprehensions of the shareholders and the public on that subject.

It may be inferred from the announcement of the fact, that the directors are now engaged in considering a plan for future management, that they do not anticipate being called on to wind up the affairs of the bank. That there will remain, after all its losses, a working capital, they do not doubt, though the nature of the securities in which part of it is invested may make the rendering it again available, for purely banking purposes, a matter of difficulty and time. But an important object, if attainable, is not to be abandoned because its attainment is difficult, and, if difficult, the method by which it is to be arrived at should be well considered before it is recommended for adoption.

A great part of the time of the directors has been taken up with arrangements for realizing assets, and preparing for the realization of more. They have incurred no new liabilities, and have strictly limited the accommodation granted by the bank to diminishing existing debts due to it, and improving its securities for such debts. They have entirely stopped transactions in exchange, and they have the satisfaction of knowing that they are daily diminishing the amount of the bank's liabilities and demonstrating its power of meeting the calls which may be made on it.

By order of the directors,

(Signed)

H. W. ABBOTT, Secretary.

THE POST-OFFICE.

The irregularity and fraud which have been detected at the Seharunpore post-office during the recent visit of the postmaster-general of the north-west provinces to that station, have again brought under public notice the great inefficiency and untrustworthiness of this department, and we are happy to perceive that the press has not neglected the opportunity of anew urging the necessity of a reform on the attention of Government.

The particulars of the Seharunpore case are these:—It had been evident for some time that many letters addressed to the postmaster at Seharunpore, by the postmasters of other stations and the postmaster-general of the north-west provinces, had never reached him. He therefore availed himself of the arrival of the postmaster-general to institute a searching inquiry. The writer's house and the office were thoroughly searched, and no less than 515 letters were found which had never been delivered. Some of these were of the date of 1844-5, and 303 of them were addressed to the postmaster of the station. Many were in the original packets with the seals unbroken. There were three to our address, one of which contained a remittance for the orphan fund. It is also discovered that several bany parcels had been purloined. The majority of these letters were retained to prevent inquiries regarding previous acts of fraud. The office had been in the hands of natives for some years before it was entrusted to the present covenanted officer; and it was with the view of preventing the correction of abuses (that the correspondence of the new incumbent, with his official brethren and the head of the department, was thus intercepted. The writer, on the discovery of his frauds, destroyed himself by poison.

Such has been for some time the state of one important post office establishment, and there can be little doubt that if other offices were subjected to the same scrutiny, abuses equally striking would be discovered. No department under the Governments of Bengal and Agra, reflects such ignominy on our institutions, or requires so radical a reform as that of the post-office. It is remarkable only for its procrastination, its irregularities, and its frauds. It forms an exception to almost every other branch of the public administration. In no department are the interests of the community so lamentably neglected, while at the same time there is no other department in which Government is bound by such strong obligations to protect those interests. All private posts are strictly interdicted by law. The Government has reserved to itself the sole privilege of conveying the mails, and any attempt to infringe the monopoly, and to send letters by any other mail than that of the state, is visited with a penalty of Rs. 50 for each letter. This rule clearly lays upon Government the indisputable necessity of making the best possible provision for the speedy and faithful delivery of all letters and parcels, and of placing all its postal arrangements upon the most efficient and satisfactory footing; yet from the day when the last Post Office Act was passed ten years ago, which took from the public the power of remedying the negligence of the public mail, and providing for its own interests, the evil has been steadily on the increase, and it has now reached a point beyond the limit of human endurance. With an increase of business, and establishments which are stationary, the post has become more and more dilatory and unfaithful. Within the last week we have received three complaints of the delivery of papers one or two days after they were due, while other packets sent by the same post arrived at their destination in due time. To these and the numerous other complaints which have reached us during the year, we have been constrained to return the same disheartening reply—"There is no remedy. We have remonstrated till we are ashamed of doing so, and to remonstrate again would only lead to fresh disappointment. When things are at the worst they begin to mend, and a reform cannot therefore be far distant." Neither the public nor the government can much longer permit the existence of a system, under which letters and papers are kept back at the despatching office, and hundreds of letters, after reaching the place of their destination, are never delivered, and thousands of rupees are annually purloined by under-paid native officials.

It is in vain to lay the blame on the individual post masters; it is the system we must assail. The whole system is rotten to the very core, and nothing but a thoroughly organic reformation will meet the evil. The fundamental principle of the post office, that the expense of conveying the Government correspondence shall not be paid, as in the case of every other public charge, from the general revenues of the state, but from the specific fund created by the sums received for the conveyance of private letters, must be relinquished. This is just as unfair as it would be for Government to assume a monopoly of all steam conveyance on our rivers, and to make private individuals, who were obliged to avail themselves of their vessels, for freight or passage, pay such a sum as should cover the transmission of all Government stores. The correspondence of the community has, at present, to bear the entire burden of all the correspondence of the state. But even this is not the worst feature of the system. The heavy packages containing the voluminous records of all cases, summary, regular, and special, which are appealed from two hundred courts, in the interior, to the Sudder in Calcutta, are conveyed under a Government frank, and the expense is borne by the public. There can be no more reason for saddling the community with the cost of sending up papers and documents connected with private suits to the Court of Appeal, than for taxing the public to pay the suitor's pleaders. But—those suitors are obliged to purchase stamp paper from Government for a large number of the documents connected with their suits, and to write only on one side of the sheet; and, as it would perhaps be deemed akin to a denial of justice thus to constrain a man to use twice as much paper as he found necessary, and then to saddle him with the cost of conveying it to the Appeal Court, the records are transmitted free of postage, that is, they are paid out of the fund created by private postage. The expense of conveying these papers ought unquestionably to be debited to the stamp revenue, which could well sustain it, as it is annually on the increase, and is said already to have reached the sum of thirty-five lakhs of rupees a year. But the public, as we think most unfairly, is required to bear the charge, which contributes to impede all measures of postal improvement.

It is idle, therefore, to expect any adequate reform until this unjust arrangement has been modified. But if Government is not as yet prepared to charge each department with its own postage, and to carry the amount to the general credit of the post-office, and from the large surplus which would thus be created to provide for the improvements which are indispensable, it should at the very least determine that the establishments of the post-office at the various stations in the interior be regulated by the duties imposed on them, instead of being determined by the existence or non-existence of any excess of receipts from private postage, after it has paid all the expense of conveying the Government correspondence. The inefficiency of the post-office arises from the want of good roads, and the inadequacy of the establishments. Good roads we cannot expect immediately. Doubtless, when fifteen millions of capital have been expended by the public in constructing the Grand Trunk Railway and its main branches, Government will feel constrained to expend half a million sterling in making metalled roads to connect the various stations with them. But we want immediately reform; and it is not so much with good roads that it must commence, as with the improvements of the various post-office establishments. Even where good roads exist, the benefit is neutralised by the weakness and unfaithfulness of the administration at the local offices, and until Government is prepared to improve and strengthen the post-office staff at each Mofussil station, every attempt at reform must be delusive. It is necessary to go to the root of the evil, and to sanction an increased expenditure of a lakh of rupees a year, at the very least.

The indispensable necessity of such an augmentation as the very first step in reform will be at once apparent from a reference to the existing state of things. In the provinces of Bengal and Behar there are fifty-three post-office stations superintended by European postmasters. In no fewer than twenty-nine there is not one farthing of remuneration allowed those officers. The office is forced on some civil or military or medical officer, who is, in many instances, already overburdened with duties, and who has in no case the slightest inducement to exert himself. The consequence is that the management of the office is left, in too many cases, to the native moonshee, the worst paid officer throughout the native service, and whose chief business is to eke out his little pittance by various contrivances, all of which are inimical to the public interests. In twenty offices, the salary is no more than Rs. 50 a month; but lest government should be startled at its own parsimony, there are no less than four postmasters paid at the rate of Rs. 100 a month. The population of these provinces is properly estimated at thirty-five millions, the revenue they yield to the government is nine crores of rupees, or nine millions sterling; the commercial transactions, at the lowest computation, exceed twenty millions sterling; yet the whole sum paid to all the postmasters at fifty-three stations for managing all the postal arrangements, does not exceed Rs. 1,400 a month! Lest the reader should be utterly incredulous, and imagine that we have been omitting a cypher, we will put down the sum in words,—the pay of all the postmasters in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa does not exceed one thousand four hundred rupees a month. The consequences are such as must be expected in every case where the head of an office is completely indifferent whether he retains it or is deprived of it,—inefficiency, irregularity, and infidelity in the subordinate officers. The native establishment is not much better paid. The moonshee is expected to be a man of some acquirements, and to possess a knowledge of English. Yet his services are rewarded with a salary of Rs. 16, Rs. 20, or Rs. 30 a month: a sum upon which it is utterly impossible for him to live with comfort or decency. At the station of Scharunpore, where these frauds and irregularities have so recently been detected, the native who was accountable for Rs. 3,000 or Rs. 4,000 a month, received an allowance of only Rs. 10.

The very first reform movement must therefore be directed to the improvement of the post-office establishments in the interior. The office of post-master must be made worth holding, before the post-master general can acquire that control over his subordinates, without which all reformation must be hopeless. The office should be entrusted to the functionary who has the largest leisure for attending to it, and whose duties lie chiefly at the station, and are most likely to detain him within its limits; and the allowance should be fixed, at the very lowest, at Rs. 100, and in many stations at Rs. 150 a month. At larger and more important stations, the office should be intrusted to a separate officer on larger pay. A corresponding improvement should be made at the same time in the salaries of the native officials, partly with the view of obtaining a superior class of men, but chiefly to render the present incumbents more contented, more attentive to their duties, and more apprehensive of losing them.

We should not have brought forward the subject at so inopportune a period as the present, when one administration is about to close and another to begin; but we were anxious not to lose the opportunity afforded for the discussion by the Scharunpore delinquency. As soon as Lord Dalhousie has had time to look about him, and to form some idea of the reformatiois bequeathed to him by his predecessor, it will be the duty of the press to agitate the question of postage reform with that unanimity which will be the best prognostic of success.—Friend of India.

PRESENTATION OF ADDRESS TO LORD HARDINGE.

A large number of citizens assembled at the town-hall at eleven yesterday morning, to accompany the deputation which had been appointed to present the address to the Governor-General, on the occasion of his lordship's arrival in Calcutta. At the appointed hour, the deputation proceeded in a body to Government House, where they were received by Lord Hardinge in the great reception hall. After being presented to his lordship, the sheriff read the following address:—

"The inhabitants of Calcutta address your lordship on the occasion of your return to this city with feelings of satisfaction, qualified only by the knowledge that your return hither is the immediate forerunner of your departure from India.

"The period of your lordship's absence from this presidency has been short, but it has been marked by events of great moment, and illustrated by actions which it is the lot of few men in a long life to achieve. In the brief space of two years, you have crowned a distinguished military career, by directing the operations of a glorious campaign, and personally contributing to the victories won upon two well-contested fields—you have brought new provinces under British influence, subjected to British control a restless and formidable enemy, and, moderate in the hour of victory as you had been resolute in the hour of danger, have concluded a peace which we trust will be lasting.

"Its frontier extended yet improved, new possessions added without aggression, its resources augmented, at peace with its neighbours, yet ready, if need be, for war, this vast empire will pass from your hands into those of your successor prepared for the measures of internal improvement proper to that period of peaceful administration which we may now reasonably hope by the blessing of Divine Providence to enjoy.

"The future triumphs in India of knowledge, of art, and of civilization, present themselves to our minds while welcoming the return of a ruler whose administration commenced with the public recognition of learning as a most desirable qualification for office, and who, at the opening of one of the most glorious campaigns in India, exhibited before an admiring world the most important principle, that the sword was to be drawn only when the interests of a great empire rendered it absolutely indispensable.

"Other hands will reap the harvest for which you have prepared the soil; but we cannot doubt that you will continue anxiously to watch the work, and to take the warmest interest in the welfare of a country with which history will imperishably connect your name.

"We regret that your lordship's return should have happened at a time when commercial distress of unusual extent and severity has directly or indirectly affected all classes of the community. It may be that, but for this general depression, louder and more joyous demonstrations of respect and admiration than those which we now venture to offer would have greeted your arrival, but we entreat your lordship to believe that we could not have expressed more sincerely than we now express, our heartfelt desire that you may long enjoy those honours which so many years of distinguished service, in Europe and in Asia, in the council and in the field, have nobly won from the gratitude of your country and the justice of your sovereign."

To which his Lordship read in a manly distinct voice the following reply:—

"Gentlemen,—I value very highly this mark of your approbation of my services conveyed to me in the most gratifying terms, and I appreciate the declaration which you have made, that new possessions have been added without aggression, and that the sword was only drawn when the security of the state demanded a recourse to arms. It was my most anxious desire, and one which I did not fail to express on undertaking the duties of this Government, that peace should be preserved, under the conviction that this course is the best calculated to promote the honour and interests of Great Britain and the welfare of the people of India.

"War having become inevitable, the army, commanded by its intrepid and experienced chief, closed its operations in sixty days, after displaying signal proofs of its fidelity and valour. During the two subsequent years, the state of our external relations has led me to a well-founded expectation that the triumphs of war will produce their true and legitimate results, in securing for India the blessings of a lasting peace. British ascendancy, as recognized by treaty, now extends from the Khyber Pass to Cape Comorin, and if there should ever arise in this vast empire, circumscribed by 12,000 miles of land and sea frontier, a necessity for again unsheathing the sword, the Government has at its disposal a force ample, in the proportion of all its arms, for any contingency which can arise."

"Your future triumphs will be those of peace, in promoting the cause of knowledge and of civilization, and I shall ever watch with the deepest interest the progress of an enlightened system of education, guided by men of practical experience, and encouraged by the liberality of the East-India Company.

"At an advanced period of life, I retire with the gratification of knowing that I deliver up my trust to a successor of approved talents, and distinguished reputation, whose sound judgment will enable him to exercise the duties of his high office with honour to himself and advantage to the state; and I am confident that under his administration works of great public utility will be constructed, by which the resources of this great empire will be rapidly developed.

"I deeply deplore the commercial distress which this city is now suffering. The same pressure has been felt by the mercantile community in Great Britain, and with equal severity; but I fervently trust that the crisis in both countries has passed away, and will be succeeded by a happier state of affairs.

"I need not assure you that I shall always be proud to acknowledge, and ready to manifest my grateful sense of the honour which you have conferred upon me, and I shall ever retain the most anxious solicitude for the prosperity of this great and rising city.

"HARDINGE."

After the Calcutta deputation had retired, the bishop and clergy waited on Lord Hardinge with an address, which was delivered orally, and to which his lordship responded in the same manner.

The Roman Catholic archbishop was also present with a number of his clergy, and we believe intended to have addressed the Governor-General, but had no opportunity of doing so.

The levee commenced immediately after.—Hurkaru, Dec. 16.

LOCAL.

ANOTHER VICTIM TO THE HARD TIMES.—The pressure on the money market of Calcutta, which led to the downfall of so many respectable mercantile firms, and the ruin of perhaps thousands, has had not a little influence on the prosperity of this journal, which was, for the most part, if not chiefly, supported by men connected with these firms. As they suspended their payments, our subscribers withdrew their support, being generally thrown out of employment. The consequence has been such a reduction of our subscription list, that we can no longer continue our appearance. We beg, therefore, to take leave of our readers and the public in perfect amity and good feeling, not a little dissatisfied at the reception which we have met with.—Singbad Gyananjun, Dec. 13.

CHARLES HOGG, ESQ.—We understand that Charles Hogg, Esq., has been, or will be, appointed high sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year.—Hurkaru, Dec. 14.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—At a meeting of proprietors of the Bank of Bengal held yesterday, Messrs. C. B. Skinner, D. M. Gordon, and D. Mackinly, were elected directors in room of A. de H. Larpent and Murray Gladstone, out by rotation; and H. B. Henderson, resigned.—Ibid.

IMPORTANT CASE.—A case of some importance has just been decided in the Insolvent Court by Sir Lawrence Peel. In the case of Capt. Palmer, an insolvent, who is on the pension establishment, Mr. Morton applied that the pension bills should be vested in the assignee in trust for the benefit of his creditors, or that a monthly deduction should be made from the amount. Sir Lawrence Peel refused the application, ruling that "the pension being received under a contract, was not a gratuity, but a debt. The insolvent held no office, and his case could not come within the category of the section cited."—Friend of India, Dec. 16.

LORD HARDINGE'S LOSS.—It has been generally rumoured that Lord Hardinge has suffered to the extent of a lakh of rupees by the failure of his agents, Messrs. Cockerell & Co., but we are happy to learn from the papers that the loss does not exceed Rs. 30,000. All governors-general should be advised to follow Lord William Bentinck's plan, and bank with the Bank of Bengal, even at the risk of having a cheque returned, because, by some inadvertence, the amount excoed by two annas, the sum in deposit.—Ibid.

DISHONOURABLE TRANSACTION.—A correspondent of the Englishman says, "It is announced that a draft of Sicca Rs. 100,000, on Calcutta, was cashed at 4 per cent. before the news of the late failures had reached the station, and that it was drawn by one of the members of the defunct houses." There has been an ugly rumour of such a transaction floating about on the surface of society for some little time. It has now found a local habitation in the columns of our contemporary; and it betrays the party to whom it refers to come forward and relieve an honourable name from the deep stigma of having sold a bill on his own house, knowing that it would never be paid.—Ibid.

THE "GLOBE" INSURANCE OFFICE.—The Calcutta Star informs us, that the Globe Insurance office is the only one which has held aloof from the determination of the other offices to have nothing to do with ten months' bills.—Ibid.

DURBAR.—Yesterday, in the Government house, at 12 A.M., the Right Honourable the Governor-General held a farewell Durbar, which was conducted with pomp and splendour. A number of native soldiers were lined in front of the marble hall, at both sides of which body-guards were stationed, and behind the bearers of different Oriental insignia took their position. At first, Lord Hardinge attired in military costume, with the grand cross order, entered the "Khos-durbar" or private audience, and when he had taken his seat, the aides-de-camp, foreign, private, and military secretaries. Mr. Bushby and Col. Lawrence sat on his right-hand side, and the following gentlemen, viz., Rajah of Vizianagram, Rajah Radhakant Deb Bahadur, Raja Kalkrishna Bahadur, Raja Nursingbandra Roy Bahadur, Raja Rajnarayan Roy Bahadur, Raja Sotticharan Ghosaul Bahadur, were alternately presented before his lordship, who received them with kindness, and offered utter and paua. Afterwards, the Noble Lord stepped into the "Am durbar" or public audience, when the fort band played the national air, the soldiers and others simultaneously observed their respective obeisance. His lordship resuming the state chair, began to receive in succession the vakeels of several independent chiefs, Moghul and Hindostani merchants, moulaties of the Madrasa, law officers of the Sadder Dewanny Adawlut, the town kasees, baboos, &c. &c. On this occasion the Raja of Vizianagram, Baboos, Pratah Chunder Sing, Ishwer Chunder Sing, the head moonshee to government, Syud Jan, the principals of Calcutta and Hooghly Colleges, and others, were honoured with kheluts according to their rank and respectability. The head moonshee was also created Khan Bahadur, and obtained a patent under the great seal and signature of his lordship. His lordship in giving them all utter and paua, broke up the durbar with usual formalities.—Ibid., Dec. 17.

GOVERNMENT AGENT.—We are informed that Mr. J. G. Campbell is to succeed Mr. M'Clintock as Government agent. Mr. Campbell had obtained a furlough of the present year.—Hurkaru, Dec. 21.

POST OFFICE FRAUDS.—We have learnt from a credible source that the dawk moonshees of certain districts have been discovered to have paid for a long time the dawk bearers less than half the hire allowed them by the Government, and to have of course pocketed the money themselves.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

CASHMERE.—Abolition of Infanticide, Suttee, and Slavery.—A supplement to the Calcutta Gazette of last evening contains a notification by the Governor-General, embodying a proclamation by Maharajah Golaub Sing, of Cashmere and Jummo, prohibiting suttee, infanticide, and slavery in his dominions. This is a second proclamation on the subject, and we remember it was stated some time ago, that his Highness had denounced these barbarous customs of his nation and family as crimes. The Governor-General records his thanks to the Maharajah, and to twenty-three other Hindoo chiefs of various rank, enumerated in the notification, who during the last three years have cordially entered into the views of the British Government in suppressing these cruel practices.—Hurkaru, Dec. 23.

DELHI.—Sir T. Munro.—Capt. Sir Thomas Munro, Bart., arrived here last week, and having visited almost all that was to be seen in and round Delhi, returned towards Cawnpore on Sunday.

Arrivals.—Lord A. Vane, with Captains Cathcart and Draper, arrived on Monday morning, and Lord Gifford is expected to-day with Lord W. Hay and Captain Jocelyn. Mr. Currie, a nephew of Sir Frederick Currie, also arrived on Saturday on his way back from an extensive tour through the Himalayas and Kashmeer, and proceeds hence to Muttra, Bhurtpoor, &c.

— The Races.—Our races commenced yesterday, and are said to have exceeded expectation.

— Arrivals.—Dec. 11, C. Remay, Esq., supp. surg. Meerut circle; Lieut. B. Smith, engr. sept. Doab Canal.

— Departures.—Dec. 13, C. Remay, Esq., supp. surg. Meerut circle; Lieut. B. Smith, sept. Doab Canal.—Gazette, Dec. 15.

LOODIANA, 6th Dec.—Horrible Murder.—Mr. Stewart, a writer in the magistrate's office, was murdered here last night. On returning from the hotel, he got into an altercation with an Afghan, and struck him, and the Afghan drew his knife and stabbed him to the heart.—Mofussile, Dec. 10.

— The same Subject.—We learn that through the activity of Mr. Davies, the assistant to the commissioner and superintendent, the assassin of Mr. Stewart, a sowar in Davidson's Irregular Cavalry (the 16th) has been apprehended at Loodiana, an hour after the commission of his crime, and made over to the sessions for trial. Part of the clothes worn by him had been found, but no traces of the weapon (apparently a dagger) with which the deed was committed.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 15.

MALDAH.—J. K. Walter, Esq.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General has been pleased to authorize J. K. Walter, officiating civil assistant surgeon of Maldah, to wear the ribbon and medal presented to him by the Spanish government.

ODE.—"A little War."—A correspondent in Oude has informed us that a petty war has broken out in that territory. Shahgunj Fort, near Adjudia, has been besieged. Durshan Singh, son of Man Singh, late governor or chakildar of Sultanpore, has rebelled against the king, and already musters a force of 35,000 men. All the semindars near the Company's territory are opposed to him, and are headed by a nephew of Hural Singh, who was murdered last year by Durshan Singh. Some skirmishing has already taken place, and a few men on both sides killed.—Mofussile, Dec. 14.

RAJPOOTANA.—Dhoongur Singh.—Our latest advices from Rajpootana are to the effect that Dhoongur Singh and several of his associates were on their way to Ajmeer, there to be tried. Companies of the 6th N.I. and a party of Irregular Cavalry, are to be in attendance to prevent any attempt at rescue. It is expected the trial will last some time.—Brigadier Moore leaves Nussceerabad on the 27th instant.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 15.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

PAY OF OFFICERS IN HER MAJESTY'S SERVICE.

No. 386 of 1847.—The Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council having had under consideration the rules by which the Honourable Company's allowances are issuable to officers of Her Majesty's service, promoted in India and England, has been pleased to resolve, that officers of Her Majesty's service promoted in India by the Commander-in-Chief are not to draw the Queen's pay of the advanced rank until the promotion shall be announced in general orders as confirmed by Her Majesty; officers so promoted, however, will be entitled to draw the Honourable Company's allowances of the advanced rank from the date of their promotion by the Commander-in-Chief, so long as they continue to do the duty under such promotion.

Should the promotion not be confirmed by Her Majesty, the Honourable Company's allowances will cease from the date such cancellation appears in general orders in this country; the officer obtaining the vacancy will, if present in India, be entitled to the superior allowances from the succeeding day, with Queen's pay from the date of the London Gazette promoting him.

Officers serving in India who may be promoted by Her Majesty to fill a vacancy on the Indian establishment occasioned by a casualty occurring in Europe, shall be entitled to draw arrears of the Honourable Company's allowances retrospectively, from the date of promotion; the same as an officer in the Honourable Company's service, provided such officer has bona fide been serving in India during such retrospect, and subject to the same rules as regulate the Company's service, so that the military auditor generals are satisfied, there can be no double charge on account of such allowances.

COURT MARTIAL.

EXCHANGE.

Exchange has rather advanced in general, although for very first-rate paper former rates are maintained. Bills with documents are in good request, but scarce. Uncovered paper continues quite neglected, and in worse repute than it was before the arrival of the mail. Our quotations are, 1-10½ to 1-11½ for 6 months' sight bills with documents; Baring's 6 months' sight credits, 1-10½ to 1-11½; Bank bills, 60 days' sight, 1-8½, and 3 months' sight, 1-9½.

MADRAS. THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The following Table, illustrating the position of the Madras Civil Service at various periods, is extracted from the letter of a Correspondent of the Madras Spectator :—

COLLECTORS AND JUDGES OF ABOUT THE YEAR 1815.

Name.	Date of arrival in the country.	Rank and Appointment.	Date of standing in the service on being appointed.
Thomas Newnham ..	15th March, 1800 ..	Judge of Cuddapah	1st Sept, 1809	9 years and 6 months.
Rous Peter	26th July, 1801....	Collector of Madura	11th March, 1812 ..	11 " 8 "
Thomas Oakes	3rd Feb. 1802	Collector of Guntoor	24th July, 1812	10 " 5 "

John Sullivan	1st Dec. 1804	Collector of Coimbatore	27th July, 1815	10 " 7 "

Thus, about 1815, 10 years and 5 months was the average standing in the Service, on being appointed to a Collectorate or Judgeship.

ABOUT 1835.—

Chris. A. Thompson..	5th July, 1817 ..	Principal Collector of Nellore.	6th Oct. 1829	12 years and 3 months.
Fred. M. Lewin	6th August, 1819..	Judge of Salem	10th June, 1828....	8 " 10 "
Robert Eden.....	14th June, 1819 ..	Collector of Tinnevely	10th Feb. 1832	12 " 9 "

T. L. Blane	3rd March, 1827..	Collector of Cuddapah	14th Aug. 1838	11 " 5 "

Thus, about 1835, 11 years and 5 months was the average.

NOTE.—Mr. Thompson being appointed after a service of only 12 years and 3 months, to a principal collectorate, the pay of which was Rs. 3,333 a-month!

ABOUT 1845-47.

P. B. Smollett	14th June, 1836	Collector of Vizagapatam	9th April, 1846	19 yrs. and 10 months.

J. H. Cochrane.....	25th Jan. 1830	Collector of Cuddapah	11th May, 1847	17 " 4 "

Thus, about 1845-47, eighteen years and three months is the average standing in the service, before succeeding to a Collectorate or Judgeship—the highest rank, and with the exception of a few presidency appointments; for principal Collectorates and Circuit Judgeships were abolished in 1840-1843.

NOTE.—E. C. Lovell, who arrived 12th September, 1827, is Sub-Collector of North Arcot; G. A. Greenway, who arrived 11th August, 1828, Sub-Judge of Mangalore. These gentlemen are only acting in the superior grades, and are yet to be provided with a Collectorate and Judgeship, though they are nearly of twenty years' standing.

George Thornhill	7th April, 1843....	Do. Masulipatam ..	11th May, 1847	4 " 1 "

Average 5 years and 1 month.

NOTE.—R. R. Cotton, who arrived in the country 1837, A. M. Hathaway and J. Ratcliff in 1839, are yet to be provided with Head-Assistantships, though of 10 and 8 years standing!! the same length of time that only 5 years ago would have entitled them to Sub-Collectorates or Assistant-Judgeships, and when 10 or 15 years ago they would not have been considered singular in being appointed as Collectors and Judges!! vide above, the dates of appointment of F. M. Lewin and T. L. Blane.

From the above we learn that the following is the average standing in the service, at different periods, of those promoted to the respective grades:—

Collectors and Judges.		Sub-Col. and Asst.-Judges.		Head Asst. and Registers.
Years & Months.		Years & Months.		Years & Months.
1815	10 5	1830	5 5	2 3
1835	11 5	1840	8 5	3 7
1847	18 3	1847	13 11	5 7

The probable standing in the service required in 1850 | 21 years || | 16 years | 10 years.

It therefore appears, that only 1830, since the average before succeeding to the appointments of Collectors and Judges } has been { 7 years 10 months.
Sub-Collectors and Assistant-Judges } increased { 8 " 5 "
Head-Assistants } by { 3 " 4 "

LOCAL.

THE BANK.—Pursuant to public notice, a general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Madras was held at noon yesterday, to elect three directors in lieu of Mr. Key and Mr. Sladen, who went out by rotation, and Dr. Wylie, who resigned. Shortly after the hour appointed, six shareholders were in attendance, and Mr R. O. Campbell, of the firm of Messrs. Binny and Co., Mr. J. Ochterlony, and Mr. David Ross, assay master, were elected without opposition.—Athenaeum, Dec. 21.

THE PERAMBORE LINES.—It affords us the most unfeigned satisfaction to make the following announcement, which shows that our impression as to Lord Tweeddale's humane desire to remove the Perambore Lines was not ill-founded. A committee, composed of the Quarter-Master General of the Army, the Superintending Engineer, the Superintending Surgeon, and the Town Major, have been ordered by Government to report fully upon the ground at present occupied by the 51st Regt. N.I., and to ascertain if any other less objectionable sites can be recommended. We sincerely hope that their labours will lead to a satisfactory issue, and that no future inundations will find Sepey hats where they are at present situated, to flood and wash away.—Spectator, Dec. 28.

DEPARTURE OF THE GOVERNOR.—We learned yesterday, as a matter beyond dispute, that the Marquis of Tweeddale would proceed by the Fox, on the 15th proximo, via Moulmein.—Ibid. Dec. 23.

MOFUSSIL.

BANGALORE.—Anticipated Review.—We learn that the 4th Regiment N.I. have marched from Vellore to Hurryhur, and are expected to be reviewed by General Aitchison, at Bangalore, on their way.—Athenaeum, December 16.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.—A party of Effectives and Invalids of H. M. 15th Hussars left Bangalore on the 17th inst. en route to the Queen's Depot at Poonamallee, in charge of Lieut. Marshall, of H.M. 51st lt. inf. to wait an opportunity of proceeding to England.—Effectives: 2 sergeants, 2 corporals; Invalids: 1 serjt. major, 5 sergeants, 1 trumpeter, 22 privates; for free discharge: 3 privates, 3 children. Lieut E. G. Witty, of H.M. 25th regt. embarked at Calicut for England, on board the ship St. Lawrence, on the 12th instant, for the recovery of his health.—Spectator, Dec. 23.

BOMBAY.

MR. BONHAM, LATE GOVERNOR OF SINGAPORE, NOW GOVERNOR OF HONGKONG.

By a somewhat curious coincidence, in the same paper which contains the crowning act of the unwisdom of Sir John Davis, as related in the China Mail, our readers will find from the English papers a notice of the appointment of his successor, Mr. Bonham, of the Bengal civil service, late governor of Singapore. The past two years have opened up a new field for the ambition of Indian officers to aim at. In this space we have found Lord Metcalfe in Canada; Sir Henry Pottinger, first appointed to the government of the Cape of Good Hope, and then to that of the Madras presidency; Mr. Clerk, governor of Bombay; and Mr. Bonham, governor of Hongkong. Mr. Brodke, another Bengal civilian, likely to become more famous in the annals of our country than any of those we have named, owed his government to his own enterprise, not to the ministers of the crown. It is eminently creditable to the ministry that in all the cases we have named—to which may be added the Governor-Generalship of India and of Canada—the parties appointed have been opposed to them in politics. May we not hope that these are but fore-shadowings of better things to come, and that the most valuable appointment under the crown—the Governor-Generalship—will at no distant date be open to the servants of the Company. In reality, could Englishmen rid themselves of their prejudices, and look at the fact as it stands, the East is the only quarter of the world where in these piping times of peace experience in active affairs, either civil or military, is to be acquired. Here our own seems to bring all qualities, good or bad, more prominently forward and more rapidly to perfection, than in more chilly climes. Whatever is the characteristic of man's nature, whether good or bad, is brought out in stronger relief than elsewhere: the indolent becomes more slothful, the wicked more vicious, the stupid more dull, the active more energetic, the humane more benevolent, the intelligent more studious and enlightened, than in other quarters of the world. Officers, whether civil or military, obtain the best of all imaginable training—that effected by throwing a man on his own resources, imposing on him ample responsibilities, giving him a large task and large discretionary powers. Hence the eminence so considerable a portion of the Company's servants attain in every thing which dignifies and ennobles—hence the quantity of work performed in the East beyond the mere requisites of strict professional duty. The offices of the crown are unhappily too generally bestowed mainly on political considerations: it is not the man most fit for the place that is chosen, but he who has most political friends on the same side of the question with the ministers,—considerations of fitness indeed seem in general thrown overboard altogether. Amongst us, happily, factious feelings are unknown; we have no party claims to advance, for we have had neither means nor disposition to share in the affairs of party, and a selection made from those so circumstanced stands a double chance of being a good one.—Times, Dec. 29.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

THE BISHOP.—In our issue of the 8th instant we mentioned that the right reverend the Lord Bishop was expected to return to the presidency shortly before Christmas: we have now been authorised to state that his lordship will not return to Bombay before the beginning of April next.—Times, Dec. 18.

Mr. W. Escombe.—It is with deep regret that we have learned of the demise of Mr. Escombe, late Secretary to Government in the General Department. The sad event occurred at Marseilles. Mr. Escombe had proceeded on two years sick leave to Egypt, with a view of going to Europe should circumstances require, or otherwise guiding his movements as might be considered desirable. Finding his strength decreasing, and no signs of returning health making their appearance, he went to Marseilles, with the view of spending the winter in the south of France. He was in hopes of meeting his family on the way; and Mrs. Escombe accordingly started from England and pushed on by the Trieste route, not imagining her husband in danger, or likely to quit Egypt for a time. On reaching Alexandria she found he had left for Marseilles. Thither she immediately followed him, but all too late—he had been in his grave some time before her arrival. The following paragraph regarding him appeared in our Overland Summary at the time of his departure; we little thought in writing it that we were penning an obituary notice:—

“Mr. W. Escombe, Secretary to Government in the General Department, proceeds to Egypt for two years on sick certificate, or failing the relief we trust he will have experience, from Egypt to Europe. Mr. Escombe first became familiarly known to the public as a servant of the Government when in charge of the post-office in 1842. This department had then all at once had its duties more than doubled by the opening up of the overland mail communication: the extreme celerity with which despatches had to be effected both ways being in itself as novel and troublesome as the increased quantity of covers to be despatched. Though not of vigorous health or robust constitution, Mr. Escombe was a man of the greatest activity and energy—indifferent to the mere routine and forms of office which had nothing but antiquity to recommend them, and altogether regardless of those responsibilities, the apprehension of which interferes with so many improvements. The late lamented Mr. John Gordon had begun improvement—Mr. Escombe worked it out, and left for Mr. Gordon, who both followed and preceded him, the system since then in use; under which the establishment has, in the hands of the various most obliging postmasters we have since 1843 possessed, enjoyed so much popularity. In 1843 Mr. Escombe succeeded Mr. Morris as Secretary to Government in the General and Persian Departments, and here carried with him the high qualities he had previously manifested—those of a man of much activity, of excellent talents, large and varied acquirements, the utmost anxiety to oblige, with the most honourable uprightness of purpose.”—Ibid.

DEATH OF MR. S. TRACY.—The demise of this gentleman, who has been but comparatively a short time amongst us, gives another warning of the shortness of life and suddenness of removals in India. He came to Bombay in 1844 to join the house of Higginson and Cardwell. He had before this been a member of the firm of Messrs. Briggs and Co., of Alexandria, in which place he had long resided, and was much esteemed. He was a man of much intelligence, but of quiet and secluded habits. He had for some days been suffering from a bilious attack, from which no danger was apprehended, when he was suddenly cut off early yesterday morning, in the forty-sixth year of his age.—Ibid, Dec. 22.

APPOINTMENT OF SHERIFF.—We have heretofore accidentally omitted to mention the appointment of L. C. Rivett, Esq., to the office of Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year. He has been sworn in office, and assumed the duties of the shrievalty. We have before had occasion to speak of Mr. Rivett's gentlemanly and courteous demeanour,—of his industry and impartiality as a magistrate,—and his many other recommendations for a public appointment.—Times, Dec. 25.

HOW TO GET UP AN AGITATION.—Amongst the papers printed in connection with Sattara affairs is one which adverts to the enormous sums sent home for the purchase of agitation in England; nearly 40,000*l.* sterling appear to have been squandered by the ex-rajah in getting philanthropists to take up his cause! No wonder we have agitation when we have the means of requiring it so liberally. We should like to see a similar return in reference to the King of Delhi—or indeed to have the statistics of the whole of these matters before us. It would in that case be found that the grievance speeches bear a very close relation to the length of the purse of the aggrieved—that no patriot tear ever flowed, or philanthropic tongue was found to wag, for the wrongs of the injured poor. The injuries of the Amcers of Scinde are occasionally alluded to, but no more: our peridy to Dost Mahomed was never touched upon:—they did not pay!—Ibid, Dec. 29.

MOFUSSIL.

BELGAUM.—The 78th Highlanders.—We have letters of the 11th inst. from this station. Our correspondent mentions the prevalence of a rumour at Poona to the effect that the 78th Highlanders are to be turned over to the Madras establishment, their place at Belgaum being taken by H. M.'s 22nd foot. He adds that the same rumour was some months ago current in the regiment. This is the first time it has come to our ears, and we must say it seems to us far from probable.

—Arrivals and Departures.—Superintending surgeon Tawse had left on the 6th on a tour of inspection. Lieutenant Thompson, A.D.C., and son-in-law to General Hughes, and lady, reached Belgaum on the 7th.

—Review.—The review of the troops, which had been postponed on the 9th, owing to the delicate state of the health of the brigadier, was to take place on the 15th, beginning with the 78th.—Times, Dec. 18.

—Dec. 16.—Official movements.—The collector, Mr. Inverarity, is still out in the district, superintending the new line of road to Kolapore. Lieut. North returned yesterday to camp, after being out some time with the collector, assisting in the same duty. It is rumoured Lieut. North will probably remain permanently with us; indeed it is much wished, as the good he has done the cantonment generally speaks highly in his favour.

—Gaities.—The station was enlivened last evening with a ball and supper, given by Capt. Haliburton to the élite.

—Mr. and Mrs. Sandys.—The Rev. Mr. Sandys is on leave, it is presumed to take a farewell of his lady at Vingoria, as she is on the eve of returning to her native land, to restore her health. She will carry with her the best wishes of the community, especially those of the poorer classes of Europeans, to whom her kindness ready aid, and Christian benevolence, endeared her.—Ibid, Dec. 22.

NURBUDDA.—Coal.—We understand that Mr. Johnstone, engineer in the dock-yard, has been directed by Government to examine the coal beds on the Nerbudda and to the north-west; from which Lieutenants Evans and Dunsterville and various others have sent specimens.—Times, Dec. 22.

BOMBAY MARKET.

The commercial prospects of Bombay begin gradually, though slowly, to improve, and confidence between buyers and sellers has been partially restored. It is believed that much larger sales would have been effected, were it not that the internal exchanges of the country have taken an unfavourable turn, and that the Arab dealers' operations have been checked by the difficulty they have experienced this season in disposing of their horses. Rumours of failures to a large extent have turned out to be entirely without foundation—only one house having suspended payments under circumstances which will eventually occasion no loss to the creditors. Freights have declined to 3L 12s. 6d. notwithstanding the fact that tonnage is not plentiful. To China, Rs. 14 has been given.

SCINDE.

THE Affghans resident in Kurrachee are at present forming a Karee, with the view of bringing that part of the plain westward of the Tearee, and between it and the range of hills surrounding Muggur Peer, into a state of cultivation. The measure, if at all corresponding with the anticipations of the projectors, will prove of vast importance to our province, as the example will be followed by other speculators in the waste lands between Kurrachee and Hubb, and through the entire tract of country eastward from the head of the Mulien river to the sea-coast at present uninhabited. The natives of Scinde, whether Hindoos, Belooches, or Scindees, are too deeply sunk in apathy, ignorance, and poverty to be of much service in advancing the country for the next ten years; and for any measure involving the expenditure of money or skill, we shall have to look to people of other lands. Lest any of our readers should not know the meaning of the Karee, let it be understood that it consists of a succession of wells from the hill to the plain, with a tunnel underground connecting them, and calculated to lead the water to the lower ground. They are common in Affghanistan, and in parts of Persia.—Kurrachee Advertiser, Dec. 18.

A correspondent writing from Hydrabad on the 14th inst. gives the following information:—"The 9th N.I. has arrived by steamer; one wing on the 9th by the Comet, and the other in the evening of the 11th by the Satellite. An intervening detachment of recruits and attached men has also arrived; the whole marched to the fort, where they remain for the present. I have not yet ascertained their destination. Another detachment of the 7th also reached this on the 12th, and encamped on the Kotree side of the river; they marched yesterday morning for Kurrachee. I hear the small-pox is very prevalent amongst the men. Major Brown of that regiment died of the disease on his way down with a former detachment: his remains were interred in the Kotree burying-ground with the usual military honours; he was much regretted by his brother officers. The Honourable Col. H. Dundas, accompanied by his staff, passed through this a few days ago en route to Sukkur and Shikarpore. The colonel was expected to pay us a visit on his arrival, but he has deferred this until his return; he remained a day or two on the Kotree side with Captain Powell, and then proceeded in the Conqueror steamer. The superintending surgeon was also here, and whilst amongst us resided with the commissariat officer. We narrowly escaped a conflagration in the Kotree fort on the day on which Colonel Dundas was there. Fires were lit in the fire-places of the clerks' offices; one of the beams which crossed the room underneath the floor, was placed in the centre of the fire-place, and rested on the wall, caught fire, and but for the fortunate interference of some Europeans or natives the building would have been a victim to the devouring element: the nerves of the knights of the quill were terribly shaken. Fires are forbidden in these receptacles, and the blame consequently rests on the execution engineer's department. It is expected that the whole fort will fall a victim to the same destructive agent, in consequence of the infamous bad construction of all the buildings contained within its walls."—Gazette, Dec. 17.

SHIKARPOOR, DEC. 7.—Major Goldney, collector of Upper Scinde, was on the eve of starting for his usual tour through the districts. Islam Kham, the Boogtia chief, was to accompany him to Larkana, in order to take possession of his allotment of land to cultivate.—Alif Khan, native adjutant of the Scinde horse, was presented by Major Goldney with a splendid sword, as a reward for his judicious treatment of the Hill chief whilst escorting him to his presence. The deputy collector was to officiate during the absence of Major Goldney from head-quarters.—Meer Ali Moorrat had proceeded to Dejee-ka-kote, to remain ten days during the Mohoram, to distribute alms and perform penance.—Gazette, Dec. 21.

Our correspondent at Sukkur writes as follows, dated 16th December:—"The Hon. Co.'s steamer Conqueror, having on board the Hon. Colonel Dundas and his staff, arrived here yesterday at about one p.m. The colonel, I am happy to say, landed in good health under the salute of thirteen guns. Many poor folks are anxiously and impatiently awaiting the arrival of the worthy commissioner and the Hon. the Governor of Bombay, to lay their grievances before them for redress, as they have been really oppressed and deprived of their rights during the late arbitrary government; but influential people, I am told, give out that cases decided by collectors and others during the time Sir Charles held the reins of government will not be reinvestigated by the commissioner, which sadly frustrates the hopes and disheartens the unfortunate sufferers."—Ibid. Dec. 24.

We are sorry to record the sudden demise, at Kotree, of Byramjee

Framjee Punday, an active and enterprising merchant and agent. He arrived with the army under Sir John Keane, and has since then been one of the principal contractors for army supplies. He latterly visited the Punjab with the view of extending his speculations in that quarter, and was rapidly increasing his worldly wealth when death arrested his career. Byramjee was a general favourite. His cheerful and generous disposition has rendered his loss much regretted.—Kurrachee Advertiser, Dec. 25.

Small-pox has at last appeared in Kurrachee. This was to have been anticipated, as the 18th regiment, in which were numerous cases, marched through the camp, and were halted in the environs of the town for several days. Had the authorities had their senses about them, the regiment would have been embarked at Garra. The state of the 7th regt. we have not heard of, but as Major Brown is known to have died of the disease, we may presume his is not a solitary case. A cordon has now been established between the town and the camp,—a most futile measure, which can be productive of but inconvenience to the inhabitants. It is worthy of remark, that the cattle at Kurrachee have been for some time afflicted with a disease called by the natives mata, and known in Europe as the cow-pox. The meat of the cows so affected is regularly sold in the camp bazaars, as well as in the town, so that it is by no means improbable that this may be one means of generating the disease.—Ibid.

PERSIA.

In our last notice we endeavoured to portray the disorganized and rebellious condition of the Persian provinces, and the absence of sufficient means at the command of the Shah's government to stay the prevalent spirit of disaffection and plunder, owing to the refusal (we can hardly call it insubordination) of the troops to march towards the scene of disorder until some arrangement was entered into for the settlement of their just demands on the government. The indignities which we then described as having been inflicted upon the Shah and his minister, Hajee Meerza Aghassae, have been surpassed by latter events. The successful example of the artillery, who succeeded, by dint of their incessant clamour, when surrounding the Shah's palace and minister's private residence, in extorting from the latter a considerable portion of the arrears due to them, has, as we anticipated, found imitators among the other branches of the service. Shortly after the success of the artillery, a considerable body of infantry forced their way into the presence of the minister, while seated in an inner apartment of his own house, and with loud vociferations demanded their arrears of pay. The minister's threats and promises were alike disregarded by them, and matters would probably have proceeded to extremities, but for the intervention of Houssein Khan, the Governor of Fars,* to whose assurances of an early settlement of their claims they were more inclined to pay heed than to the promises of the head of the administration of the country. Three days after this emeute, another body of soldiery surrounded the minister's house, and refused to permit him to wait upon the Shah, keeping him in fact a prisoner, until they were pacified by the disbursement of a small sum of money in part payment of their arrears. At length, after much hesitation, and many paltry makeshifts, Hajee Meerza was induced to encroach upon the small remnant of the treasure accumulated by the late Shah. Seventy thousand toman were extracted from the royal treasury, and the more urgent claims of the troops were with this sum satisfied. The disbursement of this money, although insufficient to satisfy a tithe of the demand against the state (some of the regiments are stated to possess claims for arrears for eight years!) has proved that there is no want of readiness on the part of the Persian army to undertake the campaign, provided their just demands are attended to. A few days after the money had been paid, a further body of 4,000 infantry with 6 guns marched from the capital towards Khorassan, and about 1,500 cavalry were to follow. When this force joins the troops sent to Bestam in July last, the Shah will have an available force in the field of 6,000 infantry, 2,000 cavalry, and 18 guns. The artillery, it is supposed, will receive a yet further reinforcement before active operations are determined upon, as the coalesced chiefs can bring an equal number of guns into the field, and the chief reliance of the Shah's government is on this arm of the service, owing to the dread of Persian horsemen to act against heavy guns. Orders have been sent from Teheran to the governor of Kerman to create a diversion in favour of the Shah's troops by moving all his available forces towards Khorassan.

While these events were progressing at the capital, the first detachment of the royal troops sent in advance to Bestam made a forward movement to Kalpoosh, where Jaffer Kookee Khan, the refractory Toorkeman chief, lay encamped with his followers. A skirmish took place between the belligerent forces, in which four men were killed on the royal side, and fifteen of the Jaffer Kookee Khan's followers. The position was eventually evacuated by Jaffer Kookee Khan, and the Shah's troops took possession of it. To give an idea of the alarm excited in the minds of the Shah and his immediate followers, we may mention that this slight success tended to raise considerably the gloom and depression previously observable in all the members of the royal household. In fact it was confidently asserted in Teheran that the Shah had been extensively purchasing horses, so as to be prepared for the contingency of a reverse, in which case it was conjectured he would have fled to Tabrez, and thrown himself upon Russia for protection and assistance.

The report that the Salar (eldest son of the Asaf-eod-dowleh, late governor of Khorassan), and Jaffer Kookee Khan, had obtained possession of Kelat, is confirmed. They are busily engaged in provisioning it, with the ultimate view of retreating to it in the event of defeat. The report of Yar Mahomed Khan's march from Herat with a body of 4 or 5,000 followers has also proved to be correct. A sanguinary action took place near Killah between the Afghans and the Hazarehs, in which the former were victorious. Yar Mahomed has obtained possession of a town situated in the centre of the Hazareh country, and has likewise transported a large body of the tribe to the vicinity of Herat to colonize.

The Salar and Jaffer Kookee Khan have written to the Shah that they are his Majesty's devoted subjects, and that they have taken up arms merely to defend their lives against the machinations of Hajee Meerza Aghassae. They have added that if his Majesty will order his minister to retire to Kerbella (a mode of getting rid of a court favourite very commonly practised at Teheran, witness the compulsory pilgrimage of the Asaf-eod-dowleh at the instigation of Hajee Meerza) they will immediately lay down their arms and submit to his authority. The Shah has shown no disposition to adopt this advice, and notwithstanding the ruin which Hajee Meerza Aghassae is fast bringing upon the kingdom, his influence over his royal master is in no way diminished. This is the more extraordinary that he has not a single friend, coadjutor, or councillor at the Persian court.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 25.

BORNEO.

LABUAN AND BORNEO PROPER.—By the arrival of H. M. steamer Medea, we are in receipt of advices from Bruni to November 26th, and from Labuan to the 28th.

On the 21st his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief arrived at Labuan, and departed the following day in H. M. steamer Medea, on an inspection of the coal-pits. The 23rd he left again in the Medea to pay the sultan at Bruni a visit, accompanied by his suite, a guard of honour under Lieut. Morrison, the officers of H. M. steamer Medea, and H. C. steamer Phlegethon, in company. Owing to a low tide both vessels got on a shore near "the wall." The Phlegethon was got off, and on the day following the admiral shifted over to that vessel, and with his suite anchored off the sultan's house. A salute of 24 guns was fired and returned, the guard was drawn up on shore, the officers attending the audience in full dress. The admiral expressed his satisfaction to the sultan that every thing proceeded so quietly and regularly, also at the complete suppression of piracy in his neighbourhood. He likewise explained what was understood to be good faith between nations, lest his Highness should have any undefined notions on that subject, and demanded payment of a debt (which was of some standing and acknowledged to be due) to Mr. Miles, of several hundred dollars. This the sultan promised to pay forthwith, the commander-in-chief giving him significantly to understand that the world always considered the promise of a king sacred and inviolate. Many questions were put to his highness by the admiral in so clear and straightforward a manner that it gave no opportunity for the other to play the "artful dodger," and after being told by the commander-in-chief that he should think it his duty to see all debts to British merchants paid, and should take care that good faith on their part towards the sultan should be observed, they parted with mutual outward signs of pleasure and good will. The first kind offer the sultan made the admiral was a cigar, to the great amusement of the officers, and slight consternation of the worthy chief, who was thus rather placed "in a fix." The Medea next day, 25th, after much labour, was got afloat, and returned with the admiral and suite to Labuan.

* The mention of Houssein Khan's name as Governor of Fars shews that we were right in contradicting the assertion made in the Sindh Gazette that this appointment had been bestowed upon a brother of Aga Khan Mehlatce.

The Vernon is on her way hither, having left Labuan with the Medea, which towed that heavy frigate nearly 50 miles out, at a rate of from six to seven knots; some idea of the speed and power of this favourite steam-vessel may be formed from the fact that, notwithstanding the above detention, she performed the distance to Singapore in three days.

We annex the following from a correspondent who was an eye-witness of what he relates:—

“Bruni, November 26, 1847.”

“The advent here of his Excellency Admiral Inglefield has formed the most striking event since I last wrote to you by the Amelia. On the 23rd instant a report reached the sultan that the naval commander-in-chief was about to make a visit to Bruni. The old sultan, whose guilty conscience needed no accusing, was on the qui vive, utterly at a loss to account for the unsolicited honour about to be thrust upon him. So soon as the report reached Bruni that two steamers were proceeding up the river, his Majesty's heart failed him. He sent frequently for a Mr. Burns here, as to the object of the admiral, and ere he was satisfied that the advent was of a friendly nature, his Excellency landed, attended by a numerous staff, and a guard of honour composed of marines. The officers of the Medea and Phlegethon were in full dress. Most strangely did the cortège contrast with about 2,000 or 3,000, literally savages, whose spare clothing—if it deserve the term—cut a sorry figure around the display of gold lace, swords, and epaulettes displayed on the occasion. The sultan had invited the leading pangerans to the audience, who attended, accompanied by their numerous half-naked followers. To the Dyaks the assembly of so many officers in full uniform was a strange and imposing sight. The first compliments over, the admiral offered the sultan a pinch of snuff from a gold snuff-box; the wily old sultan took the box into his hand, and very coolly helped each of his leading chiefs to a ‘four finger and thumb pinch,’ emptying the box most adroitly, and shewing pretty plainly that he considered the box as his own share; the gallant admiral perceived the ruse, but being also up to snuff, took back the box to help himself. Not in the least behindhand, the sultan tendered the admiral and his suite each a cigar, but as H. E. did not wish the audience to end in smoke, he communicated, through an interpreter, a sound lesson on honesty and good faith—two courtiers not very frequent at the sultan's court. The claims of Mr. W. H. Miles were enforced; the sultan admitted the correctness of the debt. The sultan, it must be remembered, obtained goods from Mr. Miles to the extent of nearly 500 dollars; and pressing payment, the sultan made Mr. Miles a pangeran, or chief, and gave him a pangeran's flag; but postponed payment of the amount due. At the admiral's order the sultan promised to pay Mr. Miles in bullocks, some of which will be sent away in course of three days. The admiral required it to be done in twelve days, and spoke in such a tone as to convince H. H. that bullocks or bullets were alternatives. After a few other matters were discussed, the admiral departed; but H. E. had no sooner quitted the palace (!) than his Highness took an extra quantity of betel-nut, and sank into a sound sleep. A boat is starting for Labuan, so adieu.”—Straits Times, Dec. 8.

NEPAUL.

We announced last week, on the authority of rumour, that the old dynasty of Nepal was likely to pass away, and the raj to merge in the family of an usurper. We have now received information from a retainer of the ex, as well as the present maharajah, of a different character, from which we would infer that matters are not so bad as they have been reported, and that the demonstrations of joy and satisfaction throughout the country, on the occasion of the birth of a son in the family, are indications of loyalty and affection, that speak favourably of the security of the Guddi, and the happiness of its possessor. In the words of our informant, the Gudi Nashin Maharaja Diraj of Nepal was blessed with a child—a son—on the 15th of last month. This event has aroused the loyal feelings of the people throughout the kingdom, and given occasion for universal rejoicing and feasting. According to the usages of rajahs on such occasions, all the prisoners in the country were liberated, in order that joy might also reach their hitherto afflicted hearts. General Jung Bahadoor, and many Kardars, have offered addresses to his Highness, congratulating him on the jewel Providence has vouchsafed unto him. The whole kingdom was wild with enthusiastic joy. When the news of the child's birth reached Benares, the sons of the Maharajah, who are residing there, evinced a similar demonstration of joy, and not only feasted the notable Brahmuns of the city, but distributed the usual dakshina, a birth offering. There was also a gay and glorious mahfil, with the usual accompanying amusements of dancing and singing. Several of the kamdars imitated the example of the young princes, and our informant, who professes himself to be a devoted servant of the family, announced the event to several gentlemen of the station with offerings of sweetmeats.—Benares Recorder, Dec. 21.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

WEDNESDAY, February 2, 1848.

It is painful to announce the approaching retirement of a valuable public servant, and more painful when the step is rendered necessary by ill-health. We deeply regret to state that from this cause Mr. CLERK, whose official connection with Bombay as its Governor has afforded such unmixed gratification, is about to close his useful and honourable labours in that Presidency.

At a Court of Directors held yesterday, Lord FALKLAND was appointed to succeed to the office thus vacated. His Lordship is a nobleman not unknown nor untrained in official duties. He held the office of Governor of Nova Scotia for about six years, having been appointed thereto in 1840, and retired in 1846. He is in the prime and vigour of life, and will, we doubt not, do credit to the judgment of those who have now selected him for the exercise of power in India.

We really do nauseate the name of the Post-office. We write about its abuses till we are tired; and when, disgusted with the theme, we seek to forget it, we find oblivion impossible. The arrival of the Indian mail was telegraphed yesterday morning at eight o'clock—we obtained our packets at half-past three, and then only by sending a special messenger to obtain them. We should like to know how the intermediate time was employed between the Kentish coast and London—a distance perfectly inconsiderable, seeing that it is traversed by a railroad.

PARLIAMENT is about to resume its sittings, and ere long we shall be treated with another of those delectable exhibitions of hypocritical cant and selfish philosophy which have become the staple commodity of the Parliamentary market. The sugar duties will, at an early period, occupy the attention, or at least the tongues, of what is called “the great council of the nation.” We shall have fierce denunciations of slavery and the slave-trade, uttered in the same breath with declarations of the absolute necessity of buying sugar wherever we can get it the cheapest, and predictions that any attempt to discourage slavery by fiscal arrangements can end in nothing less than national perdition. We hate slavery—at least, we profess to do so; and profession is the sum and substance of modern political principle. We profess to hate slavery, but we have not even the decency to pretend that our hatred of it is strong enough to induce us to sacrifice three farthings in the price of a pound of sugar. We have abolished slavery in our colonies, and we have done well in regard to the end effected, though not wisely in regard to the means by which it was brought about. Of this subject, however, it is too late to speak. Slavery was abolished in our own colonies by a piece of hasty legislation, which, if it did not attest our political wisdom, at least might be viewed as an incontrovertible evidence of our sincerity. We refused to listen to the most modest representations offered with the view of inducing us to go rather more slowly and far more surely: go-a-head was the rule which we laid down and followed. Slavery was not to be tolerated in any form, or to any degree, or for any period of time, however brief; no interest was allowed to weigh a feather in opposition to its abolition. It was a doomed thing; down it was to go, and down it went—in our own colonies. Of course it followed that, having thus dealt with slavery when the interests of a number of our own countrymen were deeply involved, we could on no account strike hands with those foreigners who continued, not only to maintain it, but to engage in the accursed trade carried on for procuring an adequate supply of wretches born to work and weep for a short time, and then to perish under the combined operation of overtasking and the lash. It could not be conceived that, while detesting slavery in Jamaica, we should regard it with complacency in Cuba. Yet such is the consistency, such the morality of modern philanthropists and philosophers. To abolish slavery in the West Indies we brought a pretty good number of our countrymen to hopeless ruin. We lauded ourselves to the skies for this sacrifice; passing over, in our self-gratulation, the little fact that the sacrifice was on the part of a few, and that the great mass of the nation sacrificed nothing, but the minute fraction which constituted each man's share of the very inadequate sum paid to the West Indian Proprietors under the name of compensation. This was forgotten; we cordially patted ourselves on the back in admiration of our great philanthropy, and were melted even to tears at the contemplation of our own goodness. And then we turn round upon our solemnly recorded convictions, and avow unblushingly that if we can save a penny by turning them adrift we are ready to let them go. Cheap sugar we must have, though it be raised by blood. We care not where it may come from, nor how it may be procured; it is no business of ours to ask questions. We have washed our hands of slavery, and high is our pharisaical satisfaction thereat. But the sugar, which we know to be slave-produced, is just as sweet as that which is brought forth by free labour, while it is a trifle cheaper; and therefore we are prepared to go on supporting slavery and the slave-trade as effectively as if our money were directly invested in slaves and slave-ships. This is the morality of a receiver of stolen goods. He is no thief—not he. He is a respectable house-keeper, and pays Queen's taxes and poor-rates. He keeps a shop like his neighbours, and it is open to all comers, whether they want to buy or sell. When men bring him goods for sale, it is nothing to him where or how they got them. True he buys them cheap; but to buy cheap and sell dear is the very life and soul of commerce. If those with whom he deals are dishonest, it is much to be lamented; but their dishonesty affords no reason against his turning his capital to advantage when opportunity offers. If he were so scrupulous as to make inquiries, there are plenty of people in the world who will take in the proffered goods without, and there is no reason why he should suffer by being over nice. He looks only to price and quality, and has nothing to do with the question how those who supply him are able to sell so cheap. Such is the philosophy of the Fagans of this great country; and such is the philosophy of the country itself, as avowed by those who undertake to lead public opinion. It has, indeed, been put forth by one expounder of economical science in its most naked and disgusting form. The conductor of a journal, regarded by some as an oracle on all questions of political economy, some time since argued through an article of some length, that all that mercantile men had to do was to fill their pockets without regard to consequences. The morality of their proceedings he sneeringly intimated was to be left to the clergy. Their business was to get money, and that of philosophers like himself was to encourage them in their labours and their unscrupulousness. Surely a nation in which such doctrines are avowed and listened to is ripe for some signal manifestation of Divine vengeance!

From an article which we quote from the Friend of India, it would seem that Post-office abstractions are nearly as common in India as in England. In this country no person, one degree removed from an idiot, ever commits any thing valuable to the post if he feel the slightest interest in its reaching its destination in safety. But newspapers must, for the most part, be transmitted through the post, or not at all; these the Post-office officials overhaul at their pleasure and take permanent possession of such as hit their fancy. Such, too, according to the local papers, is the case in regard to newspapers transmitted to India. The illustrated papers appear to be particular favourites with Post-office readers. The love of pictorial art has extended to them in common with dustmen and chimney-sweepers, and they apparently think no more of gratifying it at the expense of the parties for whom the papers are destined, than do boys of robbing an orchard. The fine arts are said to be very effective in humanizing the minds of those brought under their influence, but that they have any tendency to make men honest does not appear. As, therefore, the studies most popular in the Post-office do not tend to promote this most desirable end, and as it is quite hopeless, as every one knows, to look for any measures of reform from the authorities that preside over that establishment, those who live at a distance from the place of publication for illustrated papers must be content to forego the pleasure of seeing them, unless some means can be devised for choking off the Post-office officials who forestall their gratification. It is difficult to know what to suggest. Perhaps it would not be a bad plan to raise a subscription to provide the employés of the Post-office with pictorial amusement in an honest way. They love pictures, and will have them in some way or another. Let those who receive (or hope to receive) illustrated publications through the post subscribe a trifle each for the purpose of gratifying the aspirations of postal functionaries to the possession of "Nature's counterfeits," and then they may perhaps be enabled to enjoy their own.

CANDIDATES FOR THE DIRECTION.

The following is an account of the services of the several candidates at present in the field for the vacancy in the Direction, which will be declared in April next.

MAJOR-GENERAL CAULFIELD, C.B., Beng. est., was appointed a cadet in 1798, arrived in India in the following year, and in 1800 was posted to the 5th regiment of native cavalry. In 1809 he came to Europe on sick certificate. In 1812 he returned to India, when he was appointed to the Governor-General's body-guard. He was engaged in the Pindarree war, and on one occasion Colonel Adams thus speaks of him:—

"The conspicuous gallantry displayed by the detached squadron of the 5th cavalry, under Captain Caulfield, which offer an exertion almost unparalleled, undauntedly pushed on to the attack of a body (of Pindarrees) more than tenfold its numbers, and which the approach of night alone appears to have prevented it from annihilating."

At a subsequent period the same officer thus writes:—

"The promptitude and judgment displayed by Captain Caulfield in conducting the pursuit, and the order and gallantry manifested by his detachment in so vigorously following it up, under the privations and obstacles they had to encounter, will no doubt be honoured by his lordship's approbation. The disproportion on this latter occasion was so enormous, that an opportunity could not have been more completely fashioned by fortune for displaying the judicious and intrepid decision of the leader."

This conduct drew forth the approbation of the Governor-General, G. G. O. April 6th, 1817. In the same year he was appointed major of brigade to the reserve of the Nagpore subsidiary force. During the Pindarree war he was deputed to reside in the camp of Jeswant Rao Bhow. On the fall of Asseerghur, General Sir John Malcolm bore testimony to the aid afforded him by Captain Caulfield. In 1819 he was appointed first assistant to the resident at Indore. In 1822 he was appointed to the charge of Kotah and Boondee, with the designation of political agent in Harowtee, on which occasion the Governor-General observed:—

"This Board is too well acquainted with the service of this zealous and meritorious officer, when vested with the political charges of Jewad, during the hostilities with the Pindarrees, to render it necessary to state the grounds of my selection. I am happy, indeed, to have this opportunity of placing him in a situation where his talents, temper, and judgment will, I am persuaded, be found eminently useful."

On the active part which he took in the suppression of the insurrection of Bulwant Singh, the Governor-General observed:—

"His lordship in council feels no hesitation in expressing his approbation of the judgment, energy, and decision with which Capt. Caulfield acted on the occasion."

In 1828, on his leaving the agency of Harowtee, Lieut. Myslop, the acting agent, wrote to Sir E. Colebrooke thus:—

"On Major Caulfield's taking leave, the Maha Rao was much affected. It was the same with the Raja Rana on the occasion of a parting visit which he paid to Major Caulfield previously to that gentleman's departure this morning. Each of them seemed to feel that he was parting from a tried and steadfast friend."

In 1829 he was granted leave of absence, on sick certificate; on which occasion the secretary to Government, communicating the intelligence to Sir E. Colebrooke, resident at Delhi, writes:—

"That the Governor-General cordially concurs in the sentiments which you have expressed in your letter to that meritorious officer, whose public services as political agent in Harowtee, are fully appreciated by his lordship in council. You will be pleased to intimate this to Colonel Caulfield, and to express the regret of his lordship in council at the cause which renders it necessary for him to retire from a scene where the public interests have derived so much benefit from his able and zealous discharge of the duties intrusted to his care."

In communicating this opinion, Sir E. Colebrooke observes:—

"I beg leave to avail myself of the opportunity for expressing the satisfaction which I personally derive from being the channel of communicating to you the high sense which his lordship in council entertains of your services, and his regret at the loss of them."

In 1832 the distinction of C.B. was conferred upon him; in 1835 he returned to India from furlough on private affairs; and in 1836 he was appointed Governor-General's agent in Moorshedabad, and in the same year superintendent of the Mysore princes. In 1839 he was appointed resident at Lucknow. His commissions bear date as follows: Cornet, 13th June, 1800; lieutenant, 11th March, 1805; captain, 1st September, 1818; major, 13th May, 1825; lieutenant-colonel, 26th March, 1829; colonel, 22nd January, 1834; major-general, 23rd November, 1841.

In 1844 Lord Auckland thus wrote:—

"I have no hesitation in saying that it was from the high character which you bore in the Indian service that I selected you for the very responsible post of resident at Lucknow, and that during your tenure of that office I had every reason to congratulate myself upon the excellent manner in which you performed both its military and civil duties."

Sir C. T. Metcalfe, writing from Canada, in 1844, says:—

"I can truly say that I entertain the highest opinion of your able and honourable services in India, in your civil as well as your military capacity."

HENRY THOMAS PRINSEP, Esq., was appointed writer to the Bengal Presidency May 8, 1808. On the 20th of July, 1809, he arrived in India. In the following year he was appointed assistant in the office of the registrar of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut. In 1811 he was appointed successively officiating assistant to the magistrate of Moorshedabad, officiating registrar of the city court of the same place, and officiating registrar and assistant to the magistrate of the Jungle Mehals, and assistant to the collector at Burdwan. In 1812 he was registrar of the sillah of Agra, and afterwards, in the same year, registrar of the zillah of Backergunge. In 1813 he became acting assistant to the judge and preparer of reports of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut. In the following year he was appointed assistant to the secretary to the Governor-General, and, subsequently, assistant to the registrar of the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut. In 1815 he was appointed superintendent of lawsuits; and in 1816 superintendent and remembrancer of legal affairs. In the following year he was on duty with the Governor-General on his tour to the Upper Provinces. In 1819 he went on deputation into the district of Burdwan. In 1820 he was appointed secretary to the Committee of Records, and, subsequently, secretary in the Persian department. In 1812 he became the officiating secretary in the judicial department. In 1829 he was appointed to complete the new code of Customs Laws, a member of the committee to investigate the charges preferred against Mr. Chippen-dell, and a member of the General Committee of Public Instruction. In 1824 he came home, and returned to India in 1826. Immediately on his return he was appointed officiating secretary in the territorial department. In 1827 he was appointed agent to the Governor-General in the Saugor and Nerbudda districts, and afterwards secretary to the Government in the General department. In 1831 he was on duty with the Governor-General in his tour to the Western Provinces. In 1832 he was made a director of the Bank of Bengal. In 1833 he became officiating chief secretary to Government, and in 1834 secretary to the Government of India and Bengal in the general, foreign, and financial departments. In 1835 he was appointed, provisionally, member of the Supreme Council. On his retiring from the council, he resumed the office of secretary to the Government of India and Bengal in the general, foreign, and financial departments. In 1837 he was appointed officiating secretary to the Government of India in the secret and political departments, and, subsequently, president of the Law Examination Committee. In 1840 he retired on an annuity; and in the same year he was appointed member of council, which office he retained till April, 1843. In 1842 he was president of the Council of Education.

WILLIAM DENT, Esq., entered the service as writer in 1814, and proceeded to Bengal in the following year. In 1817 he was appointed assistant to the collector of Allahabad, in 1818 assistant to the secretary to the commissioner of Cuttack, and afterwards officiating assistant to the collector of customs at Balasore, and assistant to the salt agent at Cuttack. In 1819 he was appointed officiating collector of customs at Balasore; in 1820 officiating registrar and assistant judge to the magistrats at Cuttack, and subsequently in the same year acting registrar and joint magistrate of Balasore. In 1821 he became, in succession, officiating collector of Cuttack, officiating magistrate of Balasore, deputy collector of Cuttack, officiating collector of Cuttack, and additional registrar and joint magistrate of Cuttack, stationed at Balasore. In 1823 he was appointed officiating secretary to the committee and assistant to the collector of Cuttack. In 1824 he successively became joint magistrate and deputy collector of Khoorda, acting collector of Cuttack, officiating judge and magistrate of Cuttack, and officiating deputy collector of Cuttack; in 1825, officiating collector of Cuttack, and assistant to the salt agent of Cuttack, and officiating secretary to the committee; and in 1826 joint magistrate and deputy collector of Balasore, and in the same year came home on furlough. In 1829 he returned to India. Shortly after his return he was appointed officiating judge of the Jungle Mehals, and in 1831 judge of Dewanny Adawlut of the Jungle Mehals. In the following year he became sessions judge of the Jungle Mehals. In 1832 he was appointed joint commissioner for the settlement of the affairs of Chota Nagpore and Palamow, special commissioner of the district of Bankoorah, and acting judge, magistrate, and collector of Ramghur.

In 1834 he was successively appointed to the officiating civil and sessional judgeship of Behar and Hooghly; and in the next year, civil and sessional judge of Shahabad. In 1838 he was appointed commissioner to investigate the charges against Mr. W. A. Pringle, and in 1840 officiating opium agent at Patna, and superintendent of salt chokies at Behar. Mr. Den resigned the service in 1842.

MAJOR J. A. MOORE was, originally, as we have been informed, in the royal navy, but on the conclusion of peace, proceeded to India. Obtaining employment in the service of the Nizam, his abilities and business habits soon attracted the observation of the Resident; he was entrusted with several important offices, and ultimately was appointed secretary to the Resident for military affairs; his duties relating to the troops maintained by the Nizam, but officered and disciplined by the Europeans, called the contingent. This force is always under the control of the Resident, who superintends its discipline as well as its movements, and even decides upon the finding and sentence of courts-martial, being the channel through which these are submitted to the Governor-General of India. After performing his duties with credit for some years, the Resident's military secretary obtained the brevet rank of major, and finally, upon his retirement, received, we believe, a pension from the Nizam's government for his services.

JAMES HANCOCK AUSTELL, Esq., was appointed writer to the Bengal presidency in 1825, and in the same year arrived at Calcutta. In 1830 he proceeded to Europe, and in 1833 returned to Calcutta. In 1835 he was appointed second member of the financial agency at Canton. In 1836 he became third member of the financial agency and officiating member at Canton. In 1837 he became acting first member, and in 1838 senior member of the financial agency. In 1841 he came to Europe on furlough and in the same year resigned.

JOHN CARRAC MORRIS, Esq., was appointed to the service as writer to the Madras presidency in 1818. In 1820 he was appointed assistant to the chief secretary to Government, in 1821 head assistant to the collector and magistrate of Masulipatam, in 1822 senior deputy secretary to the Board of Revenue, and in 1823 deputy Telugu translator to Government. In 1824 he became secretary to the College Board and secretary to the Civil Fund, and in 1825 assistant to the collector of sea customs to the Presidency. In 1829 he came home, and in 1831 returned to India. In that year he was appointed acting secretary to the Board of Revenue, and in 1832 secretary to the Board of Revenue and Telugu translator to Government; in 1833 acting registrar of the Sudder and Foujdarry Adawlut, and trustee to St. George's Church. In the following year he was made registrar to the Sudder and Foujdarry Adawlut. In 1834 he was appointed acting secretary and treasurer to the Government Bank, and afterwards acting sub-treasurer; and in 1835 superintendent and treasurer. In 1837 he became a member of the Mint Committee, in 1838 acting temporary member of the Board of Revenue, and in 1839 civil auditor and superintendent of stamps and Telugu translator to Government. In 1840 Mr. Morris retired on annuity.

GEORGE WILLIAM ANDERSON, Esq., was appointed, in 1806, as writer to the Bombay presidency; in 1809 he became assistant to the accountant-general; in 1810 registrar to the Court of Adawlut, and assistant to the magistrate of Tannah; in 1814 registrar to the Court of Adawlut of Broach; in 1815 registrar to the Court of Adawlut of Surat, and subsequently assistant judge of Surat. In 1821 he was appointed judge and criminal judge in the Western Zillah, north of the Myhee, and in 1822 judge and criminal judge at Surat. In 1825 he became judge and criminal judge at Poonah and Sholapore; in 1827 fourth judge of the Sudder Dewanny and Sudder Foujdarry Adawlut, and commissioner for civil and criminal justice in the Deccan; in 1828 acting second judge of the Sudder Dewanny and Sudder Foujdarry Adawlut, and commissioner for civil and criminal justice in the Deccan; in 1830 puisne judge of the Sudder Dewanny and Foujdarry Adawlut, and visiting judicial commissioner for the Southern Mahratta country, Deccan, and Candeish; in 1831 acting principal collector and political agent in the Southern Mahratta country; in 1833 puisne judge of the Sudder Dewanny and Foujdarry Adawlut. In 1835 he was appointed acting senior judge of the Sudder Dewanny and Sudder Foujdarry Adawlut; in 1833 judicial commissioner for the Deccan and Candeish; in 1834 senior puisne judge of Sudder Dewanny and Sudder Foujdarry Adawlut, and member of the Indian law commission. In 1836 he was made provisional member of Council, and in 1838 member of council, and chief judge of Sudder Dewanny and Sudder Foujdarry Adawlut. In 1841, by the departure of Sir James Carnac, Mr. Anderson became Governor of Bombay, which office he held till the arrival of Sir J. Arthur in 1842. In 1844 he retired on annuity.

TREATMENT OF COOLIES IN THE COLONIES.

(From the Trinidad Spectator.)

The letter signed "Curat Lex" we publish, believing our source of information sufficiently authentic; and, on reading it, we cannot help being forcibly impressed with the melancholy fact, that savage brutality is to be found elsewhere than amongst the lower orders of our population. When the fierce passions of men are aroused by violent provocation, there may at times appear something to palliate, although not to excuse, their exhibition; but what there was of this nature in the case before us it is not easy to see. A "lord of the soil" is indebted for labour to a poor coolie. He has not the high honour to pay for that labour when payment is due, but when asked for the arrears—in a manner not savouring of ferocity, although probably unusual, from the ignorance, on the suppliant's part, of our manners and customs—he gets either offended or afraid, and with high and noble courage repels the intruder with a lethal weapon, in such a manner as might have endangered his life. Strong efforts are being made to put down the use of the cutlass, as a weapon of offence or defence. Stronger efforts still must be used now, we true, that it has been wielded in this way by a justice of the peace.

It would appear also from the letter, that this humane law-giver stands not alone in his tactics. It is said that others attempt to defend such noble acts as "cutting down any one laying hold of their horse's bridle." We have heard much of the inhumanity of some planters towards the labourers, and particularly towards the coolie; but it wore a different aspect from this. What we have now seen, therefore, is but another melancholy proof of the soundness of the opinions we have already advanced: that, when labourers are brought here at the public cost, and are no longer wanted, there are very few scruples made about how they are used. Shame, doubly dyed it is, however, that they should thus suffer at the hands of those to whom is entrusted the administration of justice, and to whom they look for protection!

We make these observations altogether irrespective of persons. The individual implicated in the letter we do not even know; but it requires no powers of divination to see that such a character cannot with reason occupy such an anomalous situation as that which he now holds. Great discrimination and knowledge of the characters of men ought to be exercised in making such important appointments, and this will doubtless act as a warning in the future policy of the Government in this respect.

See.—A correspondent in a late letter to your independent and patriotic journal, signed "Fiat Justitia," mentioned that a friend of his had met some coolies, in the quarter of Couva, in search of Major Fagan, who was known to be in the neighbourhood, and whose heads were profusely bleeding from, as one of the poor fellows stated, cutlass wounds. Your correspondent added, on the authority of his informant, that the coolies named the man (?) who had so brutally used them, but as he was known to be a justice of the peace, and in whom consequently such conduct would be as indefensible as incredible, your correspondent thought that, in this part of their statement, there must be some mistake. As a planter of the colony, feeling that my character must be favourably or otherwise affected by the good or bad conduct of my brother planters, I deplore the painful necessity which compels me inform you that "Fiat Justitia's" informant was but too correct in his statement, as on Friday, the 1st of this month, I happened to enter the Couva police station, to see what was going on there, when, to my grief and astonishment, I found no less a personage than a magistrate, Mr. Justice Anderson, in the humiliating position of a prisoner on his trial before the Bench, consisting of Mr. Stipendiary Justice Knox and Major Fagan, and at the time receiving from the latter what Mr. Justice Anderson must have felt to be a painfully severe rebuke for his conduct towards a poor coolie labourer whom he had suddenly and unjustly discharged, and whose head he had injured by a severe blow, with the butt end of his whip, for merely taking hold of his horse's bridle to know from him when he was to receive the seven weeks' wages then due to him. As I listened to remarks which must have come home with such humiliating and painful effect to the bosom of the party towards whom they were addressed, and which, from the sentence subsequently so impressively pronounced by Major Fagan, the stipendiary justice, I believe to have been justly called for, I discovered that Mr. Justice Anderson was yet to undergo the ordeal of a second trial, for a more serious offence, that of cutting open the head of another coolie with a cutlass, the proceedings in which, as I learnt from the conversation among persons in Court, were to be sent to the Attorney-General for prosecution at the sessions.

It gives me considerable pain to add that it appeared from the strongly condemnatory remarks of Major Fagan, and which evidently told on the audience, that other parties, claiming respectability from their position, were heard to say that, like Mr. Justice Anderson, they would cut down any labourer who would lay hold of their horses' bridle. This is a sad, but with reference to hitherto tolerated oppressive practices and partialities, not surprising misconception as to the law of personal right. It is one, however, which, under that determinedly impartial administration of justice by Lord Harris which the colony, through the Naperima planters, has just proclaimed as a prominent characteristic of his lordship's government, must soon give way to the conviction, which events are everywhere producing, that the rank or social position of the party transgressing the law, will be regarded more as an incentive than as a bar, to such party being made answerable to its penalties, as in this case of Mr. Justice Anderson, upon whom was imposed the highest penalty the magistrate could inflict, not so much in punishment of the unhappy man for the offence of which he was so justly convicted, as that it might operate as a warning example to deter others from following in so dangerous and unjustifiable a course.

I cannot conclude without observing that Major Fagan, stipendiary justice, cannot receive too much praise for the apposite and well-timed remarks with which he wound up what he evidently felt to be a painful case—one which, for the honour of the colony and the character of its magistrates, I trust will remain on its records a solitary instance of the conviction of one of them for the infliction of wanton wrong and injury, where there ought to be only justice and protection exercised.

CURRAT LEE.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Jan. 22.—Smith v. The East-India Company.—In July, 1832, the plaintiff arrived at Madras as commander of the Company's ship London, which was then cleared and without any cargo. The plaintiff proposed to become the purchaser of certain cotton which had accumulated in the Company's warehouses, and to trade to China upon his own account. The terms upon which the commanders of vessels traded for the Company were these: the tonnage was divided into five parts, two-fifths of which were for the benefit of the captain and officers of the ship, 102 tons was what was called privileged tonnage and for the captain alone, but he had also a right to that portion (three-fifths) reserved for the Company, paying for the same such freight as the Company should require, which was usually about 2*l.* per ton, and the customary practice was for the captain to sign a bond to secure the amount of the cargo and such freight to the Company. The plaintiff having proposed to purchase the cotton in question, his offer was accepted, on condition that he should pay such freight for the occupation of the Company's three-fifths of the vessel as they should demand, for which he would be required to enter into sufficient agreement. To this the plaintiff objected, but the cotton was ultimately placed on board the vessel, on the understanding that he was not to pay freight for it. On the usual bond being tendered to the plaintiff for his signature, he discovered that he was thereby bound to pay freight for the cotton; but upon the assurance that such clause was merely a matter of form and would not be enforced, he signed the bond. The plaintiff proceeded to Canton and sold the cotton, for which he refused to pay freight; upon which the Company proceeded upon the bond, and it was to restrain those proceedings that this bill was filed. The chief question made was, whether the Marine Board was so authorized by the Company to act for them, as that the assurance that he was not to pay freight was sufficient to override the effect of the bond; and, if not, whether the plaintiff knew that their authority was limited to ordinary cases, and that they were not authorised to act on their own discretion in a case like the present.

Mr. BETHEL and Mr. STEVENS appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. STUART, Mr. LOFTUS WISRAM, and Mr. LLOYD for the Company.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, SIR L. SHADWELL, said that before he decided this case he should read through all the papers, as a most important principle was involved in it.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

JAN. 27.—Reg. v. Charretie, Young, and others.—Mr. COCKBURN moved for a rule to show cause why this matter should not stand over, and the recognizances be enlarged till next term, on the ground of the ill health of Sir W. Young. After some discussion, it was agreed that the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, who appeared for the East India Company, should on the morrow pray judgment, when Mr. COCKBURN should move for a new trial.

On the 28th, Mr. COCKBURN moved for a new trial on the ground of misdirection, and the verdict being contrary to evidence. A cadetship was not an office or appointment he said, but only an inchoate right to one in India. And no single director could appoint, he could only nominate and the court appoint.

Rule nisi granted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CHINESE LANGUAGE.—Professor Fearon will shortly resume his lectures on the genius and construction of the Chinese language, at King's College, London. Mr. Fearon is the first gentleman who has held the professorship; he delivered his inaugural address in April last, when we expressed our opinion of his high abilities, and we are happy to be able to confirm that opinion from subsequent circumstances that have come to our knowledge. From the peculiarly good opportunities of studying the language, which Mr. Fearon enjoyed whilst in the service of Government in China, there can be no doubt that instruction from him must be attended with great profit to the pupil.

MESSES. L. PHILLIPS AND SONS.—Satisfactory progress is making in the liquidation of this estate. A first instalment will be paid early in March.

FAKE OF GENIUS.—Homer was a beggar; Plautus turned a nail; Terence was a slave; Boethius died in gaol; Paul Borghese had fourteen trades, and yet starved with them all; Tasso was often distressed for five shillings; Bentivoglio was refused admittance into an hospital he had himself erected; Cervantes died of hunger; Camoens, the celebrated writer of the Lusiad, ended his days, it is said, in an alms-house; and, at any rate, was supported by a faithful black servant, who begged in the streets of Lisbon for the only man in Portugal on whom God had bestowed those talents which have a tendency to erect the spirit of a downward age; and Vaugelas left his body to the surgeons, to pay his debts as far as it would go. In our own country, Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Sir Walter Raleigh died on the scaffold; Spenser, the charming Spenser, died forsaken and in want; the death of Collins came through neglect, first causing mental derangement:—

Each lonely scene shall thee restore,
For thee the tear be duly shed,
Beloved till life can charm no more,
And mourned though pity's self be dead.

Milton sold his copy-right of Paradise Lost for fifteen pounds, at three payments, and finished his life in obscurity. Dryden lived in poverty and distress, Otway died prematurely, and through hunger; Lee died in the streets; Steele lived a life of perfect warfare with bailiffs. Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield was sold for a trifle to save him from the gripe of the law; Fielding lies in the burying ground of the English Factory at Lisbon, without a stone to mark the spot; Savage died in prison at Bristol, where he was confined for a debt of eight pounds; Butler lived in penury, and died poor; Chatterton, the child of genius and misfortune, destroyed himself; Scipio, one of the best generals of ancient times, never had a sous: Sir Harry Smith, the hero of Alwal, was always as poor as a church mouse!—Indian Paper.

LITERARY NOTICES.

A Practical Treatise of Chemical Analysis, including Tables for Calculations in Analysis. By H. ROSE. Translated from the French and from the Fourth German Edition, with Notes and Additions by A. Normandy. London, 1848. William Tegg, and Co.

This is one of the clearest as well as one of the most elaborate and complete works on chemical analysis existing in any language. Working on a base of extraordinary value, the Editor has, by the introduction of numerous additions and improvements, produced a book which entitles him to the fame of an original writer. This volume treats of Quantitative Analysis; the second, which is in preparation, will be devoted to Qualitative Analysis. When this latter shall appear, the student in chemistry will be furnished with all that he can desire in the way of literary aid to enable him to pursue his studies with ease and success.

Original Matter contained in Lieut.-col. Sutherland's Memoir on the Kaffers, Hottentots, and Bosjemans of South Africa. Heads First and Second, Commentaries and Notes on the Text used in the Compilation of the Memoirs. Cape Town, 1847. Pike and Philp.

COL. SUTHERLAND, an officer of the East-India Company, commanding the 2nd regiment of Bombay light cavalry, some time Governor-General's Agent in Rajpootana, and now Commissioner in Ajmere, being at the Cape on sick certificate, left the metropolis of that colony for the border, where he anticipated improved health. Not having any information as to the result of the experiment, we have only to hope that he found what he sought. Having had considerable experience (as he says in his letter to Mr. Montague, the Colonial Secretary) with the Bheels and other tribes who do not strictly adhere to the laws of meum and tuum, he was led to observe and inquire into the habits and condition of the Cape border tribes. In these researches he was greatly assisted by the Government agents, residing at a city, town, village, or hamlet, with the pretty vowel-name of Tyumie. The result of all this was, that the gallant Colonel arranged the matter he had collected from personal observations and reading, and forwarded it to Government. It has since been published, and now lies before us, a portly, pleasant, and very instructive volume. It is divided into three heads, in the somewhat curious order of second, third, and first. We shall speak first of the last. This contains a full and most interesting account of the tribes, from 1660 to the present time, and is very ably and agreeably written. The first part of this head is devoted to the history of the Kaffers and the handsome race of Hottentots, whose royal family appear to have wofully neglected their education, as it is quite common in the treaties, &c. to find a mark X in place of the august and euphonious names of Gyka, Tehachoo, Apaga, Kassa, &c. &c. The second part of the first head is devoted to the Bosjemans, and informs us of the great hardships which they suffered from the Dutch. On the proceedings of the Dutch Government in March, 1689, Col. SUTHERLAND observes:—

"There is at all events some fun in the Cape records of this month: first, the commander's declared resolution in council to give one of the sheep bartered from the Inqua Hottentoots to each of the members of his council; secondly, the drunkenness of the secretary of the court, which prevented his preparing for signature the sentence which had been passed on a culprit; his instantly saying to the governor 'Don't beat me,' when his honour was labouring him with a stick, and the governor then throwing at the secretary's insolent head the cushion of a chair; thirdly, the governor's resolution to send to Saklanah's Bay three or four men to oppose the threatened invasion of the Namaquas and Griquias, with instructions to tell those tribes to leave the Company's Hottentoots alone, else they would be forcibly expelled."—P. 438.

This was certainly an easy way to prevent invasion, though it may be doubted if it would deter our fiery neighbours from paying us a visit. The second head is occupied with a scheme for forming a frontier brigade. The author proposes to employ the natives as in India. The details of his plan we have not time to discuss, nor even to allude to. The third part treats of the existing treaties between the Dutch and our own Government and the Kaffers, with proposed amendments, &c. The work is altogether very original and entertaining.

Remarks on the Present State of our West Indian Colonies, with Suggestions for their Improvement. London, 1848. Smith, Elder & Co.

This is one of the soundest as well as one of the most vigorous pamphlets that we have seen for a long time. It is a regular smasher. The author has a complete acquaintance with the facts of the case which he discusses, and possessing powers both of reasoning and language more than equal to the duty, he demolishes his opponents with the ease of a giant knocking down flies. The tract deserves to be universally read, and in order to promote this good end, we beg to intimate, (since cheapness is the order of the day), that it is not only very good, but withal very cheap.

We quote a few passages by way of sample of its quality, and we should much like to meet with an answer to them.

In 1832, slavery was depicted as a sin and a crime: it was denounced as a stain upon the national honour; as a blot on the conscience of the people of this country, from which, at all hazards, and at whatever cost, they must be freed. We did not even ask the planters what were their feelings upon the subject. Nor would it have satisfied our scruples to have declined for ourselves the receipt of this slave-polluted produce; leaving to the planters the responsibility, if they thought fit, of continuing the use of slave-labour, and resorting with their produce to the markets of other countries where no such objections might have existed. No: the abolition of slavery was declared to be a matter of principle; to which all considerations of cost, or time, or aught else, must be altogether postponed.

Who could have dreamt that before eight years should elapse from the final completion of that memorable measure—as if to humble our national pride, and tarnish the fame of this boasted act (of which hitherto we had received all the praise, whilst the much-abused planters were left to sustain almost all the loss),—another act should be passed by the British Parliament, at the instance of the Ministers of the Crown, for the purpose of admitting into the markets of this country the slave-grown sugars of other nations? Slavery and the slave-trade being active in Cuba and Brazil, it was discovered that their sugars might be purchased at a penny the pound cheaper than those of our own free-labour colonies; and it was calculated, moreover, that we might derive some addition to the national exchequer by the transaction!

If it were right to have denounced slavery and the slave-trade as sins and crimes in 1833, what is to be said of setting ourselves to work in 1846 to derive a profit from the commission at second hand of these very crimes! If it be right to pursue the slave-dealer on the coast of Africa, and bring him to trial as a pirate and a robber, what is to be said of sharing the profit of his cheap and polluted gains across the ocean!

But we protest our undiminished hatred of slavery and the slave-trade: we wash our hands from their blood and guilt! Why, it is said, should we “interfere with the internal government of independent nations?”

A hollow-hearted protest against slavery and the slave-trade! As if that could palliate a willing partnership in their guilty gains! What! will it be maintained that the cheap advantage of slave-grown sugars, when other sugars may be had, does not involve all the responsibilities of slavery and the slave-trade? Much more guilty surely are they who condemn the act, yet do not hesitate to incite to the crime, than the more ignorant men who are the active instruments. Even the historian of the Peloponnesian war could tell us, “Not to the men who rivit on the chains of slavery, but to such as, though able, yet neglect to prevent it, ought the sad result with truth to be charged.” But to better purpose, a distinguished writer and divine of our own country, no less clearly expresses himself: “And, therefore, I shall return plainly to press the doctrine of simplicity, which ought to be so sacred, that a man ought to do nothing indirectly, which it is not lawful to own; to receive no advantage by the sin of another, which I should account dishonest if the action were my own.”

We invite foreign nations to join us in suppressing this great crime. Suppose a tribunal to be formed for this purpose by all the great powers. How should we appear before it, as both judges and accusers of the criminal, if it should turn out that we ourselves, in our own markets, supplied the chief incentives to the crime! Would it be seemly that an accessory to crime should sit in judgment on the criminal!

If cheap sugar, without regard to its production, was to become the object of our policy, why did we destroy the cheap slave-labour of our own Colonies?

If slavery were not an evil of intolerable magnitude, what right had we to compel our planters to emancipate their slaves, at any hazard or expense to them?—in defiance of the consequences which they predicted; and which experience has fully confirmed?

If, on the other hand, slavery be an evil of that magnitude which our public professions and previous conduct declare it to be, then what plea is to be found for the deliberate commission of that crime on our own part?

In truth, these passages place those persons who are at once professed enemies of slavery and advocates for the use of slave-grown sugar, in what Jonathan calls “a fix,” and we leave them to get out of it as best they may.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES.

NEW HINDUSTANI DICTIONARY.

IN ONE VOLUME ROYAL OCTAVO, PRICE £2. 12s. 6d.

A DICTIONARY

HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH & ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI.

By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.,

Professor of Oriental Languages in the King's College, London; Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland; Member of the Asiatic Society of Paris; and author of several Works on the Hindustani and Persian Languages.

This work has been undertaken in order to meet the exigency of our day—viz. a copious and portable Hindustani Dictionary at a moderate cost. It has been the compiler's aim to accomplish this object, not by the omission or abridgement of any words and phrases, but by the adoption of a small, distinct, and economical type, whereby he is enabled to lay before the public, in one volume royal octavo, of about 1,000 pages, the most complete Hindustani Dictionary yet offered for sale. The first part—Hindustani and English—may now be procured. It contains more words (by some thousands) than have ever been previously collected in one work by former compilers. The second part—English and Hindustani, which will be completed in May—is also by far the most copious of the kind that has yet appeared. The author having devoted the greater portion of his life to the study of the Oriental languages, and upwards of twenty years to instructing others therein, has had every advantage in the compilation of this laborious book, which he trusts will not be deemed unworthy of extensive patronage.

&c., No. 167, PICCADILLY, LONDON, avail themselves of the present opportunity gratefully to acknowledge the patronage which they have received for so many years from their numerous connections in India, and to solicit a continuance of that preference which it has ever been their endeavour to deserve. At the same time, they beg to state that, from their very severe losses, they are compelled to decline the execution of any orders unless accompanied by an order for payment (when shipped) upon some agent or mercantile house in London.

AGENTS IN INDIA.

Calcutta Messrs. Robinson, Balfour, & Co.
Madras Messrs. Line & Co.
Bombay Messrs. Ritchie, Stuart, & Co.
Ceylon Messrs. Ackland, Boyd, & Co.

The following peculiar advantages are offered by this Company:—

1. Their policies cover the risk of living and voyaging over a far larger portion of the globe than do those issued by any other Company in existence. They allow the assured to reside in the Australian and North American colonies, and at the Cape of Good Hope. They also allow to the assured for the whole of life one passage out and home to any of those colonies. For British India a very moderate extra premium is charged, and the premium is reduced to the English scale on the return of the assured life to England for permanent residence.
2. Premiums may be paid, and claims settled at Sydney, where there is a Board of Directors and Trustees; and at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, where there are Agents.
3. A third of the premiums may remain unpaid for five years; nor is it necessary for the maintenance of the Assurance to pay up the premium at the end of that time, but the unpaid thirds may remain as a debt against the policy, if the interest be regularly paid upon them as the renewal premiums fall due.

ANNUITIES.

The Annuities offered by the Company are on a more favourable scale than those offered by any other Companies, having been calculated with reference to the rates of interest obtainable on Colonial Investments. Annuitants also participate in the profits.

WOUNDS IN A LEG THAT HAD BEEN BAD FOR YEARS CURED BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.
—Mr. W. Darling, of Strickoke-by-Wick, had suffered very severely for a long time with deep wounds in his leg, and in his endeavours to get them healed he obtained the advice of many eminent surgeons, and tried almost every remedy, yet all failed to effect a cure, until he used Holloway's Ointment and Pills: these invaluable medicines alone healed his leg in a few weeks, and it is now as sound as ever. Holloway's Ointment is a safe and certain cure for old wounds, burns, scalds, tumours, chilblains, and unnatural swellings. Sold by all druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 12th May, 1847, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums. This will be found a liberal reduction if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

DAVID JONES, Actuary.

R. WEDGEWOOD'S PATENT MANIFOLD

R. WEDGWOOD, established forty years, for copying letters, invoices, &c., in duplicate and triplicate. The invention completely supersedes the use of the ordinary pen and ink; it produces a letter and its copy at one operation, both as plain and indelible as if written with the blackest and most permanent ink, or, if required, a letter with duplicates and a copy, all in durable ink, and with a pen that requires no repairs. It is so simple in its operation, that the aged and infirm can use it with the greatest ease; is cheap and portable in construction, and affords an immense saving in time and expense to merchants, bankers, and solicitors, and indeed to all who have occasion to write much, and who desire to retain copies of their letters, or send duplicates abroad. Was patronised by their late Majesties King George the Third, George the Fourth, and William the Fourth; by the late Emperor Alexander of Russia, who presented the inventor with a superb diamond ring of great value; also by British and Foreign Ambassadors; the Observatories of Greenwich, Edinburgh, Cape of Good Hope, &c., and persons of rank, science, and ability, in situations official and commercial, from whom the patentee has received numerous voluntary testimonials of its utility.—Manufactory, 4, Rathbone Place, London.—Agents at Calcutta, W. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, and D. WILSON and Co.—Orders received direct, or through the houses of agency in London.

C. F. confidently recommends to Gentlemen composing the Military and Civil Service in India, his improved quick train, compensated, duplex, and lever flat Watches, in hunting cases, which are so constructed as not easily to be disturbed by riding or other strong exercise, and cannot be surpassed for durability and elegance. ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.—The unprecedented success of this discovery in restoring, improving, and beautifying the Human Hair, is too well known and appreciated to need comment. The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, and the high esteem in which this Oil is universally held, together with numerous testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proof of its merits.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.—An Oriental Balsamic Preparation of singular efficacy in thoroughly purifying the Skin from all Pimples, Spots, Blisters, Redness, Freckles, Tan, and Discolorations; in producing a healthy freshness and transparency of Complexion, and a softness and delicacy of the Skin. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Beware of spurious "KALYDOR," which contain mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the complexion, and by their repellent action endanger health.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a white Powder for the Teeth, compounded of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental Herbal, of inestimable virtue in preserving and beautifying the Teeth, strengthening the Gums, and in giving sweetness and perfume to the Breath.—Price 3s. 9d. per box.

ROWLANDS' ALSANA EXTRACT, for the Tooth-ache, Gum-boils, and Swelled Face, and which, by constantly using, prevents those maladies. In the anguish of excruciating pain, it affords instantaneous relief. Perfectly innocent in its nature.—2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. per bottle.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 30, Hatton Garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, who, to compounds of their own manufacture, give the titles of "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto;" some under the implied sanction of Royalty and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials (substituting fictitious names and addresses for the real of the original preparations. The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," are "ROWLANDS'" and the wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS'" preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus:—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

By order of the Court,

W. W. CARGILL, Chief Manager.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL, MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRACTORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced workmen) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus preventing MILITARY and NAVAL OFFICERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAILING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessities to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burthened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DEPARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL. THE SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. THE WORKSHOPS for Clothing, at 4, Bishopsgate-street Within; for SHIRTS and CABIN FURNITURE, at 33 and 34, Nassau-place, Commercial-road; and for SHIRTS, STAYS, BRACES, &c., at LANDPORT, near PORTSMOUTH.

STEAM to INDIA and CHINA, via EGYPT.—Regular Monthly Mail Steam Conveyance for Passengers and Light Goods to Ceylon, Madras, Calcutta, Penang, Singapore, and Hong-Kong.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company book Passengers and receive Goods and Parcels for the above Ports by their Steamers, starting from Southampton the 20th, and from Suez on or about the 16th of every month.—For rates of passage-money, names of the steamers, and to secure passage, apply at the Company's offices, 41, St. Mary Axe, London.

NOTICE to SHIPPERS of GOODS and PARCELS, per Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Steamers to INDIA and CHINA.—Goods and Parcels sent direct to the Company's Parcel-office are forwarded at less cost to Shippers than when sent through any intermediate channel. Packages are received up to the last day of the month to go by the mail of the 3rd, and till 6 p.m. on the 17th of each month for the mail of the 20th. Cases must not exceed 100 lbs. weight each for Aden, Ceylon, Madras, Calcutta, and China; and 50 lbs. each case for Bombay. No Package for India or China can, under any circumstances, be shipped at Southampton, unless it be cleared through the Custom-house, and placed alongside the Steamer by noon, on the 16th of each month.

Detailed particulars will be given on personal application, or by letter, addressed to the Company's Parcel Office, 41, St. Mary Axe, London.

ECONOMY IN OUTFITS.

MONNERY and Co.'s, 145, Fenchurch-street, City, where a large assortment of Shirts, Hosiery, Gaiters, Marine under-Shirts, Clothing, Bedding, Military Accoutrements, &c., adapted for each particular colony, as well as for the voyage, is kept ready for immediate use, at prices far more reasonable than usually charged for the same articles. EAST INDIA and GENERAL AGENCY, No. 127, Leadenhall-street (opposite the East-India House).

W. M. BOYCE and CO. in returning thanks to their friends and supporters for the liberal patronage already bestowed on them, beg to intimate that their offices are now established at No. 127, Leadenhall-street.

W. M. BOYCE and Co. continue to forward supplies and goods of every description to Messrs, Families, and Individuals, on the most moderate terms, by the Cape or Overland. Passages to the Three Presidencies, or China, by sailing vessels, via the Cape, or by steam, via the Red Sea, negotiated on the most favorable terms.

Outfits for Officers appointed to the Civil, Military, Naval, or Medical Establishments in India, procured with every attention to economy consistent with the supplying of first-rate articles.

PAY and PENSIONS drawn and remitted to any part of Great Britain or the Continent. Luggage cleared and warehoused, and Parcels and Letters forwarded Overland to India.

In order to render their agency as efficient as possible, W. M. B. and Co. would call particular attention to the following points, which they consider of great importance, not only to their friends, but to the public generally.

It frequently occurs that gentlemen residing in India are compelled to send their wives and children home, and remain in India themselves. Circumstances often compel ladies and children to land in England without any one to receive and relieve them from the troubles and annoyances attendant on disembarkation, after a long and fatiguing voyage, and the clearing of their luggage through the Custom-house. In order to meet these cases, one of the Firm is prepared to attend any so situated, personally, and to escort them to their friends. Parties wishing to avail themselves of this accommodation should communicate their intention, in writing, by the Overland Mail, in sufficient time to admit of proper arrangements being made for their reception. Parents in India wishing to send their children to England for education, and unable to accompany them, may avail themselves of W. M. B. and Co.'s agency, who will undertake to receive them, place them at school, and act as guardians, if necessary. If requisite, reference can be given to parties who have already availed themselves of this arrangement. Inconvenience is often felt, and great expense incurred, in consequence of families arriving from India without having previously decided upon a place of residence. This may be obviated by timely application to BOYCE and CO., who are prepared to engage permanent or temporary residences for all parties arriving from India.

A residence of upwards of twenty years in India, the greater portion of which was passed in the East India Company's naval service, renders the head of the Firm peculiarly fitted for the business which is now sought, and which is merely reverted to here as a guarantee that the most scrupulous attention to the interests and wants of their supporters will be attended with the advantage of being able to impart, from actual experience, any information which may be required relative to India.

TO FLAUTISTS.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET,

OXFORD STREET, LONDON (SOLE MAKER of the CELEBRATED CHARLES NICHOLSON'S FLUTES), takes this opportunity to inform the Musical Public in India and the Colonies that he now also manufactures Flutes on the principle of the talented Flautist, JOHN RICHARDSON; therefore all future orders should state whether a "NICHOLSON" or "RICHARDSON" Flute is required.

These instruments possess a remarkable brilliancy of tone, and are perfect in intonation and tune in every key; the superiority of style in the finishing department leaves nothing to be wished for by the connoisseur, and the plan adopted only by T. P. of seasoning the wood for extreme climates renders these instruments far superior to any others now manufactured.

The prices are the same as for the "Nicholson's" Flutes, and vary, according to their number of keys, from 11 guineas to 30 guineas; and purchasers, to prevent their being imposed upon, will receive a certificate, signed by the approver and maker, thus—JOHN RICHARDSON and THOMAS PROWSE.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or by an order through their agent in London.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

No connection with any other House in England.

BOOTS FOR INDIA.

J. TROY (late of STUNTS'), ANATOMICAL BOOT

MAKER, No. 376, Strand, London, begs to acquaint officers and gentlemen in India, that he has discovered a new process in the preparation of leather for Boots and Shoes, which renders it soft and pliable as kid, and as durable as calf; it is not affected by any degree of heat, will take a brilliant polish by the common method of cleaning, and is free from that disagreeable creaking noise so often complained of.

T. TROY also begs to call attention to the fact, that bad fitting boots, however large, are not easy, but cause sores and swellings in the joints, which are very difficult to be got rid of. He respectfully states that his anatomical knowledge of the foot enables him to combine ease with neatness, and that he only requires the measure and description of the foot to insure a natural-fitting and gentlemanly-looking boot. His prices are moderate, and his goods of the finest quality.

DIRECTIONS FOR MEASURING.

1. The number of inches round the ball or joints of the foot. 2. The number of inches round the instep. 3. The number of inches round the heel to the upper part of instep. 4. The length of foot when sitting. 5. The length of foot when standing. 6. Round the calf. If there be any peculiarity about the foot, lay it on a sheet of paper and mark round it with a pencil, giving thereby its exact form; or, if an old boot can be forwarded, nothing more will be required to insure a good fit.

Prices.—Wellington Boots, of the prepared leather for India, 30s. per pair; ordinary, 28s.; Shooting Shoes to buckle, 18s. to 20s. per pair.

Orders to be forwarded to J. TROY, 376, Strand, London.

STOOPING of the SHOULDERS and CONTRAC-

TION of the CHEST are entirely prevented, and gently and effectually removed in Youth, and Ladies and Gentlemen, by the occasional use of the IMPROVED ELASTIC CHEST EXPANDER, which is light, simple, easily applied, either above or beneath the dress, and worn without any uncomfortable constraint or impediment to exercise. To young persons especially it is highly beneficial, immediately producing an evident improvement in the figure, and tending greatly to prevent the incursion of pulmonary diseases; whilst to the invalid, and those much engaged in sedentary pursuits, such as reading or studying, working, drawing or music, it is found to be invaluable, as it expands the chest and affords a great support to the back. It is made in Silk; and can be forwarded, per post, by Mr. ALFRED BINYON, Sole Manufacturer and Proprietor, No. 40, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London; or full particulars, with prices and mode of measurement, &c. on receipt of a postage stamp.

WM. THOS. ROBINSON, Actuary & Secretary.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventative of the many diseases arising from check of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. This manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats; the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all irritating or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and the very general approval and consequent demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vigonia, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 122, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glennen undertake to forward them in dozens or half-dozens to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free, at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 7s. per dozen, and Ladies', 6s. per dozen, and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 15s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 18s. per dozen to Bombay.

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

THE PUNJAB, which for many months past has contributed so largely to our semi-monthly budget of intelligence, yields not a single particle of information.

THE GUICOWAR, whose death was reported in our last, has been succeeded in the government by his eldest son. The deceased Prince was in the forty-eighth year of his age.

The noted robber, RAGOJEE BANGRIA, has shared the fate of his brother-practitioner, DOONGHUR SINGH, and been compelled to yield to his pursuers. This gentleman seems to have enjoyed an hereditary title to the exercise of his occupation. His grandfather was hanged, his father transported for life. At one time, it is said, RAGOJEE was disposed to turn honest, and, like a reformed thief, employ himself in the capture of those who engaged in free trade; but the tender of his services was not accepted, and accordingly he "took to the road," to which he had been bred, and carried on business in that way till his course was arrested by the untoward interposition of British authority. The mode of his capture is thus described:—

"This redoubted outlaw has been run to earth, and made sure of at last. On the 31st December, Lieutenant Gell, Adjutant of the Ghaut Light Infantry, accompanied by a few men of his corps, disguised as peasants, started from Tanna, and surprised and apprehended the robber-chief at Punderpore on the 2nd inst.—a distance of nearly two hundred miles. On Wednesday, the 5th, he was safely lodged in jail at Tanna. The matter was cleverly and gallantly managed, and this is the third or fourth occasion during the short period he has held the appointment that Lieutenant Gell has distinguished himself for promptitude and intrepidity in a way which sufficiently indicates the excellency of the selection made of him by the Governor, brought about solely by a belief in his qualifications for the duties assigned him. Ragojee had not only levied a heavy assessment on Government and on the community in the districts over which his operations extended, but kept the Nuggur, Nassick, Poona, and Concan collectorates in a perpetual state of alarm."

THE NIZAM'S dominions, pre-eminently the seat of disorder, have afforded matter for report, which, in these quiet times, is somewhat striking. We quote the event from the local papers:—

"A riot at Hyderabad in the Deccan, where above twenty people lost their lives, forms nearly the most stirring topic of discussion India has for the past fortnight supplied. The two Mahomedan sects of Sheeah and Soonee seem to verify the apothegm of Lord Brougham, and to hate each other with an intensity proportioned to the insignificance of the interval between their creeds. The great festival of the Mohurram had passed off in comparative tranquillity; there had been a reciprocation of taunts and abuse, a wordy war betwixt the rival sects, but nothing more. The Nizam belongs to one denomination of true believers; his Vizier, as well as the Kotwal (Lord Mayor) of Hyderabad, to the opposite one. The Sheeahs, emboldened by the latter circumstance, obstructed the thoroughfare before the houses of the Soonees, where they collected in multitudes, abusing the Caliphs of their opponents. The Nizam gave directions that the rioters should be seized and the streets cleared, and accordingly some forty persons were seized on and confined. All seemed now tranquillised, when, in the course of the night, placards were stuck up on the walls full of abuse of the Soonees, and insulting allusions to some of their most holy men. The Soonees, thus aroused, assembled to the extent of about 20,000. A son of the Darogah of one of the mosques, suspected of Sheeah leanings, having been desired to abuse the Sheeahs, declined, and was immediately cut down and then fired on by the mob. The body was then mutilated, and suspended by the legs in derision. Blood once tasted, the mob rushed into the house of a Sheeah, set fire to it, and murdered all the inmates, three in number. Other outrages of like kind ensued, till at length the ferment was allayed by the flight of the obnoxious Kotwal, and the promise, on the part of the minister, that he should be expelled from office, and the Sheeha never be again permitted to go in procession, unless accompanied by troops. The minister was afterwards said to have professed his willingness to quit the sect of the Sheehas and go over to that of their opponents, but this he denied, and it was proclaimed that a Sheeha hereafter found abusing a Soonee might be slain with impunity. In the neighbourhood of Hyderabad there is a Hindoo temple, a portion of which the Mahomedans ordered to be pulled down as polluting their processions with its shadow. The Hindoos represented that for many years the temple had stood there, and no one pretended to be offended with it. At night the temple was assailed: early in the morning one of the attendants went in quest of succour from the cantonments hard by: on his return he was attacked and murdered by the Mahomedans. The other attendants of the temple, who had meanwhile fortified themselves, were next attacked; a battle ensued, and several lives were understood to have been lost on both sides. Tranquillity was at length restored by the intervention of a small body of troops. The day is not distant when the Mohurrum scarcely passed off anywhere throughout India without bloodshed—now the Nizam's dominions alone afford instances of riot. In other matters the Government seems to go on pretty much as usual: nor is it likely to improve until we either cease to interfere, or interfere more effectually than we have heretofore done."

The state of the Goomsoor districts still seems unsatisfactory and unintelligible.

The new Governor-General, the Earl of DALHOUSIE, had arrived at Madras, and, after a short sojourn, quitted that presidency. He was hourly expected at Calcutta when the mail was despatched. His predecessor had received another address from the inhabitants of Calcutta (the presentation of one was recorded in our last publication), and it had been agreed at the meeting from which the address emanated, that a statue should be erected in commemoration of Lord HARDINGE's services. The meeting was unanimous as to the bestowal of some testimonial, but the original proposal, which was overruled by the majority, was for a service of plate. Seeing that Lord ELLENBOROUGH has got a service of plate, Lord HARDINGE may be congratulated on having escaped such a compliment.

The state of commercial affairs continued gloomy; but no new failures are announced either at CALCUTTA or BOMBAY. Unhappily, however, the calamity has extended to Madras, where the house of VIRAY, CARDOZO, and Co. has suspended payment.

From CHINA the intelligence is singularly painful. Six Englishmen, Mr. W. RUTTER, Mr. SMALL, Mr. BELLAMY, Mr. BROWN, Mr. BALKWILL, and Mr. MCARTE, have been murdered in cold blood by the Chinese. Full particulars, as far as ascertainable, will be found under the head "China."

BENGAL.

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO LORD HARDINGE.

The meeting at the Town-Hall last evening, to adopt measures for testifying the respect and gratitude entertained by the citizens of Calcutta for Lord Hardinge, the departing Governor-General, was numerous and very respectably attended. Charles Hogg, Esq., the new Sheriff, was voted to the chair. An address, which will be found in another column, was proposed by Sir Thomas Turton, and seconded by Baboo Russomoy Datt. An addition, acknowledging Lord Hardinge's services as the patron and promoter of native education, was proposed by the Rev. K. M. Banerjee, ably supported by Baboo Ramgopal Ghose, and, after much discussion betwixt these gentlemen on one side and Sir Thomas Turton and Mr. Hume on the other, it was finally settled that a paragraph embodying the sentiments expressed in the proposed addition should be inserted. On Mr. Colville, the Advocate-General, undertaking to see that this was done in a satisfactory manner, the address was carried unanimously.

A letter from the Bishop of Calcutta was read to the meeting, which our respected diocesan suggested that a statue should be erected in honour of Lord Hardinge, and a portrait obtained to be placed in the Council Chamber; and further declared his intention to subscribe Rs. 2,000 towards this object. Sir Thomas Turton, however, proposed that a service of plate should be presented to his Lordship, and that he should be requested to sit for a picture to be placed in the Town-Hall. Baboo Ramgopal Ghose, seconded by Captain Robert Ramsay, supported the Bishop's suggestion as far as regarded the statue, and the point was eloquently discussed on both sides. The show of hands appeared to be for the statue, but Sir Thomas Turton, with whom was Mr. Hume, demanded a division, which produced a very large majority on the side of Ramgopal Ghose.—Hurkaru, Dec. 25.

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS.—Shortly before eleven o'clock this forenoon Charles Hogg, Esq., our new Sheriff, attended by a posse comitatus which very fairly represented the inhabitants of Calcutta, proceeded from the Town Hall to Government House to present to Lord Hardinge the farewell address voted at the meeting on Friday last. Soon after the appointed hour had struck, his Lordship, attended by his sons and staff, received the deputation in front of Lord Wellesley's statue in the Marble Hall. The Sheriff then read the address in an audible voice and with great emphasis. This address we have already published, but to preserve the unities we give it over again, with the brief addition made to it in compliance with the wishes of the native gentry:—

"TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD VISCOUNT HARDINGE, G. C. B., &c., &c., &c.

"MY LORD,

"The inhabitants of Calcutta addressed your Lordship on the occasion of your return to the Presidency, and declared their sense of the distinguished services rendered by you to this country. In acknowledging that address, your Lordship expressed your conviction, that a pacific course was the one best calculated to promote the honour and interests of Great Britain and the welfare of the people of India. We feel that in this belief your Lordship commenced your administration, and that it influenced you until war became the necessity of self-defence. We can desire no happier future for India and England than that this sentiment should prevail with our rulers, and no more glorious achievements, when forced into the field, than those which, under Divine Providence, have won imperishable honour for our arms on the banks of the Satlej.

"We cannot permit your Lordship to lay down the high office of Governor-General of India, and quit these shores, without repeating our admiration of your distinguished career. History perpetuates the memory of great public benefactors,—and its pages, which have already recorded your Lordship's early services to your country, on the most desperate field of modern times, will glow with the brilliant addition made to them after an interval of thirty-six years, the greater portion of which has been subject to the ordeal of public life.

"In the same pages, and in the traditions of a grateful people, will live the recollection of the wise measures by which you have encouraged education, and contributed to the permanent improvement and happiness of those committed to your charge.

"We desire, my Lord, to have and preserve in Calcutta some personal memorial of one who has received the highest honours from his sovereign, and the thanks of his countrymen, while ruling this great empire: we desire it, my Lord, as a testimony of our respect for your private, and admiration of your public character, and as a legacy of deep interest to those who will come after us.

"We have, therefore, to ask that your Lordship will permit a committee to place itself in communication with you for the purpose of carrying out the object we have in view, and it remains for us only to bid your Lordship farewell, and to convey to you our earnest hope that it may please the Almighty to bless you with years of health and strength, to enjoy the honours you have nobly won, and to deserve yet further the gratitude of your country, by enforcing in the senate that principle of enlightened rule which recognizes peace as the surest guarantee for the prosperity and happiness of mankind."

The addition referred to above is comprised in the few lines following:—

"In the same pages, and in the traditions of a grateful people, will live the recollection of the wise measures by which you have encouraged education, and contributed to the permanent improvement and happiness of those committed to your charge."

We should suppose the style and manner in which this addition has been made must be perfectly satisfactory to those who proposed it. It evidently pleased Lord Hardinge very well, for it was observed that he bowed very graciously in acknowledgment on this part of the address being read.

The following is his Lordship's reply, which he read in a clear, firm tone:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I gratefully accept this testimony of your approbation and personal regard, at a time when I am about to lay down the great and responsible office committed to my charge. I consider the distinguished honour which you have conferred upon me as the highest reward which a public man can receive from his fellow-subjects, at the close of his service.

"In this instance, as on a recent occasion, your favour is rendered the more valuable by the generous terms in which your sentiments are worded, and which fill to overflowing the full measure of your kindness. I acknowledge it with feelings of the warmest attachment, gratitude, and respect.

"It is also very flattering to me to observe that this address has been agreed to by the united voice of the European and Native inhabitants of this great city, the capital of her Majesty's eastern empire; and I may allude to this fact, because I am impressed with the belief that the happiness of the Native population depends upon the existence of a thorough identity of interests among all classes of the community. By the encouragement of such a feeling, our power will be more firmly consolidated; our national character more pre-eminently exalted, and our influence more beneficially exercised in promoting the prosperity of British India.

"I thank you for the friendly and affectionate terms on which you bid me farewell. I shall return to my native land and retire into private life, proud of your good opinion, and with a just estimation of the loyalty and public spirit by which the inhabitants of Calcutta are animated.

"To the latest hour of my life I must regard with feelings of the deepest interest every measure connected with the welfare of this country. The glorious achievements of the army of the Sutlej will ever be to me a source of the utmost pride, and I can never forget the able assistance I have derived from my colleagues and friends with whom I have been associated in the labours of my administration. To you, gentlemen, who have taken so favourable a view of my services, my parting tribute of respect and attachment is an earnest prayer for your health, your happiness, and prosperity.

"HARDINGE."

Calcutta may lift up its head again. It is no longer merely "the commercial capital of Bengal," as it was sneeringly called by Lord Ellenborough. His successor has restored it to its rank as "the capital of her Majesty's eastern empire."—Ibid. Dec. 28.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

NEW PAPER.—The first number of the Observer, a new weekly paper, appeared on the evening of the 5th.—Hurkaru.

SUSPENSION OF MR. O'DOWDA.—According to appointment, the Chief Justice sat as Commissioner of the Insolvent Court to-day in the matter of the disputed assigneeships. The result of the proceedings is, the suspension of Mr. O'Dowda from the office of General Assignee.—Ibid. Dec. 24.

THE COPYRIGHT ACT.—The Englishman states that the Copyright Act has passed the Legislative Council, and will come into immediate operation, and continue in force till the year 1854, when the Company's charter expires. This is good news.—Friend of India, Dec. 30.

MEETING OF THE CREDITORS OF MESSRS. LIVINGSTONE AND CO.—The creditors of Messrs. Livingstone, Syers, and Co. met yesterday. Their liabilities amounted to Rs. 6,91,234; the assets are less than this amount by Rs. 2,29,484. Much discussion took place relative to an alleged preference which had been shewn to Baboo Mooteeloll Seal, and the meeting passed a resolution that "the circumstance of about Rs. 22,000 of goods being assigned to the Baboo on the 8th instant, as security for a balance previously existing, is susceptible of farther explanation, and such assignment ought not to be recognized unless confirmed by legal opinion."—Ibid.

THE AFFAIRS OF THE UNION BANK.—The Englishman states that a post-bill granted by the Union Bank for Co.'s Rs. 60,000 due on Monday, remained unpaid, and was in the hands of the notary yesterday. The sooner the affairs of the institution are wound up the better for all parties, as we believe an action will lie against any of the shareholders for any such demand which the directors may be unable to meet.—Ibid.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.—The Hurkaru states that the Monarch, Maidstone, Tudor, Alfred, and Ellenborough have been engaged to convey home H. M.'s 21st Fusiliers, consisting of about twenty-two officers, and 650 men, women, and children.—Ibid.

MEETING OF THE CREDITORS OF COCKERELL AND CO.—At a meeting of the creditors of Cockerell and Co. the question of recommending to the Insolvent Court, into which the estate has been thrown, the appointment of two assignees, was taken into consideration, and it was resolved to give in the names of Mr. C. J. Richards and Mr. W. Martin; the latter gentleman has claims on the estate, of which he was formerly a partner, to the extent of six lakhs and a half of rupees.—Ibid.

THE CREDITORS OF MESSRS. COCKERELL.—Another meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Cockerell and Co. was held yesterday, the 29th, in consequence of the Chief Justice having raised some objection to the appointment of Messrs. Richards and Martin as assignees. In the case of the first-named gentleman the point of objection was satisfactorily explained; and the nomination was confirmed.—Ibid.

WHITWASHING.—The facility with which men have hitherto been enabled to pass through the ordeal of being "whitewashed" affords some amusing anecdotes; but unfortunately no one thinks of collecting them. As our own contribution, we offer the following, which occurred some time between the original establishment of the court and last Saturday's sitting: Commissioner—The insolvent, a captain in the army, with little but his pay and allowances to depend on, has incurred debts to the amount of Rs. 1,30,000, but where are the assets? Attorney—My Lord, the assets consisted only of six dozen of beer, which the insolvent drank up in jail.—Ibid. Dec. 30.

THERE MUST BE AN END TO ALL THINGS.—We understand that the Mesmeric Hospital will be closed to-day, after having been in active operation for thirteen months.—Hurkaru, Dec. 31.

MEETING OF THE ASSAM COMPANY.—At a meeting of the Assam Company held yesterday afternoon, a most satisfactory report was presented, and Mr. Henry Burkinyoung was appointed managing director of the Bengal branch, in conjunction with the local directors, upon a monthly salary of Rs. 500.—Ibid. Jan. 5.

MEETING OF THE UNION BANK.—The Union Bank meeting was held on Friday morning, and was very numerously attended. It was announced that none but shareholders would be admitted, and those who were excluded had, therefore, reason to consider themselves fortunate. The object of convening the meeting was to take the opinion of the proprietors on the proposal of sending the indigo of the season, amounting to more than 22,000 chests, to England, instead of disposing of it in Calcutta. As the directors have full power to decide upon such a question themselves, it was evidently their design that the responsibility of this measure should be laid upon the shareholders. Against selling it in this country, it was advanced that there was no money in the market for the purchase of so large a quantity, as a vast amount of dishonoured bills would shortly be returned, that no adequate price could be expected, and that it would be highly detrimental to the interests of the bank to sacrifice the indigo at a low rate. It was argued that if the indigo was sent to England, it would arrive at a time when prices might be expected to range high, from a knowledge that nearly one-half the indigo-lands would be thrown out of cultivation; and that the bank could immediately realize funds by drawing against the shipment, and selling their bills in this country. The directors proposed, therefore, to send the whole quantity of 22,000 chests to England, and to depute Mr. Storm to superintend the disposal of it. The discussion, as might have been expected, when the shareholders, who have been reduced to beggary, were brought into contact with any of the directors, to whom the downfall of the bank was traced,—was turbulent and criminary; but it was determined by a large majority to ship the indigo to England.—Friend of India, Jan. 6.

EDITORIAL CHANGES.—The new year has brought with it several changes in the Fourth Estate. The editors both of the Calcutta and of the Eastern Star have retired from the management of those journals; and Messrs. Samuel Smith and Co. announce that they have ceased to be the proprietors of the Hurkaru, and will in future act only as the agents of the new proprietors.—Ibid.

APPOINTMENT OF OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE IN THE CASE OF COCKERELL AND CO.—In the Insolvent Court, on the 30th ult., the Chief Justice appointed Mr. W. Macpherson, one of the barristers of the Supreme Court, and a recent arrival from England, the official assignee to the estate of Cockerell and Co., and intimated his determination to take the same course in reference to the other estates which might be thrown into the Court. This arrangement supersedes Mr. O'Dowda in reference to the assigneeship of the new estates, but leaves on him the responsibility of winding up those which were already in his hands.—Ibid.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—H. M.'s 21st Fusiliers arrived in Fort William on the morning of the 30th ult., and are encamped on the plain. The Earl of Balcarra is also announced from China with the 18th Royal Irish.—Ibid.

LEGAL.—The Chief Justice has to-day passed some further rules for the regulation of the officers of the Supreme Court, and for the safe custody of the moneys which come into their hands.—Hurkaru, Jan. 7.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—Mr. Fortier, of the Englishman Hotel, unhappily met with his death by drowning, the night before last. He had been on board a ship in the river, in company with Mr. Ward, his partner, and on getting into a dingy to return, made a false step and fell into the river, when he immediately disappeared. The body has not yet been recovered.—Ibid.

COLVILLE, GILMORE, AND CO.—A meeting of creditors was held on Thursday last, at the office of Messrs. Colville, Gilmore, and Co., Mr. Mackinlay in the chair, when it was proposed and unanimously carried, "That Mr. Murray Gladstone be recommended to the Court as co-assignee with Mr. Macpherson; and that the same assignees be appointed to the private estates of the individual partners of the firm.—Ibid. Jan. 8.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—Earthquake.—A somewhat severe shock of an earthquake, for this part of India, was felt in Delhi yesterday about 11 A.M. From all accounts the direction seems to have been from west to east.—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 1.

—The Bank.—We are glad to see that the directors of the Delhi Bank have been able to put forth a declaration that the bank has suffered no loss from the late disasters in London and Calcutta. "It is true," the directors observe, "that bills were returned unpaid by the parties on whom they were drawn, but sufficient precautions had been taken to have the bills properly secured to the full amount." What a pity that such prudence and caution have not been more commonly displayed.—Hurkaru, Jan. 5.

KEDGEREE.—Shock of Earthquake.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt at Kedgerie, at 9 10 A.M. on the 20th. The same shock was felt in Calcutta at a quarter before nine. The shock at Kedgerie proceeded from the north.—Ibid. Dec. 22.

THIBET.—The Mission.—The Englishman states, on the authority of letters from the Upper Provinces, that Capt. Cunningham and another member of the Thibet Mission have returned to the British territories; but the cause is not assigned.—Friend of India, Dec. 30.

UMBALLAH.—Illness of the Archdeacon.—We regret much to announce that the state of the venerable Archdeacon's health is such that he will be under the necessity of returning to England very shortly. He was, when last heard of, to proceed from Umballah to Dhera, to lay the foundation-stone of the new church at that station. Thence he marches to Meerut, where he will break up his camp, and may be expected in Delhi on the 28th or 29th instant, remaining here till the 3rd of January. Hence he will proceed to Calcutta as rapidly as possible.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 18.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

SCINDE PRIZE MONEY.

Fort William, Dec. 31, 1847.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct that the provisions of Her Majesty's Warrant, and the Orders of the Hon. the Court of Directors, as published in Government General Orders No. 35, of Jan. 23, 1846, for the distribution of the prize property taken in Scinde, be carried into effect under the directions of the General Prize Committee at the presidency as respects the claims of officers and men belonging to the Bengal establishment; the claims of the Madras and Bombay troops being adjusted at those presidencies as heretofore.

2. All European commissioned and warrant officers will draw their shares on separate bills, in duplicate, and forward them to the Military Auditor-General, who, as a member of the General Prize Committee, will pass them for payment, after deducting the six months' donation batta received by the officers and men present at the battles of Meeane and Hyderabad.

3. The shares due to European non-commissioned officers and men, now present with the corps in which they served at Scinde, will be drawn by officers commanding troops and companies, and the abstracts (which are to be drawn on foolscap paper and in duplicate) are to be forwarded to the office of the Military Auditor-General for audit, as above directed, accompanied by a roll of the individuals drawn for; when the abstracts shall have been discharged and the parties paid, commanding officers of corps will be careful that the prescribed acquittance rolls are duly forwarded for deposit to the office of the Military Auditor-General.

4. All persons who have been discharged or removed from the corps in which they served, and all representatives of deceased persons, will lay their claims before the proper Station Prize Committees, who will forward their report on the several claims, accompanied by a bill, in duplicate, for the amount, on audit and discharge of which, the necessary Acquittance Rolls will be furnished by committees respectively, and forwarded as directed in the preceding paragraph.

5. After the lapse of twelve months from the commencement of the distribution, the General Prize Committee will forward to the Secretary to Government, in the military department, a return of the European officers and men who are entitled to share, but who from having died or left India before the distribution commenced may not have received their shares. When the return shall have been prepared and transmitted, no payments must be made in India on account of the shares therein specified. A return of the European part of the force, shewing how the different shares have been paid, must also be forwarded.

COTTON WOOL.

Fort William, Home Department, Separate Revenue, 31st Dec., 1847.—Notification.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to resolve, that cotton wool be henceforth exempted from any demand on account of export duty throughout India.

The Governor-General in Council is further pleased to resolve that cotton wool, the produce of any part of the continent of India, be henceforth exempted from any demand on account of import duty at the port of Madras, in like manner as this article is now exempt from import duty at the port of Bombay, under section ii. Act H. of 1846.

The money-market remains unchanged. There is still no scarcity of cash to meet demands for loans backed by unquestionable and easily realizable securities, but the pressure on the mercantile community continues with unabated severity. An improvement took place in Government securities, consequent on a report which prevailed that the new five per cent. loan was to be closed on the 31st ultimo. As this report has proved fallacious, stocks have again fallen to their former standard. The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend on the past half-year, at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

TEMPORARY STOPPAGE OF A HOUSE.—We regret being obliged to announce that Messrs. Vinay, Cardozo and Co. suspended payment of Friday last, the 24th instant. We heard yesterday that this firm will probably resume business after the arrival of the next mail. — Athenaeum, Dec. 28.

DINNER to the 94th.—It ought sooner to have been mentioned by us that Lieut.-col. Brown and the officers of H. M.'s

* Rs. 500 paid up.

94th Regiment were entertained at dinner, on the 7th instant, by the Marquis of Tweeddale, upon which occasion all the heads of departments were invited to meet them. About 58 persons sat down to dinner, among whom appeared the Members of Council, &c., &c. After the cloth had been removed, Her Majesty's health was duly honoured, and the Marquis of Tweeddale then rose to propose that of Lieut.-col. Brown and the officers of H. M.'s 94th, which was done by him in a very complimentary speech. His lordship alluded to the good feeling which subsisted between them and the society of Madras; to the liberal and successful exertions which they had made during their too brief stay here for the promotion of the amusements of the place; and to the high character which was so deservedly borne by them as officers and gentlemen. He likewise alluded gratifyingly to the conduct of the men of the regiment; and paid, in short, a just tribute to the merits of the whole gallant body. — Spectator, Dec. 31.

THE ADMIRAL.—Her Majesty's ship Vernon, J. C. Fitzgerald, Esq., bearing the flag of Admiral Inglefield, Naval Commander-in-Chief, came to anchor yesterday afternoon at 3 p.m. A salute of fifteen guns announced her arrival. The Vernon left Singapore on the 18th ultimo; communicated in the Straits, on the 16th December, with H. M.'s ship Melampus. — Athenaeum, Jan. 1.

DEBARKATION OF THE ADMIRAL.—A guard of honour, consisting of three hundred men of H. M.'s 94th Foot, a company of the 27th N. I. and another of the 51st N. I., assembled opposite the light house on the North Beach on Saturday morning to receive Rear-Admiral Inglefield, C. B., Naval Commander-in-Chief in these seas, who landed a little after 7 o'clock. The Town Major, several of the Staff, all the officers of the 94th regiment, the Superintendent of Police, and a few ladies and civilians, were present on the occasion, which is rather an unusual one for this side of India, the admirals who have been on this station for many years past having fought very shy of the Madras surf. — Ibid Jan. 4.

THE NEW YEAR'S BALL.—The New Year's Ball at the banquetting rooms, on Monday evening, was more fully attended, and kept up with better spirit, than any one that has taken place for several years past. Dancing began soon after ten o'clock, and was resumed with increased vigour after supper. His highness the Nabob made his appearance at the usual hour, and his entrance caused not a little excitement; especially amongst the strangers, who were more numerous than on ordinary occasions, in consequence of there being not fewer than three Queen's ships in the roads. The visitors from the Mount and Palaveram were also in greater numbers than usual, as well as the officers from the different regiments at the Presidency: probably attracted by the presence of the admiral—a rare phenomenon in these parts—as well as by a desire to attend the last public ball in Madras, which was to be graced by the presence of the Marchioness of Tweeddale. — Athenaeum, Jan. 6.

ARRIVAL OF LORD DALHOUSIE.—We have the pleasure to announce the arrival of the steamer Mozuffer, having on board the Governor General elect, the Earl of Dalhousie. The Mozuffer was sighted about half-past eight o'clock yesterday morning, and the preconcerted signal of three guns in quick succession was fired from the ramparts, to give notice for the assembly of the whole of the troops, to receive his Excellency, who landed about five o'clock, p.m. On the Governor General's leaving the steamer—salutes of nineteen guns each were fired by that vessel and H. M.'s ship Vernon—a similar compliment was paid from the saluting battery, on his lordship reaching the shore, where he was received by the Most Noble the Marquis, the councillors, military staff, and civic functionaries of the Presidency, and other gentlemen. His lordship disembarked opposite to the light-house, where the garrison band and H. M.'s 94th regiment were paraded in open column—forming a street up to the North Gate, from whence the 51st and 27th regiments, N. I. continued the street round the glacis of the Fort to the Wallajah Bridge;—the Governor's body guard forming the escort to Government House, where a guard of honour of the grenadiers of H. M.'s 94th regiment with the band of that corps were in attendance to receive his lordship. — Ibid.

MESSRS. VINAY, CARDOZO, & Co.—A meeting of the creditors of this estate was held at their office on Wednesday, the 5th January, at twelve o'clock; when it was resolved,—That the estate should be wound up under the charge of trustees. That the following gentlemen be appointed trustees to the estate:—Mr. Thomson, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Paris, Mr. Gravier. — Spectator, Jan. 7.

CEREMONIAL VISIT TO LORD DALHOUSIE.—At three o'clock yesterday afternoon, His Highness the Nabob of the Carnatic, paid a visit of ceremony to the Right Honourable the Earl of Dalhousie, appointed Governor General of India. He was received at the Government House by a guard of honour, consisting of the body guard and the grenadier companies of the 27th and 51st regiments of N.I. His Highness's arrival at and departure from Government House was announced by royal salutes from the fort.—Athenæum, Jan. 8.

LORD DALHOUSIE'S LEVEE.—The arrival of the Right Hon. the Earl of Dalhousie on Wednesday last, was announced by a gazette extraordinary, published the following day. A memorandum issued the same evening, intimated that his lordship would hold a levee at the banqueting room yesterday afternoon at half-past three, p.m., and precisely at the hour appointed, Lord Dalhousie, accompanied by the Most Noble the Governor, General Cubbon, and a few others, entered the banqueting room, and made his bow to the persons assembled there. His lordship then took his station at the south end of the room, with the Marquis of Tweeddale on one side, and Major Forbes on the other. To the latter every gentleman present gave his card in succession; and, on his name being announced, made his bow to the Governor General elect, and passed on. Nearly all the members of the civil and military services in Madras attended on the occasion; but the time occupied in their being presented was less than ten minutes. A few stragglers dropped in afterwards, until a little before four o'clock, when Earl Dalhousie, the Marquis of Tweeddale, and staff, took their departure.—Ibid.

DEPARTURE OF LORD DALHOUSIE.—The Earl of Dalhousie embarked on Saturday afternoon at half-past four o'clock precisely, with the same honours his lordship received on landing. A notice was circulated on the afternoon of Saturday, requesting the attendance of all public officers on the occasion; but those residing in the Garden Houses, at a distance from the beach, were not able to arrive in time to witness the embarkation. The Marquis of Tweeddale accompanied the Governor-General elect on board the Moozuffer, and remained on the beach until she sailed for Calcutta, about sunset.—Ibid. Jan. 11.

DEPARTURE OF THE ADMIRAL.—His Excellency, Rear Admiral Inglefield, C. B., Commander-in-Chief of H. M.'s ships and vessels in the Indian seas, embarked on board the Vernon on Tuesday evening, under the usual salute.—Ibid.

PORTRAIT OF THE MARQUIS OF TWEEDDALE.—Agreeably to the resolutions agreed on at the meeting on Monday evening, a deputation, with Sir W. Burton at their head, waited on the most Noble the Governor on Tuesday morning, who graciously acceded to their request to sit for his portrait, and appointed Tuesday next to dine with the subscribers, at the banqueting room. The deputation afterwards waited on the Marchioness of Tweeddale; who also obligingly expressed her willingness to comply with their request. It is said, Sir W. Burton acquitted himself with much feeling and propriety on both occasions.—Athenæum, Jan. 13.

MOFUSSIL.

BANGALORE.—Military Movements.—The 4th regt. N.I. en route from Vellore to Hurryhur arrived here on New Year's Day, all well—the corps was inspected by General Aitchison on Monday and Tuesday following—they left this on the morning of the next day.

Church Matters.—Our worthy chaplains have, in the spirit of their sacred office, commenced to visit the poorer members of their congregation; this will tend to endear them to their pastors, and remove from their minds the notion, that the ministers of the Church of England care little or nothing for their spiritual welfare.

Expected Arrival.—General Lovell is expected here on Monday to resume the command of the cantonment. The gallant General will meet with a hearty welcome, as he is much liked, not only by the men of the 16th Hussars, but also by every other class of people, the rich and poor of Bangalore.

Sundries.—The weather still continues very pleasant, grain of every description is very cheap just now, and fruits of all kinds to be had in abundance.—Athenæum, Jan. 13.

OOTACAMUND.—Dec. 18.—European Soldiery—Barracks on the Neilgherries for them.—This measure has at length been sanctioned by the authorities at home, and is to be carried out without delay. The location fixed upon is decidedly the most suitable on the hills, being an excellent plain near the spot formerly occupied as the Sappers' camp, about half-way between this place and Coonoor. The quarter-master-general of the army and commandant of the hills have, it is said, lately visited the spot; and report has it that the engineer officers have received instructions to use all practicable measures to expedite the work. It is further said that the buildings are to be of mud (wattle and mud), and the roofs of thatch, and that the accommodations at first are to be for a wing only of a regiment, with the families, &c., in all for about six hundred. This will doubtless prove a great acquisition to the army, and be the means of saving many valuable lives, both amongst the soldiery and their families. The climate at the spot fixed upon is said to be particularly favourable, from the month of May till December, and indeed highly salubrious throughout the year. In a future communication I shall have much pleasure in reporting the progress made in the erection of the "Tweeddale Barracks" on the Blue Mountains.

Changes.—Changes, as usual, are daily taking place here—amongst the late arrivals are Col. Grant, Bombay engineers, and lady; Capt. Knox, of the king's hussars and family; and Lieut. Lewin, 2nd E. L. I.

Departures.—Rev. Mr. Deane; Capt. Cotton, engineers, on duty; Mr. Surgeon Hitchins; Lieut. Ramsbottom, 4th K. O.; and—Lushington, Esq., C. S.—Athenæum, Dec. 28.

POONAMALLEE.—Arrival of Troops.—Letters lately received from H. M.'s 4th regiment announce their safe arrival on the banks of the Kistna—all well. They expect to reach Poonamallee on the 28th instant.—Ibid. Jan. 6.

MONEY MARKET.

Our money market continues easy, and we have no change to report since our last. Government securities maintain their value with scarcely any variation as quoted—Bank of Madras shares have fallen considerably, consequent on the low rate of dividend declared for the half-year ending 31st of December last, being 5 per cent. per annum.

BOMBAY.

LOCAL.

CASE OF MR. FITZSIMONS, LATE A LOCAL LIEUTENANT IN THE SCINDE CAMEL BAGGAGE CORPS, NOW IN THE JAIL OF BOMBAY UNDER SENTENCE OF TRANSPORTATION.—The application made to the Supreme Court on Thursday the 6th instant, for a writ of habeas corpus to discharge Mr. Fitzsimons, late a local lieutenant employed in the Camel Baggage Corps in Scinde, from custody, involves a very serious question of military law. The question at issue may be simply stated as follows:—Sir T. McMahon issued a warrant authorising the officer commanding in Scinde to convene general courts-martial, but reserving to himself the power of confirmation in certain cases, including all sentences of transportation. He left India in March, and Local Lieutenant Fitzsimons was suspended from pay and rank, and in August last tried by general court-martial, held by order of Sir Charles Napier, acting under Sir T. McMahon's warrant, for embezzlement, found guilty, and sentenced to transportation. The proceedings were then sent up to Sir W. Cotton, who assumed the command of the army in April, who at first directed a revision, but the court-martial adhered to their sentence, and it was ultimately confirmed by him, and the prisoner sent to Bombay, en route to the place where he is to undergo his sentence. In this place, accessible to legal advice, he discovers a flaw in the proceedings against him, and claims his discharge from prison, on the ground that Sir Charles Napier's warrant was at an end, that the court-martial was illegally convened, and that the whole proceedings are a nullity. Judgment was given on Monday last in favour of the validity of the warrant of the late Commander-in-Chief.—Times.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK OF INDIA.—A highly satisfactory statement of the affairs of the Commercial Bank of India up to 31st ultimo has been published. A dividend of eight per cent. per annum for the last half year has been declared. The net profits of this period amount to Rs. 2,33,532 12 11, of which sum Rs. 1,75,440 are to be divided amongst the shareholders, and the balance of Rs. 58,092 12 11 carried to the reserve fund. The net profits of the year 1847 amounted to Rs. 4,56,624 7 1; the dividends to eight and a half per cent.—Ibid.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—The Bank of Bombay has declared a dividend for the last half year of 1847 at the rate of eight per cent. per annum. The net profits of the Bank during the year amounted to Rs. 4,11,210.—Ibid.

EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.—The Head Quarters of H. M.'s 28th Foot, Lieutenant-Colonel Messier in command, with ten commissioned officers, 285 non-commissioned rank and file, fourteen women and twenty children, embark for England on the 25th instant on board the Emperor. The remainder of the regiment, under the command of Major Adams, consisting of seven commissioned officers, 194 non-commissioned rank and file, ten women and sixteen children, proceed by the ship Malabar on the 18th instant. The ship Owen Glendower has been taken up for the conveyance home of the invalids of the season, calling at Cannanore for those of H. M.'s 25th Foot.—Times, Jan. 12.

MOFUSSIL.

AHMEDABAD.—January 16, 1848.—Consecration of the Church.—The Lord Bishop of Bombay arrived here on the morning of the New-year's day, and preached the following day in the room of the Adalut, hitherto used by the community for the performance of divine worship. The neat, village-looking little church, planned and built by Mr. Dickenson, of the engineers, was consecrated this morning—the occasion having collected a large number of folks to witness the ceremony.—Telegraph, Jan. 12.

BELGAUM.—Illness of the Brigadier.—Brigadier General Hughes, commanding at Belgaum, still continues in infirm health,—so much so, that Colonel Reid, from Kolapore, had been obliged to proceed to Belgaum to take the annual inspection of the troops.—Times.

DAPOOLEE.—Anticipated Resignation of Colonel Otley.—We understand that Lieutenant-colonel Otley, of the invalid establishment, purposes resigning the service at an early period, in which case the permanent command at Dapoolee will be open to any lieutenant-colonel who may desire it; and as the emoluments average some 1,500 Rs. per mensem, the climate is healthy, and the sanatorium of Malcolm Peth distant only one night's dawd, we should imagine there will be no lack of applications from among our veteran lieutenant-colonels.—Times, Jan. 12.

DEESA.—Arrival of Troops.—The left wing of H. M.'s 86th Foot, which left Bombay on the 4th of December, reached Deesa on the evening of the 2nd inst. all well. Only one casualty had occurred on the march up—that of a woman in child-birth.—Times, Jan. 12.

POONA.—Jan. 4, 1848.—Military.—The recruits for the 2nd Bombay Light Infantry arrived here on Sunday evening. A wing of H. M.'s 8th regt. leaves this for Bombay in the course of ten or twelve days, when the remaining wing will shift quarters with the 22nd regt. The head-quarters of the regt. do not leave, so we shall still enjoy the pleasure of hearing their very excellent band.

—Theatre.—The theatre here has been in full play during the Christmas week, by the amateurs of the 22nd regt.—Times, Jan. 8.

(From the China Mail, Dec. 29.)

[The following narratives were written by the editor at Canton, whither he proceeded upon the receipt of the earliest news of the melancholy event to which they refer. The first report was to the effect, that on Sunday the 5th instant six gentlemen left Canton on a short excursion up the river, and as they had not returned on Monday evening great fears were entertained for their safety, which were much increased by the rumours in circulation that a party of foreigners had been involved in an affray with the villagers, that they had used fire-arms in self-defence, by which three Chinese had been killed; and that the foreigners had been subsequently overpowered and severely wounded or slain.

Such was the substance of the private accounts we received, while others, and among them the despatches for the Consulate, encouraged the belief that none of the party had been seriously hurt, though up to the latest intelligence (Monday evening) they had not been released. Sir John Davis, however, deemed it advisable to despatch H.M.'s steamer Vulture, and she accordingly departed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and anchored at Whampoa at midnight. Captain M'Dougall having been there informed that none of the young men had returned, and that they had probably all been killed, gave orders to have the boats manned and armed, so as to be in readiness to start on a moment's notice, and himself proceeded in his cutter to Canton, where, as instructed, he immediately put himself in communication with the Consul. It was our first impression that as soon as the boats arrived, Captain M'Dougall would proceed to the villages, and demand the bodies of his countrymen, dead or alive, under penalty of firing upon and destroying the villages, by which matters would have been brought to an immediate issue. Upon further consideration, this course was not deemed advisable; but Keying was apprised of Captain M'Dougall's arrival, and of his intention to proceed to Hwang-chu-kee at one o'clock that day, there to remain until further orders. Before that hour, however, information was brought that two of the bodies had been found, and, as will be hereafter explained, the Vulture returned to Hong Kong.

Canton, 4th December, 1847.

The Extra, issued on Friday last (of which the substance is given above), contained such particulars of the dreadful tragedy at Hwang-chu-kee as could be ascertained up to the forenoon of Wednesday last; and beyond rumours and the opinions given upon the inquests, nothing has since transpired to enable us to speak with certainty when, where, and under what circumstances our unfortunate countrymen were killed. It is known, however, that between 2 and 3 o'clock P.M. of the 5th instant, Messrs. Small, Balkwill, Bellamy, Brown, W. Rutter, and M'Carte, started on an excursion up the river, and landing at a village three or four miles off, called Hwang-chu-kee, proceeded in shore, taking with them two or three pairs of pistols. The boatmen, after waiting till night-fall, were warned to pull off, which they were glad to do upon being pelted with stones, which broke the venetian blinds of the hong-boat. Instead of coming to Canton, the tide being against them, the men pulled up the the river, and did not arrive till next day, one of them having preceded the others in a small boat in which he paddled himself to Canton.

On the previous evening some alarm was naturally entertained about the young men by their friends, one of whom wrote to H.M. Consul, on the subject between 11 and 12 o'clock on Sunday night. It was not, however, till next forenoon that a party of British residents, about thirty in number, well armed, proceeded to Hwang-chu-kee; but the gentleman (Dr. Darjoribanks) under whose directions they had put themselves would not suffer them to land, though it is difficult to perceive for what other purpose they went. The same afternoon one of the gentlemen attached to the Consulate accompanied another party, but it was considered too late to make investigations on shore, even had it been deemed expedient to leave the boats.

The British residents, most of whom have, during the the last twelve months, been accustoming themselves to military training, then resolved to hire the little steamer Fire Fly to tow them up next morning; but the Consul interposed his authority to prevent them, by issuing the following circular, dated at nine o'clock that night, but we understand not sent round till next morning :—

PUBLIC NOTICE.

Her Britannic Majesty's Consul having heard that it is the intention of certain subjects of her Majesty to proceed to-morrow morning up the river to the village of Hwan-chu-kee or other places, in which it is supposed that six of their countrymen are confined: this is to give notice that her Majesty's Consul entirely disapproves such a proceeding, and that any British subject acting in contravention of this injunction will do so on his own responsibility.

Her Majesty's Consul deems it expedient to make it known to all concerned, that he is in communication with the local authorities as to the restoration of his countrymen now unlawfully confined, and at the same time most distinctly states, that any such movement as is contemplated by the British community will afford ground for the Chinese to withhold the delivery of the persons now under restraint.

The Consul further intimates to her Majesty's subjects that the question now in hand has been communicated to her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary, whose instructions may be looked for to-morrow evening. He therefore deems it his imperative duty to call upon her Majesty's subjects, by their allegiance to their sovereign, to obey his most solemn and strict injunctions.

Given under my hand at Canton, this 6th day of December, 1847, at nine of the clock in the evening.

FRANCIS C. MACGREGOR, H. B. M. Consul.

To her Majesty's subjects.

The overwhelming numbers which it was said might be expected to resist the volunteers, the risk of bringing on a collision with the Chinese, and the necessity for protecting the factories, may have induced the Consul to issue these strong injunctions; but it is a grave question, why an entire day was lost in virtual inaction?—the circular bearing evidence that up to the time it was issued the belief was still entertained that one or more of our unfortunate countrymen were alive and might be rescued. Should this turn out to have been the case, it must ever be a source of regret that, on this occasion, implicit obedience was paid to the Consul's order, and that some effective effort had not been made before it was issued.

On Tuesday (the 7th) the Vice-Consul, with a number of residents, went as far as the landing-place of Hwang-chu-kee, and found the villagers busy removing their families and effects. Hitherto there was no certain intelligence regarding the objects of every one's thoughts; and the anxious suspense which prevailed was broken, but not relieved, by reports obtained through the Chinese traders and compradors, as they varied only in the circumstances of the massacre, but left little room to hope that any of the victims were then alive: so that when Capt. M'Dougall arrived at four o'clock on Wednesday morning, he was assured there could be no doubt as to their deaths. As such sad news had not been anticipated at the time the Vulture left Hong Kong the previous afternoon, Capt. M'Dougall was not specially instructed how to act; and, under all the circumstances, it was deemed expedient that he should return to Hong Kong. He accordingly left Canton about 5 o'clock P.M., and sailed from Whampoa about midnight.*

During the time he was in Canton, the brother of Mr. Rutter, finding that no forces were to be immediately despatched to Hwang-chu-kee, and unable to bear his dreadful anxiety, proceeded to the place, accompanied by a friend, who remained in the boat whilst he went through the villages, with a paper written in Chinese, stating who he was and what brought him there. He encountered no molestation, but neither did he obtain any satisfactory intelligence. In the course of the afternoon, however, reports prevailed of some of the bodies having been found, and harrowing accounts were given as to the appearance they presented.† But it was not till next morning that one of the bodies was brought to the British Consulate. Having been inspected by Mr. Marjoribanks, surgeon, preparations were made for the last melancholy duty to the dead; but just as the funeral procession was about to set out, it was suggested by ourselves that an inquest would be desirable, and the Consul instructed the Vice-consul to hold one, which was immediately done. Mr. Elmslie proceeded to the house where the body lay, when the coffin was opened, a jury of those around empanelled, and an inquest held, the proceedings of which will be found in another column.

Within an hour after the funeral procession left the factories, the body of Mr. Balkwill arrived, followed the same afternoon by those of Mr. Small and Mr. Brown, and next day Mr. Rutter's and Mr. Bellamy's were received. The inquests on the last two present some features of peculiar and painful interest; upon which we propose to offer some remarks.

On Friday, fifty men of the light company of the 95th arrived, and his Excellency the Plenipotentiary was looked for every hour, as it was understood he had left Hong Kong on the 8th; but the Dedalus having been becalmed, his Excellency did not reach Canton till the forenoon of Sunday. The following circular was shortly after issued:—

CIRCULAR.

The undersigned Consul has been charged by his Excellency her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, &c., &c., to inform her Majesty's subjects resident at this city of his arrival at the British Consulate, and that his Excellency will be happy to receive from them any communications they may have to make to him, in any way they please.

FRANCIS C. MACGREGOR, her Majesty's Consul.

Canton, 12th December, 1847.

A few of the leading merchants waited upon the Plenipotentiary, and in the course of the afternoon the following circular was sent round:—

* We have all along regarded it as unfortunate that the first impulse had not been acted upon, to proceed direct to the villages with rockets and field-pieces, and the few sailors and marines that could have been spared, but which would have been amply sufficient for the purposes required. A prompt and peremptory demand thus made for the countrymen would have obviated many difficulties which have sprung up since the bodies were found, and negotiations between the plenipotentiaries commenced. But we presume Captain M'Dougall did not consider his instructions as authorising him to adopt extreme measures, unless the Consul urged them; while the following letter shews that the mercantile community advocated the immediate return of the Vulture to Hong Kong for reinforcements:—

Canton, 8th December, 1847, at 4 P.M.

Francis C. Macgregor, Esq.

Her Britannic Majesty's Consul,

SIR,—We, the undersigned, on behalf of the British community of Canton, having waited upon Captain M'Dougall to urge him to dispatch H.M.'s ship Vulture to Hong Kong, for the purpose of expediting the forces that now are or may be dispatched to this place, and being by him desired to communicate our wishes to yourself on this subject, respectfully and earnestly beg you to recommend the adoption of this course, feeling confident that with the assistance of the men that can be spared by Captain M'Dougall we shall be fully able to defend the factories in the case of disturbance.

Captain M'Dougall has consented to meet our wishes if they have your concurrence.—We are, Sir, your obedient humble servants.

† Among many other unfounded rumours, it was said that the bodies had been boiled to a jelly to prevent identification; and again, that one had been deprived of head, hands, and feet, while another had been mutilated in a more disgusting manner, so that the Chinese were afraid to give them up.

NOTICE.

A public meeting of British subjects resident in Canton will be held at the residence of Messrs. Crooke and Massey, this evening, at half-past eight.

Canton, Sunday, 12th December, 1847.

The meeting was attended by all, or nearly all, the British residents, and Mr. Gilman (Mr. Campbell and Mr. Jardine being then absent) having been called to the chair, stated that the meeting had been summoned for the purpose of explaining what had taken place during the interview which several gentlemen had had with his Excellency the Plenipotentiary, in consequence of the circular issued on his arrival. The chairman said that each of the gentlemen had pledged himself to give no opinion then, individually or collectively, lest it might be supposed they spoke for the whole community, which they were not authorised to represent. He then went on to say that Sir John Davis, having received them very courteously, was assured of their co-operation; and they inquired how far they might give their opinion without going beyond their proper position, and on what points his Excellency wished to have it. His Excellency did not specify any particular point, but expressed himself anxious to have their views, either written or verbally, "on the present crisis;" and that they should consider how far the interests of the commercial community would be affected by the measures that might be adopted on the part of the nation. He assured them that no one more deeply deplored than he did the calamitous event which had occurred; that he was perhaps too ready to adopt aggressive measures; and that he had made demands which Keying might not be able to accede to. What these demands were he did not explain, but said that neither the execution of six of the murderers, nor the whole of them, nor the razing of the village, would be considered sufficient. The commercial community, however, could best inform him how far they were prepared to forego present advantage for ultimate good. The chairman said, his Excellency farther added, that he would be happy to have their opinions in any shape they chose, either individually or collectively, in writing or a personal interview.

Mr. Campbell explained the views entertained by himself and others, and read a paper embodying them, which seemed to point at the propriety of a blockade. An opposite opinion was expressed by Mr. Jardine, who reminded the meeting that, whatever their own feelings on the spot might be, many of them were the factors for constituents elsewhere, who might entertain very different views.

After the meeting had been addressed by Mr. Seare, Mr. Ellis, and Mr. Agabeg, Mr. Ponder made a long speech, which ended with a motion, seconded by Mr. Barnett, to the effect that the meeting should approve of what had been done by the gentlemen who had waited upon Sir John Davis that day. A vote of thanks having been given to the chairman, the meeting dispersed.

It appearing to many imperative that something should be done, we understand that a document to be submitted to his Excellency has since been prepared for the signature of those who concur in it.

It is not yet known what measures the Plenipotentiary will adopt; but unless Keying accedes to his demands, a serious impediment to the immediate enforcement of them exists in the smallness of the British forces now in China; and in that case it may be necessary to await the instructions of her Majesty's Government.

Canton, 21st December, 1847.

Sir John Davis is still here, and is understood to have been engaged during his stay in negotiations with Keying; but as yet very little has transpired either as to the nature of his demands, or how far they are likely to be complied with. We do not, however, apprehend that such redress as may now be obtained is to be considered a final adjustment of our complaints; indeed, his Excellency expressly states in his reply to the merchants, that "any measure of redress on his part will not debar the British Government from farther measures of its own."* It will depend therefore on the views taken by the Government at home, and whether they may regard the recent terrible catastrophe as the crime of individuals, or chargeable against the Chinese nation, what ulterior measures will be adopted. In either event the case is surrounded with difficulties; and although it cannot be doubted that some guarantee will be exacted for the better security of British residents, Ministers will weigh the contingencies before asking Parliament to grant supplies for such an armament as would be necessary to coerce the Chinese Government, or commence aggressive measures which might lead to consequences neither contemplated nor desired.

The withdrawal of the British representative at Canton, and the blockade of the port, have both been suggested, and are alluded to in the correspondence between the merchants and the Plenipotentiary; but the views of individual members of the community are naturally biased by the probable operation of such measures on their own interests; and it seems doubtful whether the result would be to benefit the nation at large, or to distress the Chinese more than ourselves. It has been surmised that the surrender and demolition of all the Bogue forts which it would not be advisable to occupy may be in contemplation. Time will shew what truth there is in this.

The only thing officially announced is the execution of four of the criminals, and the assurance that others are undergoing examination, and will suffer the severest punishment. Last evening two mandarins waited upon Sir John Davis to announce that four of the villagers had been convicted, and would be decapitated in the morning at Hwang-chu-kee. The Chinese were anxious that some other place should be fixed upon, and it is said proposed the execution-ground below Canton; but his Excellency resolved that the execution should be made and the example set where the crime had been committed, and in the presence of persons deputed by himself, along with such of the foreign community as chose to attend.* The H. C. steamer Pluto, was ordered to be in readiness at daybreak, for the purpose of conveying the Secretary to the Superintendent of Trade, the Vice-Consul, and the Interpreter to the Consulate, along with three officers and thirty men of the 95th regiment. They arrived at Hwang-chu-kee about a quarter to eight o'clock, when the Chinese soldiers were found drawn up on the level common before the Hall of Ancestors. Our own handful of soldiers, augmented by a few seamen, having landed and formed, and the mandarins, among whom were Tung, the Quang-chow-foo, the Adjutant-General, and others of importance, having received the deputation with every manifestation of cordiality, and conducted them to the Prefect's barge, Mr. Secretary Johnson gave them to understand that he could not then accept their proffered hospitality, as he had come on special business, and the sooner it was proceeded with the better; upon which Tung immediately pronounced the single word, Pow,† and with startling rapidity one of the criminals was run out from a boat. He seemed a stout, decently-attired peasant, apparently about forty years of age. His hands were tied behind his back, his mouth was gagged, and he bore a scroll setting forth his name, age, tribe, and crime. Having been shoved forward about thirty or forty yards from the shore, he was placed or got upon his knees in the open space between the English and Chinese soldiers, and his bound arms being elevated so as to cause him to stoop, the executioner raised his long heavy blade, and at one blow the head was rolling on the ground, the bleeding trunk tumbling after it. The other three were but repetitions of the first, except that the last and youngest seemed to make an involuntary effort at resistance. The whole was done with such expertness, that wonder took the place of horror; and so speedily was the whole over, that two gentlemen from the Pluto, who followed the officials in another boat, were just stepping on shore whilst the attendants were lifting the corpses into their coffins.‡

The number of Chinese soldiers was estimated, by the English officers present, at about four hundred in all (which agrees with the statement we had received from the Nam hoi a week before), and besides those on the ground, small guards were stationed at the entrances to the village; while beyond the triumphal arch crowds of villagers were observed, sufficient to set at defiance their own ill-appointed military, if they really are so brave as the placards issued by them, or in their names, declare them to be. But having quietly suffered a disgraceful execution to take place before their ancestral temple, at the instance and in the presence of the hated English, it may be doubted whether they are so formidable as some alarmists assert, or are really beyond the control of their own authorities.

Last night, as soon as it became known that the executions were to take place in the morning, much violence of language was used on the subject by people who asserted that the victims were not the real criminals, but prisoners taken from the jails; although it does not appear that any proofs had been obtained on the point, or that any foreigner had so much as seen the men, while all those who did see them next morning felt convinced there was no cause to doubt they were what they were represented to be.

Nevertheless, such was the feeling on the subject at Canton, that two British merchants went at 10 o'clock at night to Sir John Davis, and, without any previous notice, which may, however, have been the result of accident, gave him a letter to read, in which they stated it to be their opinion, and that of some others, that the four persons who were executed at 4 o'clock be immediately decapitated at the village of Hwang-chu-kee. Captain not the criminals, and that the Pluto steamer

...member of the mercantile community present, the friend who accompanied him to Canton. ... to stould have to fight their way against the vil- ... communicat. ... substantial.

with the British officers should not proceed there the following morning, as already ordered. They were, of course, informed that their untimely intrusion with a paper of this description was extremely improper, and the letter was returned. The British merchants were certainly invited, on Sir John's first arrival at Canton, to express to him their sentiments and wishes generally; but this sort of interference on the part of private individuals with his public acts and resolutions in detail could not have been expected; and the present abrupt and untimely intrusion must therefore be regarded as very presumptuous and improper.

The subject has excited a good deal of talk, and we have heard that the sentry has been ordered in future to let no strangers pass who do not previously send in their cards.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

(From China Mail, Dec. 23.)

NOTE OF THE FACTS, AS FAR AS THEY HAVE BEEN ASCERTAINED, CONNECTED WITH THE MURDERS OF MESSRS. SMALL, W. RUTTER, BELLAMY, BROWN, BALEWILL, AND McCARTHE.

On Sunday, the 5th of December, 1847, the above six Englishmen, all belonging to British mercantile houses in Canton, left the factories in a hong-boat at about 2 P.M., and proceeded to Hwang-chu-kee, a village some four miles above Canton. The people of this place had, a few months before, exhibited a hostile feeling, and opposed the advance of some foreigners, who were merely passing in a boat; which matter was the subject of correspondence at the time between the British and local authorities. The party had left word that they would be home to dinner, but as the evening passed without any tidings of them, at midnight Mr. Macgregor, the British Consul, was by their friends informed of their absence.

The above village is one of thirteen forming the township of Shin-an, throughout which, in the latter part of November, a violent placard was posted up, declaring the intention of the inhabitants, in the event of any of the Kwei-tai* again approaching that part of the country, to divide themselves into two bodies, one of which should cut off all retreat, whilst the other advanced to slay utterly both the foreigners and the traitorous natives who should bring them.

Mr. Wardley, a member of the mercantile community, having, the same afternoon, and about the same time of day, landed with a party near Lostum, the adjoining village, his boatman was warned by some of the inhabitants to retire with the foreigners, as they said that those of Hwang-chu-kee had already taken some foreigners, and if they came to the spot, the people of Lostum would be obliged to join them in capturing the foreigners present. Mr. Wardley and the others accordingly withdrew. Mr. Crooke, a British merchant, accompanied by two other gentlemen, were walking the same evening at a spot somewhat nearer Canton, when his boatman, in some alarm, begged him to return to his boat; which he had hardly done, and moved some little distance, when he saw a number of persons collected at the place where the boat had been lying, whilst another body was moving towards them, to all appearance with the intent of co-operating with them. The expression used by the boatman who called Mr. Crooke away was, that "four hundred soldiers were waiting" for the party.

Early the following morning, the 6th of December, the Consul wrote to Keying, enclosing a copy of his letter to the magistrates of the district of Nan-hae and Pwan-yu upon the subject, and requesting that his Excellency would lose no time in taking steps for the release of the six Englishmen missing, who, he believed, were detained in one of the villages. There was as yet no certain information as to the direction the party had taken, the hong-boat in which they had quitted Canton being still absent, but the names of two or three places in the same vicinity were given, to guide the Chinese authorities in their search.

At noon, two six-oared and one four-oared boat, carrying from twenty to thirty of the foreign residents, accompanied by Dr. Marjoribanks, pulled up to Hwang-chu-kee, but having received strict injunctions from the Consul not to land, they only explored the numerous creeks in its neighbourhood, without any satisfactory result, and returned about half-past 3 P.M., by which time the Consul had received Keying's reply, stating that, before the arrival of the Consul's representation, he had already, upon a report, sent orders to the district magistrate of Nan-hae to proceed in quest of the missing foreigners. That magistrate did move about 3 P.M., and upon Dr. Marjoribanks returning somewhat later to the spot, he saw the mandarin boats at anchor about a quarter of a mile below the village. Dr. Marjoribanks, when returning to Canton after his first visit, remonstrated with the Nan-hae, and volunteered to accompany him, to treat such wounds as any of the party might receive; but his offer was declined.

A large number of the community having assembled and armed themselves, with the intention of searching the villages in which they suspected their friends, dead or alive, were concealed, applied to the Consul for permission to proceed thither. This the Consul did not conceive himself entitled to accord, as the Chinese authorities had already taken up the matter, and the Nanhae was reported to be actually on his way up the river.

The boatman who had accompanied the six gentlemen now returned, and deposed, that his boat, manned by five men including himself, had conveyed the missing Englishmen to Hwang-chu-kee, upon the afternoon of the 5th instant. They had all landed at about 3 P.M., and desired him, as he was preparing to follow them in fear that the villagers might attack them, to remain in charge of the boat until their return. An hour or more after this he heard the sound of a gong beaten in the village, and about the same time, a stranger, who had gone a short way into it to make some purchases, returned, and after learning from him that he had brought foreigners, advised him to stand off. The crew do not appear to have questioned this person, or to have inferred that he was speaking from anything which he had seen, but simply that his intention was good: they accordingly followed his advice, and moved towards the opposite side, where they had not been long, before a party of villagers came down to the bank, abused them for bringing the Fankwei (foreign devils), and pelted them with stones. About this time they heard the gong again, to the best of their belief in the same village. Towards 8 P.M. another party of the inhabitants came off in two boats, shouting, and endeavouring to board them, at the same time threatening them with death for having brought the Fankwei: upon this they pulled away to a place about seventeen miles up the river, as the state of the tide prevented their return to Canton; and at daybreak the following morning the head boatman pulled down in a small vessel to the Factories, where he arrived at about 2 P.M. The hong-boat subsequently returned with its venetians shattered, and bearing other evidence of such an attack as is above described. On board were found a powder-flask and a revolving pistol, known to belong to one of the party.

The community had postponed their expedition only until the following morning; but a circular being issued by the Consul at 11 P.M., warning them that they would proceed at their own peril, they abandoned the project.

There was now a prevalent belief that those who were absent would return no more. Few Chinese could be induced, even in private, to speak on the subject, so that rumours were picked up with difficulty; and in the total absence of all authentic information, the conviction that several had fallen naturally excited the feelings of the friends of all, as they could not abandon the hope that some, at least, of the party might still be rescued.

On Tuesday the 7th, at daybreak, the writer went alone to the Nanhae, whose boats were at anchor, as on the previous evening, a short distance below Hwang-chu-kee. The magistrate, a feeble and apathetic old man, stated that his police had been on the alert during the night, but had not been able to discover anything; that others had been sent out about 2 o'clock that morning, who were not yet returned: he further said that, as a local authority, he should of course arrange the whole business, discover the missing, and punish those who had detained them; that the Consul and the community should set their hearts at rest, &c. &c. In reply to a remark that it was impossible for any one's heart to be at rest, while there was a report current that all the six Englishmen had been killed, he said that that was certainly not the fact; that there was a report of the death of two, but that the others, in that case, must be in custody somewhere; and he appeared to think that his assurance that they should be recovered, dead or alive, and the delinquents punished, ought to be perfectly satisfactory.

About half-past 7 o'clock on the morning of the 7th, Mr. Elmslie, the vice-consul, Dr. Marjoribanks, and six gentlemen, also visited the boat of the Nanhae, but without hearing anything farther respecting the object of their inquiries. The Consul, early the same day, represented to Keying the dilatory conduct of the Nanhae, which Dr. Marjoribanks had reported to him on his return the previous night. He replied, detailing the steps that had been taken, the officers of rank detached by him, &c., but dwelt principally upon the necessity of restraining members of the foreign community or government officers from proceeding to the village to attempt anything themselves. The mandarins Tang and Ning, attached to his Excellency, and also She, ci-devant acting assistant magistrate of Nanhae, had been sent at different times to the consulate; all of whom, by his desire, earnestly insisted upon this, and expatiated upon the deep affliction into which he was plunged by this catastrophe, and his repeated declaration, that without the full and satisfactory arrangement of this matter, he should never be able to look the British minister again in the face.

On Wednesday afternoon Tang and Ning apprised the Consul of the recovery of one of the bodies; they said it had been found by dragging, and that their government had offered two hundred dollars for each body. A copy of a proclamation to that effect, issued by the Nanhae, has been seen; it is dated the 7th of December, and promises two thousand four hundred dollars for the six individuals, if alive; and two hundred dollars each for their bodies, should they be dead. There can be no doubt that the Chinese officers, on Wednesday, 8th of December, believed in the death of the whole party, as the edict of Le, the Ngan-cha-sze, or Chief Criminal Judge of the province, who had, by order of Keying, proceeded to the neighbourhood of Hwang-chu-kee with two hundred men, called upon the well-disposed, on the 8th instant, to point out without delay the spot in which the corpses were concealed, to give up the originators of the disturbance, and to inform the officers concerning the two Chinese Chin and Le, who had died of wounds, that an inquest might be held, &c.

News of what had taken place having reached his Excellency Sir John Davis, the Vulture was despatched immediately to Whampoa, and Captain MacDougall arrived at the consulate early on Wednesday morning. This was announced to Keying by the Consul, who at the same time intimated to him that the surrender of the bodies of the missing, dead or alive, was required before 1 P.M. or that the boats of the Vulture would proceed to Hwang-chu-kee, and there remain until further orders. Keying, in his reply, urged that if the boats were sent, their crews might be instructed to act with caution, lest fresh mishaps should come of it. The mandarins She and Chin, the Assistant Magistrate of Nanhae, followed Tang and Ning, declaring that two bodies had been found, which Chin said he had seen, and for which, as soon as he learned the Consul's wishes regarding them, he would return to Ta-hang-keaoon, where he said they were lying, and bring them to the factories that night. It was considered advisable that the Vulture should return to Hong-Kong, and she accordingly left Whampoa at 12 o'clock.

Notwithstanding the promises of the mandarins, they were not brought that night, but on Thursday morning, at 6 o'clock, the body of Mr. McCarte was sent in charge of a subordinate, who said that Chin could not have seen what he had reported the evening before, as he had never been near the spot; and that this was positively the only body as yet discovered. The corpse of Mr. McCarte was found to be dressed; the clothes wet and saturated with mud: it was rigid, without any sign of decomposition having commenced.—There were five wounds on the head, three of which had cut into the skull, which was farther broken by two contusions; upon his person there were in all thirty-six incised wounds and eight contusions, and so many of the injuries received were of a mortal nature that it was impossible to pronounce which of them had been the cause of death. The body was buried at Whampoa the same day.

The corpse of Mr. Balkwill arrived next. Upon his head were found twelve incised wounds, and several stabs in front of his body, one of which reached the abdomen. Upon his back were red streaks, such as are produced by a cane, as also upon the left side of his face: his arms appeared to have been bound with a rope, and in such a manner that the marks corresponded with that which was tied round his body when it was brought in; his wrists, too, were chafed as from a similar ligature.

The bodies of Mr. Small and Mr. Brown arrived together. The skull of the former, like that of the two preceding, was laid open by several wounds; he had received a stab just above the heart, and his back and the back part of his right arm bore, like Mr. Balkwill's, the marks of the rattan, the inflammation which had ensued shewing that these blows must have been inflicted some time before his death; the same was to be observed of a wound upon his left hand; and from the cut edges of those upon the head, the blood was still oozing when they were examined by the surgeon. Mr. Brown's limbs were not rigid; there were deep cuts on the head, made with a sharp instrument, but only one wound on his back, whereas those of the other bodies were covered with (apparently) spear thrusts; one stab, in the abdomen, must have been given after his fall; and on him alone was there any appearance of a gun-shot wound. There was some doubt at first whether the body were his or that of Mr. Bellamy, which, with Mr. Rutter's, arrived on Friday. Mr. Small and Mr. Brown were also buried at Whampoa.

Mr. Bellamy's body had distinct marks, in three places, of a rope round the arm of his flannel jacket, the variety of its colour affording testimony that the rope had been still there when the body was taken out of the water. Decomposition had hardly begun, and blood flowed from a wound. Those on the head penetrated to the brain; the skull was also fractured by a heavy blow, as were both his upper and lower jaws. Both arms were indented with bright red lines, such as would be caused by a cord. In Mr. Rutter's body decomposition had commenced. Three wounds were found upon the head, each sufficient to have caused death; stab-cuts on the chest and abdomen, contusions on the left thigh, knee, and leg, and on both ankles. The inflammation which had supervened would have required a lapse of at least twelve, and perhaps twenty-four hours. On the left arm were rope marks.

The inference to be derived from the aggregate of the evidence, almost entirely of a surgical nature, was, that the whole party had been murdered by a number of persons using various weapons and instruments; and that the ferocity of their murderers had attained so savage a pitch, as to have induced them to ill-treat the bodies of the fallen after their decease. All were more or less dressed, and their garments so wet and saturated with mud, that they must have lain several hours in the water. There was no precise means of deciding which of the party had fallen first, or which of the many ghastly wounds inflicted had been the immediate or particular cause of death: but the marks of the cane and the cord upon the persons of Messrs. Small, Balkwill, Bellamy, and Rutter, coupled with the inflammation which had ensued upon different blows and contusions, justified the conclusion that at all events these four had been alive twelve hours, if not more, after the time of their landing at Hwang-chu-kee, and had been, during that period, in the custody of the villagers. From the absence of wounds on the back of Mr. Brown, and the position of his arms, it was inferred that he had fallen in the first instance.

Two accounts, in most respects corresponding, were received: the first, on Wednesday, the 8th, to the following effect:—that the six foreigners, having landed at Hwang-chu-kee on Sunday afternoon, had an affray with the villagers, in which two were killed on either side; that the four surviving Englishmen ran the gauntlet through the villages to Lo-tsum, Keaou-peaou, and Hang-keou, and upon reaching the last, were all overpowered and murdered.

In subsequent reports, the two first killed were described to be one very short, and the other tall. Mr. Brown was the least in stature of the party; and it is probable that he and Mr. McCarte fell first. It was also said that, when in duress, one who could speak a little Chinese offered his murderers an immense sum if they would spare his life. Mr. Balkwill, whose body bore the greatest evidence of having been both bound with cords and scourged with the rattan, was the only one who could speak the Canton dialect, in which he was sufficiently versed to make himself understood in the shops.

Upon Friday, the 10th, the writer was informed by a Chinese of respectability, that a female slave belonging to a relation of his own, resident at Keaou-peaou, was at work in the fields on the afternoon in question: she saw the six foreigners first at some distance in-shore of Hwang-chu-kee, where a few of the working people shouted Fankwei, and threw mud at them, of which they took no notice. Shortly afterwards, these joined by others,—at all events a larger party, perhaps twenty in number,—came on in pursuit of them, shouting as before, and assailing them with stones, and farming implements, hoes and the like: the foreigners held up their hands, and appeared to deprecate the violence of their pursuers, who had now reached them, and were striking at them, while their number increased every moment as the people in the adjoining fields flocked to take part in the attack. One of the foreigners then fired and hit a Chinese, who fell. The gong was struck, and a multitude assembled, who fought furiously with the English, and overpowered two of them, whom they continued to strike after they were down. The other four, who seemed much frightened, and were covered with wounds, inflicted by pikes, poles, knives, and stones, after having in vain endeavoured to appease the people by the offer of dollars,* fled, and the woman saw no more. The report which the informant had heard of what ensued upon this, was, that upon reaching the village of Hang-keou, they were seized, confined for two days and two nights, during which time they were without food, beaten repeatedly, and then put to death.

In the meantime there came rumours that all had been killed at Hwang-chu-kee, and the medical men who examined their bodies inclined much to the belief that none of them had perished on the first evening. Some Chinese also accounted for a story of their having excited the animosity of the villagers by hurting some person, by a report, that when the foreigners were running away in alarm, before any fray had commenced, they had knocked over some young man or boy in the road.

Information was given by the Chinese above quoted to the writer on the 18th December, that a young man, a labourer, was coming from Ta-le-poo, a place some eight or ten miles from the scene of the crime, upon the 5th instant; that he saw four foreigners running in or near the village of Lotsun, pursued by a number of people; that two Chinese, carrying grass, met them, and threw stones at them without effect, and then, as the way was narrow, spread out their arms and attempted to bar their passage, upon which they were immediately shot by the foreigners, who continued their flight. These are doubtless the two Chinese surnamed Chin and Le, the surrender of whose bodies was demanded by the Ngan-cha-sze in the first instance. He then proceeded to Hwang-chu-kee, where about 1,000 persons were assembled round something which he did not see; but he was told that they had been beating the Fankwei, and knew that the two bodies were there. He went on to Canton, where he arrived at about six p. m. and remained till Tuesday morning, when, as he was on his way home at an early hour, he overtook a small vessel carrying the six bodies to San-nga-kow, where they were to be thrown into the water. This was done, as he afterwards heard, with stones tied to them, to prevent their floating; he returned to Canton on the 17th, when he communicated this intelligence to the informant.

He farther said, that, on capturing the four Englishmen at Hang-keou, they were all brought back to Hwang-chu-kee the same night; that in the two who had fallen first, life was found to be not yet extinct;* that on Tuesday morning all were still alive, and that the elderly people of the village advised that they should be sent back to Canton; but this was opposed by the rest, on account of the vengeance which they feared would be taken. It was accordingly decided that they should die, but all shrank back from the task of putting them to death, until one man, not above twenty-three or twenty-four years of age, said that if they were all afraid, he would do it himself, and thereupon killed them with a heavy knife or metal weapon, such as is used to chop wood. The Nambae is said to have examined ten or twelve people, and to have dismissed them for want of evidence. The ancestral halls of two surnames were however closed and sealed with his seal on Friday, the 10th instant.

It is to be remembered, that the medical man (Dr. Marjoribanks) who examined the bodies of the deceased, adhered firmly to the opinion that death must have taken place later than the Sunday evening, from the state of preservation in which all the bodies were found; that the first account received was, that two had fallen at Hwang-chu-kee, and the others were detained elsewhere; next, that the latter had perished at Hang-keou; and later, that they had been brought back to Hwang-chu-kee, and there murdered. There were also rumours of consultations held for deciding upon the disposal of the survivors. Now the elements of all these reports, as well as of that attributing the excessive fury of the villagers to the injury done by the foreigners to some individual in their flight, are to be found in the last information received. There is one discrepancy which induced the writer to question his informant again with regard to the statement made by the woman of Keaou-peaou, touching the fall of a Chinese before the gong had been struck: and it appears that she did not say the man was killed, or even that blood was seen on his face, but it was blackened (as by gunpowder), and that he staggered and fell. There is no report amongst the Chinese of the death of any of their countrymen, except the two alluded to in the edict of the Ngan-cha-sze, one of whom has since been ascertained to be alive.

The discovery of the ammunition and part of the arms of the deceased is sufficient testimony that they could not have landed with hostile intentions. Most of them were unarmed, and the weapons borne by the others were only such as they might have imagined would, by their display rather than their use, have ensured their personal safety.

The people throughout the whole locality were evidently much alarmed; the majority have, since the event, and the consequent movements of their own officers, removed their wives and families; and Mr. Rutter went alone some distance in quest of his murdered brother without molestation.

Assuming the accounts received to be true, and connecting such intelligence as has been obtained, and the attempt made the same day to intercept Mr. Wardley in the same neighbourhood, and Mr. Croke at no great distance from it, with the hostile declarations repeatedly published by the inhabitants, and in particular that put forth by the Shin-an township in the latter part of November, there can be little doubt that this fearful outrage was the result of the deliberate combination of the village population, to put an end to what they conceived to be the unauthorized approach of foreigners to their houses, and a resolution to oppose, independently or in defiance of their own government, an organized resistance to all similar intrusion.

Before the Vulture reached Hong-Kong Sir John Davis had embarked for Canton. His Excellency arrived at the British Consulate on the morning of Sunday the 12th, and put himself in communication with Keying. The Imperial Commissioner has, since the 5th instant, corresponded daily with his Excellency and with the Consul.

On Tuesday the 20th, four of the murderers were beheaded outside the village of Hwang-chu-kee. Sir John Davis sailed for Hong-Kong the following day.

THE LATE MURDERS.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT.

Government Notification, Diplomatic Department.—When about to embark in the Dædalus for Canton, his Excellency, her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, &c., &c., has received the annexed rapid express from the Imperial Commissioner, with reference to the late lamentable occurrence, and directs the same to be published for general information.

(By order), A. R. JOHNSTON.

Victoria, Hong-Kong, Dec. 8, 1847.

"Keying, High Imperial Commissioner, &c., &c., &c., sends the following communication.

"I, the Great Minister, heard on the 29th of the 10th month (Dec. 6), that six Englishmen, on the 28th (5th instant) about noon went to some villages in a boat for a walk, and that it was not known what had become of them. At this I was greatly surprised, and ordered the local district soldiers to proceed with the utmost expedition in search of them.

"I also received a communication from Consul Macgregor, stating, that on the 29th (5th instant) about noon, six Englishmen proceeded in a boat, on the river in a northerly direction, for recreation; but nothing had been heard of them up to the present moment. He had only heard a rumour, that some foreigners had had a fight with villagers either at Hwang-chu-kee or at Pei-te-shway. He therefore had addressed the Nanhai and Pwan-yu magistrates on the subject, and also begged that both might be ordered soon to adopt measures of protection.

"When this reached me, the Great Minister, I ascertained that those men had proceeded up the northern branch of the river for recreation, and on the second day have not yet returned, for which there must evidently be a cause. It is therefore necessary to institute instant search. I therefore reiterated my orders to the Pwan-yu and Nanhai magistrates to adopt immediately, with all possible energy, measures for the protection (of those Englishmen), and to make inquiries about them.

"These magistrates have now gone in every direction to find them out, and heard a very vague rumour, that some Englishmen engaged on the 28th (5th instant) in a fight with villagers, without ascertaining the real facts as to the place and village where the quarrel with the English took place, nor could they arrive at satisfactory results.

"I therefore despatched the Prefect of Canton with the district military, to order the gentry all around to assemble to investigate what had really become of these six Englishmen, and with all haste to find out (the culprits), seize them with the utmost severity, and when apprehended punish them according to the extreme penalty of the law. These villains act with total disregard of the regulations, and create disturbance. Should they not submit, soldiers will instantly be appointed to surround and apprehend them, and not one individual shall escape. Thus the national laws will be vindicated, and the hearts of men will rejoice. The Honourable Envoy need not entertain any anxiety on this point.

"Whilst wishing you every happiness, I address this communication to His Excellency Her Britannic Majesty's Plenipotentiary,

"Sir John F. Davis, Bart, &c. &c. &c.

"Taoukwang, 27th year, 10th month, 30th day, (7th December, 1847.) Received 8th instant."

EXECUTION OF THE MURDERERS.

Government Notification—Diplomatic Department.—His Excellency her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, is pleased to give publicity to the annexed note from himself to the Chinese Minister, in accordance with which the four principal criminals have been executed this morning at the village Hwang-chu-kee, in presence of British and Chinese officers; and eleven others are reserved for decapitation, strangulation, military slavery, and banishment for life, after reference to the Criminal Board.

But his Excellency considers that security for the future is, if possible, still more essential than reparation for the past, and it will be exacted accordingly.

By order,

A. R. JOHNSTON.

British Consulate, Canton, Dec. 21, 1847.

"British Consulate, Canton, Dec. 18, 1847.

"I have received your Excellency's note dated yesterday. It is therein erroneously stated that the six murdered Englishmen "fired pistols and killed Chinese in return merely to the shouts of the villagers, and were put to death on the spur of the moment." The truth, on the contrary, is, that being attacked according to the previous repeated declaration of the villagers, they defended themselves with pistols, and some of them being captured, were subsequently put to death in cold blood. This has been declared by several Chinese witnesses, and their statements will be forwarded to my government, who will maturely consider it. It is therefore useless to alur over the real facts.

"Your Excellency, in addressing your Emperor, appears to have stated as follows:—'Should the foreigners chance to have any object in view, such as the renting of lands, the erection of buildings, or the like trifles, the Canton people collect a mob and interfere with them by making a disturbance. The local authorities, holding the people to be foremost in consideration, think it inexpedient to thwart their inclinations seriously, or to shew a devious compliance with the requests of foreigners.' This indeed is the real truth, and being contrary to the treaty, it is the whole cause of the constant troubles at Canton, while at the other ports there is perpetual quiet.

"Since the Canton people have been thus encouraged against foreigners, they are ready to murder them when they merely take recreation in the country under the treaty. Unless an example is made by executing the criminals at Hwang-chu-kee, foreigners will still continue to be murdered by the villagers.

"Since your Excellency distinctly stipulates that these four executions are not the whole of the punishments to be inflicted, but that the 'remainder of the criminals will either be sentenced to decapitation, strangulation, military slavery, or transportation for life—in every case awaiting the confirmation of the Criminal Board,' it may be sufficient for the present, and in part of my demands, if these four criminals be decapitated where the crime was committed in presence of my officers. The only object of punishment is example for the future, and I have already informed my government that if the example is not made at Hwang-chu-kee, it will be a mere mockery, and wholly and entirely unavailing.

"It is in vain to waste more words on this subject, and if your Excellency will not make the example at the place where the crime was committed, our present negotiation ought to stop.

"Accept the assurances, &c.

"J. F. DAVIS."

"To his Excellency Keying, High Imperial Commissioner, &c., &c., &c."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, February 22, 1848.

THE recent intelligence from China is of a most afflicting character. The murder of six of our countrymen cannot be heard by any one here without calling forth feelings, not only of sorrow and pity, but of deep indignation. What a comment does this event afford upon the morality and humanity of a people so greatly lauded during the earlier part of the last century by French sciolists and English pretenders to philosophy. The secret of the admiration for the Chinese character avowed by such persons was this—the Chinese were not Christians, and therefore they must be amply endowed with every virtue of which human nature is susceptible. Among other results, the recent events are calculated to inflict a heavy blow upon the sanguine expectations of the good people of Manchester, who proposed to traverse every inch of China, and sell calico faster than their brethren at home could make it. Then, too, what shall be said on this subject by those who declaim on the humanizing influences of free trade? The murdered persons were commercial men. They had no vocation in China but trade. Did their mission give them security for life? War, we know, is to cease in Europe from the moment free trade is established; we have been told so by authority which to dispute would merit stabbing. Yes, the time is approaching when man (in Europe at least) shall become an angel, in the economic sense of the angelic nature, and be too deeply absorbed in the operation of filling his pockets to think of any thing else. When is this happy state to arrive in China, and how is it to be brought about? Trade does not seem to produce the effect in China which it is destined, we are told, to produce in Europe. What is the cause, and what the remedy? The disciples of CONFUCIUS and those of CORDEN are at loggerheads, despite the pacific creed of both; and it is high time that we should be enlightened as to the reason of the difference, and the mode of setting it straight. France, it is settled, shall never fight with us again. Between that country and our own there is never for the future to be any thing but a delightful interchange of flimsy piece-goods and attenuated wines. So Mr. CORDEN wills, and who shall oppose? But why should we not have the like results in China? The great oracle of trade has been illuminating almost every part of the continent of Europe; let us beg of him to extend his care further to the East. Let him take a voyage to China and settle matters there, for greatly is there needed in that country some missionary of commerce.

WHAT may be the result of the Parliamentary Committee now sitting to inquire into the sugar question we cannot anticipate. So capricious is the public mind, and so intensely selfish the economical doctrines in fashion, that we should be little surprised if, after all we have done for the abolition of slavery, we should, to use a well-known Hibernicism, "turn round upon ourselves," and determine to give a premium for the encouragement of that which we profess to abhor, by admitting slave-grown sugar on the same terms as that from our own possessions, cultivated by freemen. In truth we have already so determined. In 1846 our anti-slavery zeal cooled down to zero, and we resolved to make no illiberal distinctions between slave-holders and honest cultivators, but to allow both to bring their produce into our market on an equality—that is to say, an equality in respect of duty, for it would be as great nonsense as has ever been talked on the question (which is saying much) to affirm that in any other view the two producers are on an equality.

A short breathing-time was given by the Act of 1846. Five years were to elapse before the equalization of duty was to be completely effected. Nearly two have slipped away, and it remains to be seen whether the Parliament of 1848 will confirm the judgment of the Parliament of 1846, or vindicate the honour and consistency of the country by returning to a better course. We have denied that the slave-holder and the non slave-holder are on an equality as to cost of production, and we repeat the denial. The slave, in the eye of the respectable trader who steals and sells him, is not a person, but a thing—an article of merchandise, to be kept in good condition for the market, if possible, but not worth a thought on his own account. Having sold him to one as honest and humane as himself, the personal claims of the wretched commodity are still not recognised. The slave-holding planter looks upon his purchase just as he would upon a spade, a hoe, or a plough. He hopes that it is strong and will wear well—if it fail he has made a bad bargain, and this consideration will be the only one that will cause him the slightest regret. To work the human machine goes, and the limit of his labour is the impossibility of enforcing more. It is useless to be tender of that which may easily be replaced. Work must be done; slaves are made to perform it; let the whip, then, do its office; it is cheaper to buy slaves than to rear them; every slave has so much work in him, and the sooner it is converted into dollars the better; draw out of the miserable herd then all their labour in as brief a period as possible; extract in six years the work of ten, and you will save expense in their feed; when dead they will eat no more, and other wretches must supply their place. They, too, will wear out a few years of intolerable misery, and then, like those before them, descend to that place "where the wicked cease from troubling and where the weary are at rest." But the planters will grow rich, and their customers will get cheap sugar.

This desire for cheapness lies at the root of the whole matter. We, in England, have no particular sympathy with the planters of Cuba and Porto Rico. We do not much like slavery. As a matter of choice we would rather discourage it—but we have a childish longing for sweets, and we must gratify it on any terms. Perhaps, while such a state of feeling prevails, it may not be altogether useless to point out that, with a little patience, we might be able to meet the demands of our inordinate passion for sugar, without subjecting ourselves to the reproach, and incurring the guilt of retracting much of what we have done in regard to slavery. The surface from which we may draw an honest supply is not small. India, if we give her a little time to make due preparation, will become able to supply us with sugar till we shall be absolutely cloyed with sweetness. The districts of that country capable of producing this coveted luxury are vast in extent and abundant in fertility. The valley of the Ganges, it has been said, could produce sugar enough to supply the whole world; and if this expression be somewhat hyperbolic, we may at least be satisfied that British India could supply far more than the inhabitants of the United Kingdom could consume. We need not, then, ask those greedy of sweet things to forego the gratification of their appetite, nor even to wait for any very lengthened period. Give India fair play, and you shall eat sugar not only abundantly but cheaply. Production will increase, and the modes both of cultivation and manufacture will be improved. Increased production will reduce price, and the improved modes of culture and preparation will enable the grower to submit to reduced price without injury. Encourage, then, the cultivation of sugar in India in preference to slave countries, and you will thereby secure an ample supply, while you will check that succession of abominations for the suppression of which such sacrifices have been enforced. Whether the price of India sugar could ever be brought down to a level with that of slave-grown sugar, and continue to remunerate the producer, is a question which at present cannot be answered. But are the avowed enemies of slavery prepared to believe that slavery will last for ever? If they consider it to be an evil not to be vanquished, why do they make so many efforts in vainly attempting to destroy that which is indestructible? The loss of the British market may lead the slave-holding sugar growers to inquire whether they are acting wisely even upon the principles of mere worldly wisdom. With such men arguments founded on justice or humanity are out of the question. They must be made to suffer before they will forsake a career which, though it be criminal, is profitable. If, through their exclusion from the British market, the downfall of slavery should be accelerated, it would surely be matter for just congratulation. Such an object would surely be worth the temporary sacrifice of a trifle in the price of a pound of sugar. When slavery shall have ceased; when this great triumph of humanity shall have been achieved, and sugar growers everywhere can compete on fair terms—which they never can do while slavery exists, unless slave-produced commodities are artificially subjected to some disadvantage—then, and not before, it will be time to talk of carrying out the principles of free trade by a perfect equalization of duties.

CANDIDATES FOR THE DIRECTION.

An account of the service of Mr. Borradaile, a candidate for a seat in the Court of Directors, was by accident omitted from our last number. Harry Borradaile, Esq., entered the service as a writer in 1818. In 1821 he was appointed second registrar at Ahmedabad, and in the same year acting first assistant to the collector and magistrate of Poona. In 1827 he became senior assistant to judge and session judge of Ahmednuggur for Candiaish; in 1829, registrar of the Sudder Dewanny and Suddur Foujdarry Adawlut. In 1832 he was appointed collector of customs at Guzerat; in 1833, collector of Ahmedabad. In 1834 he was a member of the Committee for revising Transit Duties in India, and in 1839 collector and magistrate of Kaira, and member of the Indian Law Commission, which appointments he held till 1844.

DEBATE AT THE EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

On the 2nd inst. a Special General Court of Proprietors of East-India Stock was held, at twelve o'clock.

The minutes of the last Court having been read,—

The CHAIRMAN (Henry St. George Tucker, Esq.) said, he had to acquaint the Court that it was specially summoned at the request of nine proprietors, for a purpose notified in the requisition, which would now be read.

The clerk then read the requisition and accompanying resolutions, which we do not reprint, as they are of great length, and have appeared in this paper already. They will be found at page 59.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

A PROPRIETOR complained that, at the last Court, he had obtained permission to read a paper, containing his views on the subject, as he was not accustomed to public speaking, and that when he had proceeded a short distance he was stopped by the Chairman. He then asked and obtained permission to read the latter part; but again he was stopped, after proceeding for a short time. That was, in his opinion, a breach of privilege.

The CHAIRMAN said, the hon. proprietor had no reason to complain of breach of privilege, because there was no privilege in the case. The hon. proprietor could have no claim to read his speech instead of speaking it; and, indeed, it would be very inconvenient if hon. gentlemen were to come to that Court and read essays instead of making speeches. The Court, on the occasion alluded to, becoming impatient at the length of the hon. proprietor's remarks, a request was made to him to leave off.

Mr. CLARKE said, it was not the Chairman who stopped the hon. proprietor, but the Court.

Mr. LEWIS believed he was the guilty party who had requested the hon. proprietor to desist.

The CHAIRMAN hoped the hon. proprietor was satisfied; and the matter dropped.

THE SPECIAL BUSINESS

was then proceeded with.

Mr. HUME rose to bring on the resolutions which had been read. He had done all in his power to acquaint the great body of proprietors with what he intended to do on the present occasion. To all whose addresses he could find he had forwarded copies of the resolutions, and of the letter that he had addressed to the editor of the Times. The resolutions he was about to submit might be divided into two parts. The first was, however, only a preamble to the last, which was the only one he should to-day submit to their consideration. This motion was founded on the assertion that the Court could not interfere in a matter that had already received the sanction of the Board of Control. If this were the true state of the case, the existence of such a rule would be fatal to the best interests of India. He had constructed his resolution in compliance with this supposition; but he should have preferred taking a less circuitous course to obtain his object. The continuance of our empire in India, and maintenance of its welfare, depended entirely on the strict adherence to justice in our dealings with native powers, and he was therefore anxious that the question should be taken up and considered, not as a personal one affecting the Rajah only, but as a great political one. It was fifty-four years since he left India. When in that country he had visited all parts, and made himself acquainted with the people and government; and since his return he had availed himself of every opportunity of increasing his knowledge of the subject, and he had too great a respect for the Court of Directors to wish that any act of theirs should lay them open to censure. (Hear, hear.) India was won by the sword, but preserved by wisdom. (Hear, hear.) He desired to see the government of India unchanged. When once it should fall to the Colonial Office, with its choppings and changings, and succession of secretaries, the doom of India, in regard to this country, was sealed. When abuses crept into existence even in this country, could they be surprised that they should arise in India? To the Bombay Government was to be attributed the whole of the persecution of the Rajah; and of the vast mass of documents connected with this case, nine-tenths were forgeries. Further, he contended that the Secret Committee had no right whatever to interfere in the case. That Committee was appointed for times of war, when secrecy was necessary; but it was now a burden and onus upon the Company. It was that Committee which prosecuted the Affghan war, and for years the details of that war were locked up in that Committee. What was the result? Why, the addition of eight or nine millions to our debt. In this case, the forms even of justice had not been complied with. After signifying to the Rajah their approbation of his conduct, the Court of Directors had forwarded to him a sword of honour,—a mark of respect never, he believed, paid to any other prince in India.

Did they continue this line of conduct towards the Rajah? No. They would not even let previous good conduct carry any weight in their decision, and never gave the Rajah an opportunity of disproving the charges preferred against him. (Hear.) Why did they suffer themselves to be deceived by the Bombay Government? Why did they not compel the Government to obey the orders issued by them respecting the jagheer? It had been said the Rajah was dead, and could not be replaced on the throne. True; but look to what was going on in Ireland. Men had in that country been murdered by banditti; but, because they were dead, did the Government take no steps to bring the murderers to justice? A special commission was issued, and the murderers brought to punishment. Had the Court of Directors behaved in a like spirit towards the Rajah of Sattara? For the honour of the military and civil services, an inquiry into this case was required, and he hoped it would be granted. Let them follow the case of the Rajah of Tanjore, who was restored to his throne after being kept from it for twelve years. Let them recollect the case of Mr. Sauger (as we understood the hon. proprietor). The Court of Directors had refused to entertain the case of this gentleman, but the Court of Proprietors, by its resolutions, compelled a fresh inquiry, and Mr. Sauger was restored to the service. (Hear, hear.) Why did they act differently in the presidency of Bombay to what they did in Madras? In the latter presidency, when charges were raised against the servants of the Government, a commission from Bengal was appointed to inquire into them. The only prayer of the Rajah was for inquiry. And in a petition to the Queen he concluded by saying, "I ask only that justice may be done to me, and that I may have an opportunity of proving my innocence." Was there any thing unreasonable in this? Would the proprietors suffer this state of things to continue? If the assertion were true, that this Court could not interfere in a case after it had been decided by the Board, then all power was in the hands of the latter body. Let them pass a resolution that the case ought to be inquired into, and let the weight of refusal rest with the Board. (Hear, hear.) The friends of the Rajah did not ask the Court to pronounce an opinion on the guilt or innocence of that prince; they only asked it to say that he had not been tried. Three times he had offered to prove his innocence, but Colonel Ovens would not give him the opportunity; and in the face of this they were told that he had been tried. The Governor General and Sir Robert Grant both concurred in the opinion that the Rajah ought to have a fair and full trial, but this opinion had not been carried into effect. The remarks of the Governor General (Parl. Papers, vol. i. 229) on this point were not attended to at all by the local government, and the request on the part of the Rajah to be heard was refused, because Colonel Ovens thought it objectionable. Here he might remark, that as soon as Colonel Ovens arrived at Sattara, a document was forwarded to him for inquiry to be made respecting it. This document Col. Ovens at first declared to be true, and when he knew that the person whose name was subscribed to it had not written it, he kept that knowledge from his Government for the period of eleven months. The Inquisition, in all its horrors, did not present a case parallel to that of the Rajah of Sattara, and he, for one, would never acquiesce in transactions so much to the disgrace of England. (Hear, hear.) In that case there was a clear proof of the truth of the old saying, "A man must have a good memory to be a liar," for the papers connected with the case contained contradictions that at once convicted their authors. (Hear, hear.) Was it honourable in those who had been the means of injuring the Rajah to say they did it in obedience to orders? If they did so act, they were unworthy of their office, and the attempt to justify dishonourable deeds by the plea of obedience was disgraceful and futile. (Hear.) He would now read the last paragraph of his letter to the Times:—

"These, then, are the grounds on which my advocacy of this cause has depended, and still does depend; and with these statements before me, authenticated by the despatches of the local government now before the Legislature of this country (and for the purposes of this letter and my own defence I would disclaim all knowledge of the case not furnished by the Parliamentary and public papers and records), I should be violating my duty as a public man, and violating every principle I have professed in public life, if I ever should relinquish that advocacy until a full and fair inquiry shall have been made into the whole case of this unfortunate prince."

This (Mr. Hume resumed) he repeated. He still demanded inquiry, and should not cease to demand it till it was granted. This letter to the Times contained thirty-one acts of the Bombay Government, any one of which was sufficient to condemn it. If the Directors were not willing to pass sentence on the conduct of their servants when it was discovered they were unworthy of confidence. Did they suppose it would be disgraceful to undo what they had already done? Let them remember what had been done by our Governments at home; look to the cases of the Earl of Dundonald and Sir R. Wilson, who, after being deprived of their rank, honours, and pay, had been restored to all. If further instances of such a course of conduct being pursued were wanting they could easily be produced, but he did not think it necessary. Enough had already been adduced to shew that there was nothing discreditable in retracting our steps to do justice. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, he would refer to a remark of the hon. Chairman made at a former Court. The Chairman stated that the Court of Directors were not aware of the climate of Benares disagreeing with the Rajah. If they were not it was their own fault; they might have been, had the Government of India forwarded the Rajah's letter of December, 1844, in which he made such a complaint. In 1845, he (Mr. Hume) addressed a letter to Sir Robert Peel, in which he stated, among other things, that the climate of Benares made visible inroads on the Rajah's health. Sir Robert being unwilling to interfere, he (Mr. Hume) went to Lord Ripon. He then wrote to Sir Henry Willock, the Chairman of the Court, stating that the expenses of the Rajah were heavy, and urging an increase of his allowances, and also alluding to the unhealthiness of the climate of Benares. The answer he received was, that the Court considered the allowance ample, and that they had not received any information as to the effect of the climate on the Rajah's health. In a will which the Rajah had made shortly before his death, he distinctly alluded to the unhealthiness of the climate, and anticipated the result that occurred. And in the papers laid before Parliament, Major Carpenter had avowed he believed that the health of the Rajah was giving way to the effects of the climate of Benares. Under these circumstances, then, it seemed as if the voice of humanity were as dead in the Court of Directors as the voice of justice. After a few further observations, Mr. Hume moved—

“That considering the responsible functions entrusted to this Company by the Legislature, and having regard for the honour of the empire, and the security and good government of the people and princes of India, this Court earnestly recommends to the Court of Directors to obtain the sanction of the Board of Control to the institution of a public and impartial inquiry into the charges brought against the late Rajah of Sattara, and into the manner in which the published evidence against him has been obtained; in order that the truth or falsehood of that evidence may be made manifest, and the British Government purged from the imputation of having treated the late Rajah of Sattara harshly, illegally, or vindictively.”

The CHAIRMAN.—I think it right to make a few remarks with respect to an observation that has fallen from the hon. proprietor. He charges the Directors, not indirectly, but directly, with inhumanity in suffering the Rajah to remain at Benares. Now I beg distinctly to state, that no application for his removal was made to the Government. (Hear.) I have caused search to be made, and no record of such application is in the possession of either the Court or the Board. (Hear, hear.) The Court were aware that the health of the Rajah was declining, but they had no reason whatever to attribute it to the effects of the climate of Benares. Benares is the great resort of Hindoos; and for myself I can only say, that I have a son there now, and that I do not suffer any anxiety with respect to his health. (Hear, hear.) It was the duty of the friends of the Rajah to have made application to the Government for his removal from Benares, if they thought his health was affected by his continued residence there; and if such a request had been made, I am sure not a single member of the Court would have objected to it. (Hear, hear.) I am sure you will agree with me, that there is no ground for charging the Directors with inhumanity. (Hear, hear.) With respect to the other charges of the hon. proprietor, I have nothing to say, I shall let them stand as they are; but I thought it my duty to set the Court right in regard to the charge of inhumanity (hear, hear); and I repeat, that the Court would most willingly have acceded to any request for the removal of the Rajah to a climate more congenial to his health. (Hear, hear.)

The motion was here read by the clerk.

Mr. LEWIS rose to second it in the absence, from illness, of Mr. Sullivan, when

Mr. MARRIOTT begged to observe, that he, for one, was not disposed to let the first motion pass undiscussed as the preamble of the last.

The CHAIRMAN explained that the first part would not be submitted to them, but only the final resolution.

Mr. LEWIS resumed. He tendered his thanks to the hon. Member for Montrose for bringing forward the present motion. With the guilt or innocence of the Rajah they had, on the present occasion, nothing to do; all they had to say was, whether the case should be fairly inquired into. (Hear.) He regretted that the course proposed by the Rajah had not been adopted. Three times he offered to place his kingdom in the hands of the British Government while an investigation was pursued into his conduct. Hitherto the efforts of the Rajah's friends had been unsuccessful; but he hoped on the present occasion, under the additional light thrown on the subject, that the result would be different. He questioned not the sincerity of those who at first opposed the Rajah; but fresh knowledge had been adduced, and various sources of information opened, sufficient to change the opinion formed at first, and to prove the Rajah a persecuted but innocent man. (Hear.) Take, for instance, the charge of tampering with subadars. It had transpired that the witnesses had contradicted themselves in almost every particular. They differed in their accounts of the course they took when they entered the palace, the room in which the interview took place, the dress the Rajah wore, and the number of persons present. The witnesses had not been allowed to be cross-examined, otherwise their testimony would certainly have broken down. (Hear.) Take, again, the charges of conspiring with the authorities of Goa and Nagpore. The former charge rested almost entirely on letters purporting to be written by Don Manoel; but this person had come forward, and solemnly declared that they were forgeries, and that he never had any political correspondence with the Rajah. Then, what had transpired with respect to the seals? It had been proved that they never belonged to the Rajah at all, and that they were totally different in form and inscription to his. (Hear.) On what, then, was the Rajah condemned? They could not believe the charges at first made against him; it was impossible. In addition to all this, there was the testimony of Major Carpenter, who said not only that he was satisfied the Rajah was innocent, but that his innocence could be proved. He asked, then, earnestly, if there were not sufficient reason to retract their steps. They need not fear the charge of inconsistency; but if they continued in their present course, they would assuredly shake the stability of the empire in India. (Hear.)

Mr. SAVAGE was of opinion that justice to the deceased Rajah demanded the inquiry now moved for. The case of the Rajah was very similar to that of the unfortunate Baron de Bode.

Mr. WEEDING had listened with much pleasure to the speech of the hon. member for Montrose; but, without further alluding to that, he begged to draw their attention for a moment to one most important part of the case. He alluded to Krushnirgee Sudaau Bidey. This man, they would remember, was the one who, at the request of Girjeebas, wrote the petition in her name. For doing this he had been branded by the friends of the Rajah as a forger. But he distinctly said to Col. Ovens that he wrote the petition for Girjeebas, under a promise of receiving Rs. 1,028. Colonel Ovens had been attacked for delay in forwarding to his Government Krushnirgee's statement. But the cause of this delay was, that Col. Ovens was desirous of making full inquiry into the circumstances of the case, and this investigation was necessarily carried on in secrecy, as otherwise the witnesses might have fallen under the displeasure of the reigning Rajah. Under these circumstances, the inquiry was protracted over a considerable period of time; but when completed, within ten days it was forwarded to Government. Yet this had been termed unnecessary delay! Ad uno disc omnes. What was the object of the letter written by the hon. member for Montrose to the Times? Why, to prove that the Court of Directors had been deceived by the Bombay Government. But in that case, they had been deceived together with the other Indian authorities. Lord Auckland, in 1839, said it was unnecessary to go into the merits of the case again; and he (Mr. Weeding) was of his lordship's opinion. An hon. proprietor (Mr. Lewis) seemed struck with the character and good conduct of Major Carpenter. Now he would not say he admired the conduct of that officer. Instead of being the quiet guardian of the Rajah, he had shewn himself the partizan of that prince. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON said, the credit of his own character was too intimately mixed up with the case of Krushnirgee Sudaau Bidey and the proceedings of Col. Ovens to allow him to pass the observation of the last speaker without comment. The statements they had just heard were without foundation. The hon. proprietor had said that hereafter Col. Ovens's character would shine forth. Why did not that officer confront his accusers, and disprove the accusations? That was the best way to make his character shine. For years he had been preferring serious charges against Col. Ovens, but that officer had not attempted to refute them. In 1842, he spoke for nine hours, exposing the proceedings against the Rajah and the conduct of Col. Ovens. He had forwarded to the colonel all the documents connected with the twelve charges he (Mr. Thompson) had against him; and why, then, did he remain silent? The hon. proprietor attempted to rebut the charge against the colonel of concealing important evidence from his Government for the space of eleven months, by asserting that the time thus used was necessary for completing the case. Why, it wanted no completion. It was complete from the moment Krushnirjee made the statement he did to Col. Ovens. The hon. proprietor having dilated on this part of the subject at some length, and in strong language, proceeded to observe, that a statement had been made by a public journal calculated to lead people to a false opinion on the subject of the Rajah's independence prior to the treaty of 1819. It had been said that we made the Rajah by that treaty; that we gave a crown to a man in banishment and prison, and that the Rajah was a prince of Mr. Elphinstone's creating. From this it was argued that we were justified in deposing him, and that his lot was not very hard when deposed. "Oh, that mine enemy had written a book," said Job of old. An hon. member of that Court had written an admirable history of the administration of the Marquis of Hastings. [Mr. H. S. Prinsep's History of the Political and Military Transactions in India during the Administration of the Marquis of Hastings.] The hon. proprietor to whom he was alluding had, he thought, always voted against the Rajah in that Court. Would he do so again to-day? Now he asked him (Mr. Prinsep) if he would deny that, in 1817, Government opened a correspondence with the Rajah of Sattara? Would he deny that Lord Hastings had sent to the Rajah for this purpose? The Rajah was the great card that we played during the Mahratta war. He thought the hon. proprietor would not deny that it was a struggle between Bajee Row and our Government who should have the Rajah. How, then, was he the child of our charity? Two years before the treaty of 1819 we sought him as the Rajah of Sattara, because we found he could be of service to us. They were told that the Peishwa had all the power in his own hands, and that there was no Rajah till we made one in 1819; but there was, he maintained, a Rajah of Sattara, though that prince might choose to live in dignified retirement, and suffer his prime minister to hold the reins of government. This assertion was further proved by the fact that the Peishwa did nothing but in the name of the Rajah. The hon. proprietor quoted largely from Mr. Prinsep's work, to the effect that, when Sattara was taken by Gen. Smith, the flag of Sivajee, and not the standard of Britain, was hoisted on the walls, and that a manifesto was published declaring it to be the intention of Government to restore the family of the Rajah. (Hear.) Would, then, any one say that previously there was no Rajah of Sattara? From the first publication of Mr. Elphinstone's manifesto restoring the Rajah, there was no option; when the standard of Sivajee was raised on the battlements, no other course could be pursued. We dethroned a man, then, with whom we had entered into a friendly treaty, and who had been our faithful ally for so many years. The historian he had quoted stated that what was done was done by the order of the Governor-General. Where, then, was the option of Mr. Elphinstone? As soon as Sattara was captured, in pursuance of the policy he had before alluded to, a proclamation was issued, calling on the people of Sattara to rally round their rightful prince, the late Rajah. That was nineteen months before the treaty of 1819. That treaty, he contended, was nothing more than the redemption of the pledge before given in secret to the Rajah. Previously to the battle of Ashtee, we entered into an agreement with the Rajah that he should leave the camp of the Peishwa and come over to us. (Hear.) This the Rajah did at the battle; he left the camp voluntarily, and placed himself with a few friends under the tree where Col. Pringle Taylor had appointed to meet him, and he there delivered himself up to that officer while the Mahratta troops were retreating. (Hear.) The surrender of the Rajah afforded a speedy prospect of a termination to the war. When the fortress was taken where the Rajah had lived, the treasure and jewels there found were restored to the Rajah, and a compensation given to the soldiers in lieu of it. Throughout the Mahratta war, the part we played was distinguished by good policy and profound selfishness. (Hear, hear.) The Rajah was placed on the throne, because otherwise the native chiefs would not have forsaken the standard of the Peishwa. The hon. proprietor concluded his address with a few further observations, chiefly in condemnation of Col. Ovens.

Mr. FIELDER said, some stress had been laid on the phrase,—make out a case against the Rajah. Now he begged to observe that his was a common saying among lawyers, to make out a case was to the facts, that was all that was meant by it. (Hear.)

Mr. PRINSEP rose with hesitation, being quite unprepared to speak; but after the pointed allusion to him by the hon. proprietor, he could not remain silent. The hon. proprietor had quoted passages from a book written by him many years ago; these passages the hon. proprietor had adduced in support of his argument that the Rajah of Sattara existed as a rajah, and was treated by us as such, previously to our treaty with him; but he must say, he thought the meaning of the passages had been considerably strained by the hon. proprietor. After our first rupture with the Peishwa, Mr. Elphinstone submitted to the Supreme Government what course of proceeding should be adopted; whether we should place the exiled Rajah on the throne, or whether we should take the territory ourselves, and abolish the rajahship. This question was very seriously discussed, and a conclusion was, after much deliberation, arrived at. It was by no means an immediate decision, as the hon. proprietor would seem to suppose. The fact of Mr. Elphinstone putting this question to the Supreme Government was sufficient to shew that he was by no means of opinion that the Rajah was justly entitled to the throne. After our rupture with the Peishwa, it was decided that the Rajah should be restored, and on Sir Lionel Smith taking Sattara, the flag of Sivajee was raised in pursuance of this plan. This was an intimation of what we intended to do, but not an acknowledgment of the Rajah's right to the throne. The right of the Rajah, if it could be called a right, existed from the issuing of the proclamation, but certainly not before. We were under no obligation to restore him; we might have kept the territory ourselves, as we have done in many other cases; and, therefore, he did not think the Times was wrong in speaking of the Rajah as it had done. (Hear, hear.) Our reasons might be selfish, but they were founded on a policy that had existed since the world began, and which he supposed would exist till it ended. With respect to the votes he had given on the subject, he had certainly always voted against the hon. proprietor's motions, as he should do against the present motion; but he did not by that intend to offer his opinion on the guilt or otherwise of the Rajah. His reason for so voting had been, and was then, that he thought the motion submitted to his consideration not likely to have a beneficial effect. (Hear, hear.)

Col. SYKES said his opinion had been so often expressed, it was not necessary to repeat it; but he wished to observe, that by the Hindoo and Mahomedan laws, the Rajah being dead, his political rights had died with him. He had not the power to appoint an heir to feudal tenures and civil rights; to do so required the sanction of the paramount law, and this had not been given. The legal heir to the throne at present occupied it, and he alone could appoint a successor. (Hear, hear.) With respect to the effect of the climate of Benares on the Rajah's health, he would only say, that he (Col. Sykes) had been a member of the Court of Directors for eight years, and no application during that time had been made for the removal of the Rajah; if there had been, he was sure it would have been most cheerfully acceded to by all the members of that Court. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MARRIOTT suggested that this case had best be disposed of in Parliament.

The CHAIRMAN.—I do not intend, on the present occasion, to enter at all into the merits of the case, nor shall I attempt to reply to some of the speakers we have heard, for I should not be on an equal footing with them. (Hear, hear.) The object of the present motion is for further inquiry. Now I must give it as my opinion, that there never was a case more diligently inquired into, more coolly argued, or more carefully examined than the case of the Rajah of Sattara. (Hear, hear.) After so many repeated decisions, it seems needless to urge for further inquiry; and therefore I shall, as on a former occasion, propose the question of adjournment, as an amendment to the present motion. (Hear, hear.) The Government of India, and all the legally constituted authorities who have decided against the Rajah, have been denounced as oppressors and murderers; but we cannot but suppose that they were actuated by proper and honourable motives (hear), and that the principles of justice influenced their decisions as much as the decisions of the friends of the Rajah. (Hear, hear.) This Court has decided eight or nine times on this case already, and I really do not see any necessity for overruling those decisions, nor for appointing a committee for further inquiry; I therefore move that the Court do now adjourn. (Hear, hear.)

The DEPUTY CHAIRMAN (Lieut. Gen. Sir J. L. Lushington, G.C.B.) seconded the amendment.

Mr. HUME replied.—If the principle advocated by the Chairman were adopted, that a case that had been decided should not be re-opened, in how many instances would justice be defeated. (Hear.) There was no novelty in the Court reversing its former judgment. One hon. proprietor had said this case ought to go to Parliament, but Sir Robert Peel had told him (Mr. Hume) that the Court of Proprietors was the proper place for its discussion, as they were entrusted with the government of India. He asked no man to say whether the Rajah were innocent or guilty, but only to say there was ground for further inquiry. At the conclusion of the hon. proprietor's reply, strangers having retired to the gallery, a division was about to take place, when a desultory conversation ensued. Mr. Hume asked if the Chairman would take down the names of the voters.

The CHAIRMAN said—No, it was not customary to do so.

The question of Mr. George Thompson's eligibility to vote, which was raised at the last Court, was revived, when

The CHAIRMAN said that the question had been submitted to the legal advisers of the Court, who were of opinion that the hon. proprietor was not entitled to vote.

Mr. George Thompson then retired from among the body of voters.

Mr. Hume wished to know which would be put first, the motion or amendment?

Sir J. W. Hogg said, the hon. proprietor must be perfectly aware that a motion of adjournment always took precedence. If the amendment were lost, the hon. proprietor's motion would then be put; but if the amendment were adopted, the adjournment instantly took place, and the Court was at an end.

It was then moved, "That the Court do now adjourn." And on a division taking place, the numbers were,—

Against	25
Majority for	38

The Court instantly broke up.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

FEB. 12.—Smith v. the E.I.C.—Judgment.—Sir L. SHAW-WELL delivered the judgment of the Court in favour of the plaintiff. He had made out a complete case against the Company, though the Company had acted with great fairness throughout. Costs to be paid by the defendants.

FEB. 17.—Mitford v. Reynolds.—The question in this case arose on two clauses in the will of a gentleman named Mitford, who had been in the East-India Company's service, and had amassed considerable property. In his will, Mr. Mitford ordered that a place called the "Mount" should be bought for his mausoleum, and that, after paying sundry legacies specified, the residue of his property should go to the benefit of the town of Dacca, in Bengal. The testator died in 1836, and the widow instituted this suit for the purpose of having the last bequest declared null, and the one as to the mausoleum illegal. The Vice-Chancellor and the Chancellor decided on the validity of the will as regarded the charitable bequest to Dacca. It was referred to the Master to know how much the mausoleum would cost, and that gentleman reported it at £1,269; but the owner of the "Mount" would not sell it. The case was now brought before the Court for further directions, and it was argued on behalf of the institutor, that as the purchase of the mausoleum could not be effected, it was impossible to carry out the intention of the testator, who willed that the residue, after the purchase of the "Mount," should be applied in charitable purposes at Dacca. It was, contra, contended that the bequest of the purchase of the "Mount" failed to the benefit of the town of Dacca. Judgment reserved.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRESENTATION OF PLATE TO LORD ELLENBOROUGH.—A magnificent service of plate for presentation to Lord Ellenborough by his friends in India, has just been completed by the eminent silversmiths Messrs. Hunt and Roskill. The service consists of a centre-piece, two ornaments for the ends of the table, two candelabra, four ice-pails, four desert-stands, and 132 table-plates; it weighs in all 7,000 ounces, and is valued at £6,000. The designs were furnished by Mr. Frank Howard, and the modelling was entrusted to Mr. Alfred Brown, a young artist, we believe, in the employ of the manufacturers. The centre-piece is a work of great elaboration and high finish; it consists of two figures, Asia crowning Britannia, very chastely designed and carefully executed. The pedestal is of Indian architecture, with palm-leaves at the angles. In the panels are the arms of the recipient; the inscription simply, "Presented to the Earl of Ellenborough, as a mark of respect and esteem, by his friends and admirers in India;" and, in alto relievo of dead silver, the signing of the treaty of Nankin. On the base are figures of a captive Afghan, a captive Chinese, and a British sepoy, with the British lion between; and in the lower panels, views of Calcutta, Cabel, and Canton. The supporters are recumbent elephants. These animals are so beautifully designed and executed as at once to arrest attention. The ornaments for the end of the table are the personifications of the rivers Indus and Ganges. The former reclines under a plantain-tree, the latter under a cotton-tree; the rhinoceros in the latter is most admirably executed. It was, we believe, taken from a living model, and such care was used to secure accuracy, that a cast of the skin was made to obtain a correct resemblance of its texture. These ornaments are supported by Brahmin bulls, and the candelabra rest on recumbent camels, both which animals are as strikingly meritorious as the elephants in the centre-piece. The candelabra are chiefly in dead silver, and consist of entwined vine-stems, very beautifully executed, with figures of different portions of the military service, both European and native. The ice-pails are of lotus-leaves and flowers, supported by plantains and other Indian flowers, with Indian figures at the angles. The desert-stands consist of two Hindoo girls, one depositing her lamp on the water of the Ganges, and the other plucking the sacred moon-plant; a Hindoo flower-seller; and a Hindoo fruit-seller. Round the edges of the plates are the lotus-flowers. To describe adequately the manifold beauties of these splendid specimens of art would require more space than we can allow. Of the person for whom they are intended we will here say nothing, but it is only bare justice to observe, that they reflect the highest credit on both the designer and modeller, and are worthy of the manufactory from which they issue.

ENGAGEMENT OF SHIPS.—The following ships have been engaged for the conveyance of troops and stores to India:—the Elizabeth, for the conveyance of troops to Madras; the Lady Macdonald, and the Plantagenet, for the conveyance of stores to Calcutta; and the Essex, and Bucephalus, for the same object, to Bombay.

LITERARY NOTICES.

A Plea for Peasant Proprietors; with the Outlines of a Plan for their establishment in Ireland. By WILLIAM THOMAS THORNTON, author of "Over-Population and its Remedy." London, 1848. Murray.

A cold and heartless philosophy (so called) has too long lorded it over both the world of literature and that of legislation. It has been held that man is far inferior to the products to which his industry and ingenuity give existence; that if his labour be not wanted by his more fortunate brethren, and he have no property, he has no right to live, and that he ought by all means to be kept from acquiring property in land, and even from procuring the use of it for the exercise of his strength and perseverance in the struggle for life. Small estates and small farms have been the pet aversions of those who, for some years past, have dictated ex cathedra to their gaping readers and hearers what they should do in regard to the production and distribution of wealth. To 'add house to house and lay field to field' was held to be the perfection of political wisdom, and to indicate the highest elevation of personal merit. Men might be tolerated at the seats of great manufactures, because, notwithstanding the progress of machinery, their services, or at least the services of the weaker of the human species, women and children, could not entirely be dispensed with; but in rural districts, men, women, and children were to be kept down to a minimum. A few might remain to watch the sheep which so largely displaced the higher order of animals, but to "increase and multiply" was forbidden them. They were not wanted, and they must be kept down. These doctrines originated in sources of very questionable, and indeed more than questionable, character; but they were not long confined to the turbid and unwholesome water in which they were spawned. They came forth to poison all the streams of thought and communication, and from a select circle of philosophers, whose philosophy consisted in atheism, absolute or qualified, they emerged into general society; not excepting that in which right orthodox opinions were not only expected, but professed. Dogmas, which no extent of ingenuity could reconcile with revelation, were embraced by those who had solemnly bound themselves to be the soldiers and champions of the latter; tongues and pens, ecclesiastical and even episcopal, gave currency to the new doctrines, and strove hard to bring into approximation (for harmony was impossible) the philosophy of pure selfishness with the religion of universal benevolence.

We would fain hope that a better state of affairs is about to arise. It is true that there are yet in the field champions of those doctrines to which posterity will refer as having disgracefully characterized the first half of the nineteenth century, and they are vigorous and thoroughgoing partisans; but the very pertinacity with which they cling to the most exceptionable points of their creed, and the consistent absurdity with which they uphold them, may be regarded as evidence of desperation. Whether, however, this be so or not, there are not wanting symptoms from which the friends of humanity and truth may take heart. The theory under which it was demonstrated that it was the bounden duty of the rich to starve the poor, has broken down in practice, and several writers have appeared to dispute the assumption that the world was made for Cæsar, or for a little knot of Cæsars. Leviathan estates and cornerment farms have also their opponents, and among those who have come forward to demonstrate the superior advantages of small holdings, the author of the volume now before us holds a very high and distinguished place. He shews, beyond the possibility of fair dispute, that such holdings are better for the poor—better, whether we regard the physical or the moral elements of happiness. This, indeed, by certain philosophers, will be held a matter of little account; but, for their edification, he also proves that small farms are far more productive than large ones, and that their owners do not increase their numbers like rabbits in a warren. There is nothing like the evidence of facts; and the author of "A Plea for Peasant Proprietors" has collected with extraordinary industry, and arranged with extraordinary skill, a mass of facts which will produce conviction with all but two classes—those who are determined not to be convinced, and those to whom nature has denied the power of appreciating the force and value of evidence. He brings evidence from the North and the South, and the East and the West—he ransacks ancient history, and commands modern experience to give up its stores—and, from the examples offered by the Hebrews, the Greeks, and the Romans, as well as by most of the nations of modern Europe, examples whether for warning or for imitation, he deduces proof of the incomparable value of small farms, whether regard be had to production, social enjoyment, or social virtue. In the wide review brought before us there is but a single exception to grapple with, and that is Ireland, which affords an exception to every thing. This, however, is disposed of as felicitously as the causes illustrative of the general rule are brought forward. The exception, on examination, turns out to be only apparent, not real.

The small space which we are able to devote to literary notices forbids our dwelling at great length on any work, however valuable. But for this we might be tempted to give such an abstract of the facts and arguments of a volume which we have perused with so much pleasure, as would place our readers in possession of a fair outline of its contents. We regret the less our inability to do this, inasmuch as the size of the book is not such as to appal the most nervous student. The volume is a small one, and may be read attentively within the compass of a few hours. We commend it to all who love their species, and are anxious to promote their happiness. On one or two points—as, for instance, succession to land by primogeniture (such succession not being enforced by law, but left, as in this country, to be set aside or modified by individual will)—we might, perhaps, differ from the author; but his general views are most sound, and his moderation is not less worthy of praise. Cobbett (a writer certainly more remarkable for ability than moderation, but who manfully fought the battle of the class from which he himself had sprung) maintained that there should be farms of all sizes, so that while some farmers were little better than labourers, others should be little inferior to gentlemen. As Cobbett, with all his faults, is rather a favourite with us, we are pleased to observe a coincidence of opinion in this respect between him and the author of the "Plea," and with an extract illustrating this coincidence we conclude our notice of this admirable volume:—

"By the preceding vindication of small farmers and small proprietors, it was not implied that all farms and all estates should be small. Very little reflection will show that disparity of ranks and fortunes is essential to the welfare of mankind. If a community in which there are many indigent cannot properly be called happy, the happiness of a community in which there are none rich enough to command and to avail themselves of leisure cannot be of a much more exalted character than that of cattle. To secure the welfare of agricultural labourers, it seems indispensable that they should not be entirely dependent on the hire of their services, but should be owners or tenants of pieces of land sufficient to afford them occupation and subsistence when they cannot procure employment elsewhere. It is also desirable, at least, that of the holdings large enough to be entitled farms, some should be small enough to lie within reach of a mere labourer's ambition, and stimulate him to exertion, by offering him hopes of rising above his actual station. But it is not less desirable that there should also be many farms so extensive as to require the superintendence of men of considerable wealth and proportionate instruction, who would avail themselves of the discoveries of science, and effect improvements in agriculture; and would also serve as models for their humbler neighbours in their modes of life and general habits of thinking, as well as in the conduct of their business. All peasants should be landholders, but all landholders should not be peasants. In the agricultural, as in all other classes, the interests of the members would be best promoted by a just gradation of ranks."

The Parlour Library, No. XII., Rosa and Gertrude, and My Uncle's Library. By RUDOLPH TÖPFFER. London and Belfast, 1848. Simms and M'Intyre.

THE works of Töpffer are by no means so well known in this country as they deserve to be, and we rejoice to see two of his best introduced in Messrs. Simms and M'Intyre's cheap and popular periodical. A healthy tone of morality pervades his writings, and we doubt if any one can read the productions of his pen without being charmed by his simple, graceful, and touching sketches of men and manners. They are valuable additions to the Parlour Library, and will not fail to become great favourites. Other works, by the same author, are to follow.

H. & T. PEAT, SADDLERS, HARNESS-MAKERS, &c., No. 167, PICCADILLY, LONDON, avail themselves of the present opportunity gratefully to acknowledge the patronage which they have received for so many years from their numerous connections in India, and to solicit a continuance of that preference which it has ever been their endeavour to deserve. At the same time, they beg to state that, from their very severe losses, they are compelled to decline the execution of any orders unless accompanied by an order for payment (when shipped) upon some agent or mercantile house in London.

It is also necessary that the name of an agent at the presidency should be given, to whom the goods are to be consigned, as the utmost despatch will be used in the shipments from London.

PEAT feel bound, in justice to themselves, to make it known that large quantities of saddlery, &c. bearing their name and address, which are not of their make, are sent out to India, and elsewhere, by other parties, and are of very inferior qualities. Gentlemen should, therefore, send their orders direct to H. and T. P. to ensure articles of their manufacture.

All military orders, whether Cavalry, Infantry, Staff, Artillery, or Engineer, will be executed according to the latest regulation, and a discount of 5 per cent. allowed for cash payments.

N.B.—H. and T. P. beg to recommend for durability their 10, 11, and 12 lb. saddles, in preference to the lighter ones of 7, 8, and 9 lbs., at present so much in demand for India; and likewise to observe that, in all cases where the goods are not insured, H. and T. P. cannot be accountable for any damage the same may receive after shipment.

WOUNDS in a LEG THAT HAD BEEN BAD FOR YEARS CURED BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Mr. W. Darling, of Stirkoke-by-Wick, had suffered very severely for a long time with deep wounds in his leg, and in his endeavours to get them healed he obtained the advice of many eminent surgeons, and tried almost every remedy, yet all failed to effect a cure, until he used Holloway's Ointment and Pills: these invaluable medicines alone healed his leg in a few weeks, and it is now as sound as ever. Holloway's Ointment is a safe and certain cure for old wounds, burning scalds, tumours, chubains, and unnatural swellings. Sold by all druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 94, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

TO FLAUTISTS.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON (SOLE MAKER OF THE CELEBRATED CHARLES NICHOLSON'S FLUTES), takes this opportunity to inform the Musical Public in India and the Colonies that he now also manufactures Flutes on the principle of the talented Flautist, JOSH. RICHARDSON; therefore all future orders should state whether a "NICHOLSON" or "RICHARDSON" Flute is required.

These instruments possess a remarkable brilliancy of tone, and are perfect in intonation and tune in every key; the superiority of style in the finishing department leaves nothing to be wished for by the connoisseur, and the plan adopted only by T. P. of seasoning the wood for extreme climates renders these instruments far superior to any others now manufactured.

The prices are the same as for the "Nicholson's" Flutes, and vary, according to their number of keys, from 11 guineas to 30 guineas; and purchasers, to prevent their being imposed upon, will receive a certificate, signed by the approver and maker, thus—JOSH. RICHARDSON and THOMAS PROWSE.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or by an order through their agent in London.

JOWETT'S PATENT HYDRAULIC TELEGRAPH. Offices—17, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND, adjoining the "Morning Post" and "Court Journal."

PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT.

In the present important advancement in the various branches of science, probably one of the most prominent productions of fertile genius is that of instantaneous correspondence by telegraphic means upon railroads. Telegraphic communication by electric machinery has already exhibited upon numerous lines of locomotive traffic the great advantages derived by the public through the medium of its powerful agency. But, successful as the telegraphic mode of correspondence by electric aid may be considered, far more effective results will be secured to the public by Jowett's Patent Hydraulic Telegraph.

The Patentee, in the present limited detail, merely claims public attention to the following items:—Firstly, the economy in the construction of the Hydraulic Telegraph will be at least a saving of two-thirds compared with the outlay required by the electric, independently of the considerable increase of speed. Secondly, no expense whatever (after the first amount for construction) will be necessary to provide for the continuous working of the Hydraulic Telegraph, it being beyond the possibility of doubt that any atmospheric changes can interfere with or effect the success of its operations. Thirdly, no physical impediment can compete with the perpetual use of the Hydraulic Telegraph, neither height, depth, sinuosity, nor distance, opposing in the slightest degree its perfect action.

Detailed printed particulars are in preparation. In the meantime the Patentees may be seen daily, from 11 to 3, at the Office, 17, Wellington-street, Strand, where the models and plans are open to the inspection of the public.

A dessert spoonful is a dose, equal to half a pint of Compound Decoction of Sarsaparilla, as ordered by the London College of Physicians. In bottles:—Pints, 12s.; half-pints, 8s.; and quarter pints, 4s. 6d. Messrs. Bridge beg to caution the public against spurious imitations which are now being sold, and respectfully intimate that none is genuine without having the name of T. A. BRIDGE engraved on each bottle. Also T. A. BRIDGE and Co.'s QUINTESSENCE of JAMAICA GINGER, a celebrated remedy for Indigestion, Flatulency, Gout, Rheumatism, Spasms, Debility, and all nervous affections. The great inconvenience of taking ginger in powder is quite obviated by this preparation, which, by a chemical process, contains all the properties of the best Jamaica Ginger in the highest state of concentration, a few drops being a dose. It is recommended by the first medical men in the kingdom. During sea-sickness, and afterwards, it is most beneficial, in doses of twenty to thirty drops. Families going abroad should be careful to provide themselves with it.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Beware of spurious "KALYDORS," which contain mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the complexion, and by their repellent action endanger health.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 90, Hatten Garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the subtleties of some Shopkeepers, who, to compounds of their own manufacture, give the titles of "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," some under the implied sanction of Royalty and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials (substituting fictitious names and addresses for the real of the original preparations. The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," are "ROWLANDS';" and the wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS" preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

WORTHY OF PUBLIC ATTENTION!!!

CHAPMAN'S UNIVERSAL PILLS, a combination of the most approved virtues of the Vegetable Kingdom, blended together in such due and just proportions, as to form at length an article which, they confidently venture to affirm, will be found superior to any thing of the kind hitherto made known; they contain not a particle of Mercury, or any other pernicious ingredients, but act almost imperceptibly, but none the less surely, as a gentle purifier of the blood and invigorator of the system. Their private use has been for many years so extensive with that of the Universal Salve, to which they will be found most valuable agents.

The Proprietors might say much in their favour, and would enlarge upon their merits, were they not anxious that they should stand upon their own, and not have the appearance of being (as is too commonly the case) puffed into notice. They will, therefore, content themselves by saying that, in all cases of Bilious Attacks, Indigestion, Constipation of the Bowels, Sick Head-ache, frequent Nausea, Chronic Rheumatism, Lumbago, violent Cold or Cough, Jaundice, and in short all Internal Diseases, their aid will be found to be invaluable.

Sold in boxes, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each. Wholesale Depot, 5, Swallow Place, Regent Street.

Be particular in asking for CHAPMAN'S UNIVERSAL PILLS.

WILLIAM BISHOP, 170, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, Agent to WESTLEY RICHARDS, begs to inform his friends in India, and the members of the various Services in general, that he continues to manufacture every description of Fire-arms peculiarly adapted for use in the East; and he particularly invites their attention to his much improved Rifles for tiger and elephant shooting, and also to his light and serviceable double-barrelled Guns for either ball or shot.

FOR STOPPING DECAYED TEETH.—Patronized

by her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and H. R. H. the Duchess of Kent.—Mr. THOMAS HOWARD'S SUCCEDANEUM, for Stopping Decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and soon becomes as hard as the enamel, and will remain firm in the tooth for many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, and arresting the further progress of decay. All persons can use Mr. Howard's Succedaneum themselves with ease, as full directions are enclosed. Price 2s. 6d. Prepared only by Thomas Howard, Surgeon-Dentist, 64, Berners-street, who will send it into the country free by post. Sold by Savory, 230, Regent-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Seakins, 4, Strand; Butler, 4, Cheapside; Johnston, 60, Cornhill, and all Medicine Vendors. Price 2s. 6d. Mr. Howard continues to supply the loss of teeth on his new system of self-adhesion, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. 64, Berners-street, Oxford-street. At home from 11 till 4.

R. WEDGEWOOD'S PATENT MANIFOLD

R. WRITER, established forty years, for copying letters, invoices, &c., in duplicate and triplicate. The invention completely supersedes the use of the ordinary pen and ink; it produces a letter and its copy at one operation, both as plain and indelible as if written with the blackest and most permanent ink, or, if required, a letter with duplicates and a copy, all in durable ink, and with a pen that requires no repairs. It is so simple in its operation, that the aged and infirm can use it with the greatest ease; it is cheap and portable in construction, and affords an immense saving in time and expense to merchants, bankers, and solicitors, and indeed to all who have occasion to write much, and who desire to retain copies of their letters, or send duplicates abroad. Was patronized by their late Majesties King George the Third, George the Fourth, and William the Fourth; by the late Emperor Alexander of Russia, who presented the inventor with a superb diamond ring of great value; also by British and Foreign Ambassadors; the Observatories of Greenwich, Edinburgh, Cape of Good Hope, &c., and persons of rank, science, and ability, in situations official and commercial, from whom the patentee has received numerous voluntary testimonials of its utility.—Manufactory, 4, Rathbone Place, London.—Agents at Calcutta, W. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, and D. WILSON and Co.—Orders received direct, or through the houses of agency in London.

WELL, Purveyors in ordinary by appointment to her Majesty, beg respectfully to inform the nobility and gentry that they continue to manufacture this delicious and justly-celebrated SAUCE, in handsome china vases for the table, in pint and half-pint bottles; also their improved Essence of real Gorgona Anchovies, Dismore's Essence of Shrimps for boiled and fried fish, the celebrated Soho Sauce for game, Sir Robert Peel's Sauce for general purposes, Anchovy Paste, Strasburg Potted Meats, &c. The whole of the above, together with their superior Pickles, may be obtained of all the principal Sauce-vendors throughout the kingdom.—Manufactory, 21, Soho Square.

IMPORTANT PATENT IMPROVEMENT in CHRO-

NOMETERS and WATCHES.—E. J. DENT, 22, Strand, and 23, Cockspur Street, by special appointment Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Queen and H. R. H. Prince Albert, and who obtained the high distinction of receiving the Government Reward for the unparalleled performance of the best Chronometer ever submitted to twelve months' public trial, beg to acquaint the public that the manufacture of his Watches, Chronometers, and Clocks is secured to him by three separate patents, respectively granted in 1836, 1840, and 1842.—Silver Lever Watches, jewelled in four holes, £8. 6s. each; in gold cases, from £8 to £10 extra.—Gold Horizontal Watches, with gold dials, from £8. 6s. to £12. 12s. each.—DENT'S "Appendix" to his recent work on "Time-keepers" is now ready for circulation.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY, AND THE BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY.

J. KOHLER'S NEW PATENT LEVER INSTRUMENTS.

J. KOHLER having brought to perfection and obtained her Majesty's Letters Patent for the above invention, which he has applied to the CORNOPEAN, TRUMPET-CORNETTO, TROMBONES, and FRENCH HORNS, he can now with great confidence, after an experience of five years in bringing the action to its present state of perfection, recommend them to her Majesty's Army and Navy, and all professors and amateurs. The advantages that this patent gives to these instruments are,—

1. All the tones and semitones produced by the Patent Lever are quite as perfect as the natural notes on the instrument.
2. The intervals in the Diatonic and Chromatic Scales are perfect, the compass greater, and the most rapid and difficult passages may be performed with a precision, freedom, and fulness of tone, and comparative ease to the performer.
3. Combinations in harmony, which never before could be performed at all by any brass instruments, may now be executed with perfect ease, and ten or twelve instruments on this principle can produce a more rich and sonorous effect than twenty-four could do on the old principles. The harshness of tone in the former brass instruments is entirely done away with, and a set of these instruments, heard together, produces military and harmonious effects never before heard.

These instruments are now in use in her Majesty's Private Band, First Life Guards, Royal Horse Guards, Grenadier Guards, Fusilier Guards, Royal Artillery, 60th Royal Rifles, &c. Testimonials, drawings, and prices, forwarded on application at J. KOHLER'S Manufactory, 36, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL, MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRACTORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced managers) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus preventing MILITARY and NAVAL OFFICERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAILING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessities to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burthened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DEPARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL. The SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. The WORKSHOPS for Clothing, at 44, Bishopsgate-street Within; for SHIRTS and CABIN FURNITURE, at 33 and 34, Nassau-place, Commercial-road; and for SHIRTS, STAYS, BRACES, &c., at LANDPORT, near PORTSMOUTH.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventative of the many diseases arising from check of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. The manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats: the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all itching or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and the very general approval and consequent demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vigonia, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 152, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glennly undertake to forward them in dozens or half-dozen to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free, at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 70s. per dozen, and Ladies', 60s. per dozen; and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 12s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 18s. per dozen to Bombay.

OUTFITS TO INDIA, BY SHIP AND OVERLAND. Every particular connected with outfits to India, both for ladies and gentlemen, including detailed lists of requisite clothing, uniforms, &c. &c. for every appointment, with the necessary variations for the outfits of CIVILIANS, CADETS, ASSISTANT-SURGEONS, &c. together with every information respecting passage by ship and by the overland route, baggage, packing, &c., will be forwarded on application to Messrs. Thresher and Glennly, as above.

JOHN BESEMERES and SONS, CLOTHIERS, OUTFITTERS, and Ready-made Linen Warehousemen, invite Cadets and overland travellers to India to inspect this Portable Bedstead, price 12s. 6d., invented and made only by them. Although so light, it is strong, compact, of full size, and may be used without a mattress; it passes readily into a bag 6 inches in diameter, 24 long. Bedstead, bedding, blankets, sheets, quilt, &c., packed in one of their (21s.) Waterproof Regulation Overland Trunks, weigh under 50 lbs. SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

ON all but commercial subjects the news brought by the mail, whose arrival it is now our duty to report, is meagre indeed. In regard to these the intelligence brings nothing calculated to abate the dissatisfaction and anxiety which have prevailed for some time past. The very few points of general intelligence fitting to be noticed here may be dispatched in very few words.

The PUNJAB is quiet. OUDE and the NIZAM'S DOMINIONS in their usual state. SCINDE, upon the whole, is tolerably healthy, though small-pox had appeared at HYDRABAD. Rumours from CABOOL, of the intention of DOST MAHOMED to seek an asylum within the British dominions, were again afloat.

The Earl of DALHOUSIE has arrived at Calcutta, and Lord HARDINGE has departed from that place. Nothing of the slightest interest can, we believe, be added to the above scanty catalogue of events; and now we arrive at the more painful task of advertng to commercial occurrences.

At CALCUTTA the great and absorbing subject of interest is the failure of the Union Bank. The state of the affairs of this establishment appears to be as bad as possible; and the exposures rendered inevitable by its embarrassments will arrest attention here not less than in India. Its position, and the course of management through which it has arrived at it, will be understood by a perusal of the report of the committee appointed to investigate its affairs, and the statement of its late secretary, both of which will be found in our columns. An abridged view is furnished in the following extract from a local paper:—

"Again the contents of our budget are almost exclusively commercial in their character and interest. On this occasion, however, the interest is in a great measure confined to the proceedings in respect to one commercial institution, the Union Bank of Calcutta. After lingering for some time, buoyed up by the delusive hope of being able to struggle through its difficulties, this concern has at last been closed—for the present, probably for ever. For some days it was a matter of notoriety that demands on the Bank had not been met, and an impression got abroad that undue preferences had been exhibited. Still, the concern remained in a state of suspended animation for some time longer, until the threat of legal proceedings from long-suffering creditors induced the proprietors assembled at the general half-yearly meeting, on the 15th instant, to resolve on closing its doors from that date.

"We mentioned in our last that a meeting of proprietors was convened for the 10th, from which important results were anticipated. This meeting took place at the time appointed, and was very fully attended. At this meeting two somewhat remarkable transactions illustrating of the past management of the Bank's affairs, were fully canvassed.

"One of these was the "misappropriation" of 4½ lakhs of the Bank's post bills, charged to Messrs. Cockerell, Larpent, and Co. of London, in a recent report of the directors. From the explanations now offered, and the correspondence submitted to the meeting, it appeared that these post bills were remitted to and to be held by Messrs. Cockerell, Larpent, and Co. as security for the same amount of bills drawn on them by the Bank, and negotiated in Calcutta as a means of raising money. Messrs. C., L. and Co. however, instead of retaining the post bills as was intended, negotiated them for their own purposes. When the house failed, the Bank became responsible for these bills, as well as for those which it had drawn upon and which had been accepted by the firm. In the other transaction, the Commercial Bank of Bombay had remitted to the Union Bank four lakhs of rupees' worth of bills on London, to be negotiated in Calcutta, and the proceeds returned to Bombay immediately in Bank of Bengal post-bills. The bills were sold, and about ninety thousand rupees of the price sent as ordered—the rest having, in some unaccountable manner got mixed up, and being paid away with, the Bank's own moneys.

"The chief business done at this meeting was the appointment of a committee to investigate this last 'lamentable affair,' as one of the directors described it, and of another to examine and report upon the condition and prospects of the concern generally. A full detail of the proceedings will be found in subsequent columns.

"At the usual half-yearly meeting, which was held on the 15th inst., the attendance was again numerous. The Committee appointed to act with the directors in investigating the affairs of the Bank had not, as may be supposed, found time to prepare a full report. A statement was, however, submitted to the meeting exhibiting the liabilities of the Bank and its assets, at their present estimated value. The former, according to this account, amount to Rs. 69,08,610, and the latter to Rs. 81,07,870, leaving a balance of Rs. 11,99,260, or say twelve lakhs, in favour of the Bank. It will be seen, then, that if this statement is to be relied on the Bank should have something to spare after having paid all its debts. But the question of solvency or insolvency does not depend so much on the balance-sheet in this case as on the treatment which the concern may receive at the hands of its creditors. If it is allowed time to realise its property to the best advantage, the hopes and expectations held out by the statement to which we have referred may be fulfilled; but if its creditors become impatient and drive it to extremities, its property must be sacrificed for what it will fetch in forced sales at a bad time, and will, after all, probably be found quite insufficient to meet the claims against it. At this meeting a committee was appointed to recommend a plan for the immediate winding up of the Bank. It consisted of Messrs. H. M. Elliott, T. C. Morton, W. F. Fergusson, James Stuart, and James Calder Stewart. It was finally resolved to adjourn until the 22nd (to-morrow), when the report and scheme of the committee will be received.

"At the various meetings of the proprietors, in some of the public papers, and in private circles, it had been asserted that Mr. J. C. Stewart, the former secretary of the Bank, had improperly connived with the directors in their mismanagement, and that for some part of the Bank's misfortunes he was himself to blame. At the meeting of the 15th, when these charges took a tangible form, Mr. Stewart explained on some points in a manner that convinced most of the proprietors assembled, that their difficulties were in no way attributable to him; but that, on the contrary, he had all along protested against the system in which they had originated. Since then he has published in the newspapers a full explanatory statement, which confirms and strengthens the favourable impression which his oral address to the meeting had created. It shews that he had, from the time of his appointment, been actively opposed to some of the most dangerous, and as the event has proved, ruinous features of the system which he had found in existence; that he had exerted himself, and not altogether unsuccessfully, to introduce reforms; and that when he found that he could not conscientiously continue to be the passive agent of a direction whom he was bound by the debt to obey "in all things," he had resigned. He has been blamed, and, perhaps, not altogether without reason, for not making the cause of his resignation generally known to the proprietors; but it may be urged in his justification, that the propriety of such a measure was not then so apparent as it is now, and that Mr. Stewart might very allowably feel some unwillingness to embarrass the directors, and alarm the shareholders, without very urgent necessity for so doing."

"The public attention for the month has been entirely engrossed by the sad spectacle commercial affairs have presented at Calcutta, disclosed to us by the discussions of the late Union Bank. The establishment in question has every year published its balances, shown profits, and given dividends, when it was in reality on the eve of insolvency. Its paid-up capital exceeded a million sterling: nearly the whole of this was in the hands of merchants engaged in indigo speculations, to whom the Bank were in the habit of giving accommodation of a quarter of a million annually. They were not in the habit of writing off bad debts, and never therefore appeared to have made any losses. They indulged in the system of unlimited and unrestricted credits on bills, and the houses of Colvill, Gilmour, and Co. and Cockerell and Co. were a twelvemonth since 250,000l. in the Bank's debt: when the late commercial crisis occurred, they owed it 600,000l. On one occasion it appears two of the directors who were refused discount of a bill by the general board, went to the treasurer, and secretly obtained the cash without authority. On another occasion a director was detected by the secretary attempting to possess himself of a Government paper, to be applied to his own use. In June last, the bank being in much difficulty for moneys, drew on the firm of Larpent, Cockerell and Co. of London, the Calcutta branch of which owed them above a quarter of a million sterling, for 50,000l. at ten months' date. The liquidation of these was to be duly provided for long before they became due. To prevent all apprehension of risk, bank post bills to this amount were forwarded to London to be retained as securities till the others reached maturity, when, if all went right, they were to be returned to Calcutta. The London house accepted the bills, and Messrs. Jardine, Skinner and Co., in whose hands 30,000l. worth of post bills had been lodged, for safety's sake, discounted them—the bank receiving and appropriating the proceeds. Messrs. Larpent, Cockerell, and Co. finding bankruptcy at hand, negotiated the security bills and appropriated the money, and then failed, leaving the Bank to settle with Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co. and of course occasioning a loss to the extent appropriated, less the dividend on the bankrupt estate. In the end of October, before the bankruptcy of the London house, which had occurred in the beginning of the month, became known, Mr. Larpent, of the Calcutta house, accepted its bills for 20,000l. drawn at ten months, on the home firm, and appropriated the proceeds. The Commercial Bank of Bombay having, in November, sent 40,000l. worth of bills to be sold by the Union Bank at Calcutta, directing the proceeds to be immediately returned to Bombay in Bank of Bengal bills, the Union Bank sold the bills, received the money, and made use of it! The Bank has now closed its accounts, its stock is all gone, and those who held shares, and looked for dividends as a source of income, are penniless. A call of 20l. more-over, is about to be made on each share, to meet the immediate demands of the creditors: this, it is said, will be refunded with interest. The directors of the Bank, of whom the gentleman so often named was one, were its chief debtors: they discounted their own bills, and borrowed from themselves. As if to complete the misery occasioned by the failure, the London Life Insurance Society invests 50,000l. of its capital in Bank shares, and is unable to pay the annual premium to policy-holders. So much for the direct transactions of the Bank; the terrible system of dealing just described seems not to have been confined to one establishment. When Palmer and Co. failed in 1830, spreading wretchedness and ruin through so many families, Mr. Larpent was appointed one of the trustees to wind up the affairs of the establishment; by degrees all the assignees save two have disappeared: the one just named having realised 20,000l. from the estate, deposited them, first in the Union Bank, and then transferred them to his own house, now bankrupt, and this loan has been sealed up with the rest."

The houses of LACKERSTEIN and Co. and JOHN WREN-HOLT and Co. have been added to the list of CALCUTTA failures. The affairs of both houses are to be wound up under inspectors. At BOMBAY the house of BROWNLEE and Co. has suspended payment, and called a meeting of its creditors.

Such is the state of things in India, and we have only to hope that we have seen the worst.

BENGAL.

THE UNION BANK.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE UNION BANK.

We have devoted ourselves daily, during the past week, to the duty assigned to us, of examining the assets and liabilities of the bank, and digesting a scheme for the liquidation of the latter. The conclusion at which we have arrived is the most painful one,—that the liabilities exceed the assets,—that the bank therefore, as such, is insolvent, and that prompt and stringent measures must be adopted to wind it up. To very many out of the long list of shareholders this sentence is one of utter ruin;—to all, it carries loss and misfortune; but we think that the most sanguine will admit that there is no other alternative.

We have received several communications calling upon us to investigate and report on the causes of the bank's insolvency; but it appeared to us that we had no authority as a committee to enter into this important inquiry, neither did time admit of our doing so had the task been assigned to us. But we feel at liberty to express our unanimous conviction that such an investigation is indispensably necessary, and strongly recommend that it be forthwith entered upon. We think that the delinquencies which appear to have been committed should be fully exposed, and the principal parties concerned in them punished, if any instance sufficiently flagrant can be found to justify an appeal to the law. We are convinced that such an example will not be without its effect in all public institutions, controlled by a direction similarly constituted, and that it may prevent in time the perpetration of acts calculated to bring destitution upon thousands of innocent persons. Such a course we consider necessary for the vindication of the fair fame of the British community; for we are persuaded that the ruin of this once flourishing bank has not only inflicted a grievous blow on the commercial credit of Calcutta, but has sullied throughout all India our national reputation for fair and upright dealing.

We have now to report that the whole of the assets of the Bank have been most carefully and minutely examined by the committee on fully detailed statements submitted to them; but in making out the accounts for publication we have deemed it necessary to abstain, in a great measure, from detail, on account of the practical inconvenience that would be found to arise from it. The factories have been valued at very low amounts individually, and were these sums placed opposite each on the committee's valuation, it would be impossible for the parties who may be appointed to wind up the bank, to obtain any advance on these valuations, which your committee trust they may in some instances be able to do. The same observation applies, and with greater force, to the inexpediency and, indeed, impropriety of specifying the name of debtors to the bank, and the scale on which their debts are estimated. In order to obtain time, and to give the assets reasonably fair play, it appears to us that from 15 to 20 lakhs of rupees are required immediately, and for this purpose a call is indispensable. Without such a sum, or something approaching it, no proposition which the creditors are likely to accept can possibly be made, and forbearance from suits cannot be hoped for. The result of litigation will, of course, be an accumulation of costs in the first instance, thus swelling the aggregate of liabilities, and in the next place an enormous sacrifice of the assets by forced sales. The property of the bank will thus be speedily exhausted (at least the whole of it which is realisable) and the proprietors individually may then be attacked by a sufficiently summary process. If steps be not taken to avert these most calamitous consequences, it is obvious that the proprietors will ultimately be compelled to pay, and without hope of reimbursement, a much larger sum than they are now called upon voluntarily to contribute with a fair prospect of some portion at least being returned.

The question in what mode and on what principles such call should proceed, is one of very great difficulty. If the calls were per share merely, we think it would produce in the aggregate a very inadequate sum. On the one hand, many of the wealthy proprietors of the bank hold but a very few shares, while several of the largest holders of shares would be utterly unable to meet a call of even one hundred rupees per share. Moreover, such a principle of calculation of the amount payable by each, will, in many instances, lead to disputes and difficulties. What period is to be referred to in calculating the number of shares held by each individual shareholder? Numerous transfers have been made within the last few months, some bond fide, some bona fide, some have been registered, some not. Even supposing all to have been bond fide, and all complete, it is difficult to say that the period for calculating the number of shares with reference to the quantum of liability, should be the present moment. Instead of some earlier period, when the very liabilities now subsisting were incurred. Then it must be borne in mind that a call under existing circumstances is not an increase of capital, but is in some degree in the nature of an application for a loan from the shareholders, for mutual protection. If not responded to, and if the creditors are driven to sue and to resort to the shareholders individually, the liabilities of the latter will not be measured by the number of shares which they may respectively hold. The holder of a single share will be liable, as much and to as great an extent, as the holder of 500—such extent being, in fact, the whole amount of his property.

Under these circumstances we think there should be a call, not only per share, but upon proprietors individually.

The former may be considered a pro rata contribution which the deed authorizes in cases of necessity, even after the full capital has been paid up. The latter is in the nature of a compulsory loan, which the wealthy shareholders must submit to in order to avoid the greater sacrifice which refusal must entail.

With regard to the amount of call, it seems to us that the contribution per share ought not to be less than two hundred rupees. A large majority of the shareholders are, no doubt, unable to meet such a call, and probably some who are able, will not be willing. But if even a few shareholders unite, they will be able, by means of the co-operation of the creditors, to compel the dissentients to bear their share of the burden by the course of proceeding presently mentioned. We hope, however, that a considerable number will at once acknowledge the necessity of the measure, and voluntarily come forward with their contributions to the extent of their ability.

The contributions in the nature of loans are more difficult to deal with. Various plans have occurred to us, and certainly all are more or less open to objections, which it is not easy to answer. Still, money must be raised in some shape, and as creditors of the bank may select individual shareholders to proceed against without assigning any reason for the selection, the only question seems to be what is at once the least objectionable and the most effective mode of raising a considerable sum. An appeal to the shareholders generally for a voluntary loan, without specifying the amount expected from each, would doubtless be a very unproductive measure, even if accompanied with the offer of specific security. On the other hand, to fix varying amounts according to the supposed means of individual shareholders would be a highly invidious, and, at the same time, most arbitrary expedient. It seems to us, therefore, that the only alternative is to specify a certain sum, to be called for from one and all, leaving it to the direction of the future committee of management to determine which of the shareholders may reasonably be expected to make the advance in full or in part, and which of them are in such circumstances as to be wholly unable to respond to the call.

With regard to the power to make a call, we conceive that the shareholders possess it to the extent of a call per share under Clause VII. of the deed. But even viewing the call altogether as a mere application with which it is (theoretically) optional to comply, there are practical modes of enforcing it, or obtaining an equivalent, which may be legitimately resorted to by such of the shareholders as are honestly ready to meet the engagements of the bank to the utmost of their individual ability. For instance, say that only thirty or forty shareholders unite together and come forward to contribute, while many wealthy ones hold back, in the hope that contributions cannot be compelled. This hope will be found a very delusive one. The thirty or forty may appoint their committee of management, and apply to the creditors to co-operate with them, which all the large creditors will readily enough do, when they perceive that the object of those calling for their co-operation is really the legitimate one of paying the debts and dividing the burden fairly. The creditors will then resort to the distance in the first instance, and the latter may thus be compelled to pay even much more than the amount of the call. And, with this view, a register of names should be kept by the committee of management, distinguishing the dissentients.

This plan, it may be observed, has been practically tried in the cases of other joint-stock companies; and with signal success.

We further propose that every security and advantage which they can fairly ask or expect should be given to those proprietors who promptly came forward. Let them be declared to have the first lien on the surplus which may result after discharging liabilities, and let this lien attach amongst themselves in order in which their several payments have been made. In other words, let each contribution be repaid, with principal and interest, in the order of its date, before any other application of the surplus.

Some parties have proposed a scheme for forming a company to take over the entire assets and liabilities of the bank, such company to consist either wholly of present shareholders, or of shareholders and such parties as may be induced to join with them. We think the liabilities are much too large and too immediate for such a plan to be practically carried out. Moreover, there is nothing in our propositions to prevent any portion of the shareholders from uniting to take over the whole or any portion of the bank's assets at a fair valuation; but it is idle to rely upon the possibility of such an offer being made as the scheme for winding up the bank.

Our proposition is that an executive committee be appointed immediately, for the purpose of liquidating the affairs of the bank with as little loss and sacrifice as possible. The members of such committee may be called trustees, inspectors, or even directors, and one of the number may be designated secretary, or a secretary or general manager may be appointed in addition. The designations of the offices are not matters of much practical moment; but it may be advisable, with reference to the deed of copartnership, to retain, nominally at least, the machinery of management which the deed contemplates.

In regard to the powers with which such trustees or inspectors should be vested, it seems to us essential that they should constitute an executive committee of management, and that their discretion should be pretty free, and their powers extensive. We mean their powers in regard to the sale and disposal of the bank property, and the composition of debts due by and to the bank (of course they will have no power to incur new and fresh liabilities). The parties selected for the office must be such as the proprietors can with confidence rely upon in the very difficult task which they will have to perform. The general principles alone upon which they are to act, can be laid down for their guidance—the details must, necessarily, be matter of discretion.

It seems to us that one of the number should be a person not a shareholder, who should act as a paid servant of the shareholders, and be remunerated by such amount of salary as will insure the services of an able and efficient man of business, who can devote his entire time and attention to the duty. Four committees have received applications from three persons on the subject (namely, Mr. Russell, Mr. G. B. Dickson, and Mr. Beckett), but your committee have not considered it within their province to recommend the nomination of any particular candidate.

In regard to the general mode of discharging the indebtedness and liabilities of the bank, care must be taken to avoid even the appearance of giving preference to particular creditors.

But this proviso is not to be construed to deprive the trustees and inspectors of the power, when opportunity arises, of exchanging assets for liabilities, or of compounding debts (more especially those of comparatively small amount) by a cash payment.

It is scarcely necessary to add that the business of winding up the bank's affairs must be conducted on the most economical scale. We propose that the present premises should be sold to the best advantage immediately, and a suitable office rented at a moderate rate. The present establishment must of course be reduced to such a number on such salaries as the altered and limited nature of the duties requires. The details of this arrangement should, perhaps, be left to the committee, subject to approval at the next meeting.

We think that the proposition to be made to creditors should be the payment of their claims, with interest, by monthly instalments, commencing on the 1st of March next.

Of course, it must be understood by proprietors, that in making this proposition, they are pledging themselves to co-operate cordially, and to use their best endeavours to meet the call.

We have prepared, as carefully as the limited time would permit, a series of resolutions which embody the substance of our scheme for winding up the bank. These we now submit with our report to the shareholders.

(Signed by the members of the committee, consisting of Messrs. Elliott, Morton, Fergusson, J. Calder, Stewart, and James Stuart.)

That the said trustees and inspectors shall hold the property of the bank and the proceeds thereof subject, in the first instance, to the payment of all the just debts of the bank, and in the next place to secure such of the proprietors as shall contribute as hereinafter mentioned, in the order of date in which their contributions shall have been paid in.

11. That the said trustees and inspectors shall be directed and enjoined to make speedy sales of all property belonging to the bank, capable of ready realization, and that the whole of the property be announced for sale, but that it shall be in their discretion to postpone the putting up for sale of property which they may deem likely to be sacrificed if sold, and to make arrangements either with individual proprietors or with third parties for the intermediate management of such property: provided, however, that no portion of the funds of the bank or of funds produced by the sale of any of the bank's property, shall be applied to the carrying on of indigo-factories, without the approval of a special meeting of shareholders convened for that purpose, at which representatives of absent shareholders shall be allowed to vote.

12. That in paying debts or any part of debts due by the bank, the said trustees and inspectors shall not give a voluntary preference to any creditor or creditors whatever; but this proviso is not to prevent them from exchanging assets for claims, or setting off one against another where an opportunity offers for so doing on fair and equitable terms of adjustment, or from compounding debts due by the bank, say not exceeding Co.'s Rs. 1,000, by a ready-money payment.

13. That monthly meetings of proprietors be held at the premises to be rented, or elsewhere, for the conducting the affairs of the bank in liquidation, and that the accounts be open for inspection at such meetings.

14. That an immediate call be made upon the present registered proprietors to the extent of Co.'s Rs. 200 per share, and that the committee of management be directed to take all legal measures to enforce such call.

15. That a further call (in the nature of an application for a loan for which scrip shall be issued) be made upon all persons who are or were proprietors during the period when the subsisting liabilities were incurred, to the extent of Co.'s Rs. — from each, without reference to the amount of shares held by each, and that the committee be authorized to receive instalments in payment of such call, and that the dates of the several payments be registered, and that the amount of the same respectively, with interest at six per cent., be declared to constitute a primary lien, in the order of their date, upon the bank's property and the proceeds thereof after the discharge of all liabilities.

16. That the creditors of the bank be requested to appoint a committee, to whom the said trustees and inspectors may refer upon matters connected with the liquidation of the affairs of the bank, and that the said creditors' committee be requested to act in conjunction with the said trustees and inspectors in enforcing contributions from shareholders declining to contribute.

17. That all possible means be adopted for the purpose of securing from molestation such of the shareholders as shall respond to the said call, and that application be made to the creditors to enforce their judgments in preference against such shareholders as shall be pointed out by the committee to refuse or neglect to contribute; and that with this view a register be made out and kept by the committee of management, distinguishing those who contribute or express their readiness to do so, and those who decline.

18. That the surplus funds or property which shall remain after payment of all the debts and liabilities of the bank shall be ratably divided, in the first place among such of the proprietors as shall respond to the loan call, in proportion to the sums advanced by them, and in the order of date of such payment, and in the next place to the pro rata contributions, and if any surplus after repaying the whole of such contribution shall remain, the same shall be divided amongst the general shareholders.

19. That a proposition be made to creditors to receive payment of their claims against the bank by monthly instalments, commencing on the 1st of March next, the whole to be payable within a year, and that they be requested not to put their claims in suit, except in cases where it may be necessary to raise a question of liability, and also except where it may be necessary to obtain judgments for the purpose of being used against recalcitrant shareholders.—Calcutta Star, Jan. 22.

A STATEMENT OF SOME FACTS EXPLANATORY OF MY COURSE OF SERVICE AS SECRETARY OF THE UNION BANK OF CALCUTTA.

BY JAMES CALDER STEWART.

To the Proprietors of the Union Bank of Calcutta.

Gentlemen,—The following statement was partly prepared before the meeting of this day. I believe that no one who was there present, doubts that I am now imperatively called upon to lay it before you. I have no wish to criminate any one,—I stand on my own defence. That which, for the present, I deem necessary for my defence, is here stated; and I withhold all that it is inexpedient or as yet unnecessary to publish. I am prepared, if need be, to enlarge on the subjects on which I have now touched. I kept silence after my resignation, fearing that a statement of my views of the bank's position would hasten the commercial crisis we are now witnessing. It was, however, by no ordinary exercise of forbearance that I allowed the numerous imputations affecting the bank's former management to appear in the public prints, without some reply in personal vindication. When these imputations became specific in their nature, I appealed to the directors for permission to justify my own course of conduct: that permission was not granted. I feel now that no permission is required. The insolvency of some of the leading firms connected with the bank, and the approaching dissolution of the bank itself, together with the reasonable expectation of those who have suffered by the depreciation of its shares, altogether alter the case. All reserve must now be at end; and you, gentlemen, are entitled to know the history of my conduct in the bank from my entrance to the day of my retirement. I have written without access to the bank's books, but with a confident assurance that the accuracy of my statements will bear the strictest investigation.

I beg you, gentlemen, to bear in mind what was the nature of my office. I was secretary—not manager. I was bound, under very heavy pecuniary responsibility, by the deed of co-partnership, to obey the directors "in all things." I might advise, I might remonstrate: I could not control. I had but one weapon in my hand—and that was the resignation of my office. When I did finally resign, I gave openly to the whole proprietary the most emphatic testimony I could bear against the system of management pursued by the bank. My position all along was arduous. I may now say, without reproach, that the bank was, when I joined it, to an enormous extent in the hands of a few houses, the members of which were not all largely interested in it as shareholders, although those firms themselves traded, and that extensively, on the bank's capital. The body of directors, instead of consisting of men who were, elected to protect their own interests as proprietors along with yours, consisted to a great extent of influential men, the exigency, of whose position otherwise required that they should obtain accommodation to as large an amount as possible. You, gentlemen, generally speaking, were content, year after year, that leading members of those houses should be elected to manage your affairs. I found this to be an evil of the greatest magnitude; and exerted myself to procure the services of other gentlemen occupying a more independent position, and having interests more closely identified with your own. I felt other evils, too, in the bank, and struggled against them. Considerable improvements were effected, but I was successfully opposed in the endeavour to effect others of still greater importance. I refer to the accompanying statement for a detail of some few of these attempts. Further evidence I have, and can produce. But in the statement now furnished there is enough, I believe, to vindicate my own character, and to show that it was not by following the policy I ever suggested or defended, that the bank has been ruined.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

Calcutta, Jan. 15, 1848.

J. C. STEWART.

STATEMENT, &c.

The system on which the bank conducted business previous to January, 1844 (when, properly speaking, my incumbency commenced), or rather the absence of all right system, the consequent depreciation of its credit, and its heavy losses, are sufficiently known to the public. The books of the bank were then in a most confused state, from multiplied divisions, and a complication of irregular records, so that some of the accounts were actually unintelligible, and all of them much in arrear. The general laxity with which its business was then conducted, may be instanced by the fact, that not many days after my appointment, two of the then directors (I am prepared to name them, if necessary) went personally to the cash department, and obtained without any difficulty, and without my knowledge, discount of a bill which had been previously declined by the directors of the day. A still more striking illustration of the general looseness of the system, is furnished in the almost incredible fact, that in the daily cash abstract of the treasurer's department, there was a heading of account called "Pass," permanently open for moneys paid away without due authority or directorial cognizance.

To reform this state of things both in principle and in practice, and bring confusion if possible into order, was the task assigned me; and I was expected (it would now appear) to do still more, and held to be responsible, in some measure at least, not only for the due discharge of my own special duties as the executive officer, but for the principles, the opinions, and the acts of the directorial body.

The broad distinction between these two functions and their respective responsibilities, I never, for my own part, have lost sight of for one moment. It was my clear duty at all times, and in every way, to aid the directors in forming correct opinions, and to urge their observance of a sound policy, but beyond this my power or my responsibility extended not. If I ever counselled the directors to measures inconsistent with the soundest policy, or if I ever abstained from remonstrance where such principles were departed from, I am justly open to severest censure. But, the case being quite the reverse, and I challenge disproof of my assertion, I protest utterly against being held responsible for the directors' opinions, words, or actions.

In October, 1844, the important question, whether the indigo factories of the bank should be carried on or not, came, (for the first time since my incumbency) to be discussed. My utmost efforts, privately and officially, to prevent those outlays, and to compel a sale of the properties even at a great present sacrifice, were exerted, but in vain. My last most earnest remonstrance was by a letter to Dwarkanath Tagore, to which his answer now before me is as follows:—

"Saturday, 12th October, 1844.

"My Dear Stewart,—No one is more anxious than myself to see the bank's accounts of the indigo blocks all closed, but it will not do to sacrifice the property that this may be effected, for in such case this would be an easy matter to settle. The mischief has been done, and we must just quietly get out of it with as little loss as possible: it must be effected soberly and advisedly, and not by stopping the advances as you suggested, to the injury of the concerns, for this would have made bad worse. The great misfortune of the indigo factories has been the fall in prices; had there been any decent price, the quantity made on account of the bank, would not only have repaid the last year's advance, but would have reduced a great part of the block account. And these low prices have also been the cause of purchasers not coming forward—there is no want of money, but who in the face of such prices will purchase a concern which will barely pay the interest on his money?"

At the board table on that occasion, I stated to the directors, that "I should wash my hands of this business before the next meeting of proprietors, if called on to explain; that I was not the secretary of an indigo agency, but the secretary of a bank." My own entire disapproval of the system of indigo-cultivation being conducted by the bank, though that system was upheld by the directors, and from time to time concurred in by the proprietors, has never ceased.

Though unsuccessful in this matter, I was more fortunate in another attempted reform. The vile system of interminable renewals of bills discounted was broken down; and it was strictly in reference to the change for the better thus far effected, for a time, that a sentence appeared in the director's report of January, 1845, which has of late been a good deal misunderstood and represented as conveying a false idea of the bank's affairs—perhaps from some obscurity in its structure:—"The great bulk of our capital employed in discounts and loans on security, has been turned round in these channels nearly three times within the half year, without suffering in their course the loss of a single rupee." The emphasis laid on the words printed in italics shows the intended limit of this remark. The ordinary discounts, and those on collateral security, here alluded to, amounted, as appears by the statement of account, to upwards of thirty-four lacs of rupees, the safe and rapid revolution of which, by an improvement effected in so short a time, was doubtless matter of just congratulation, and noticed accordingly.

The misfortune was, that the permanency of this or any other internal reform, depended entirely on the continued exercise and success of that same mere personal influence which first effected it, and there was no security provided for its continuance by any organic change wrought in the constitution of the bank. My endeavours to extend further reforms, and to confirm those few already introduced, continued for months; with what success will appear from the following document:—

Union Bank, Calcutta, May 29, 1845.

To the Finance Committee*.

Dear Sirs,—With reference to the statements to which I have called your attention, particularly on the 24th instant, connected with some parts of the bank's system—I now beg to acquaint you that it is my intention, unless you have reasons of objection which may outweigh my sense of personal duty in the matter, to submit the annexed resolution to the consideration of the Board at next weekly meeting.

I am your obedient servant,

(Signed)

J. C. STEWART, Sec.

"Proposed—

"That a special committee of a few directors be nominated to inquire into and report to the general body before June 30, regarding the bank's existing system of loans and discounts; and especially to consider the fixing of a maximum limit of accommodation to any one party under any circumstances, and the restricting of every accommodation in a certain proportion to the convertibility of all the securities lodged by the party."

To this letter and its appended resolution as proposed by me, the following notes were affixed by two directors, who were, I believe, the then president and vice-president of the bank:—

"I approve of the resolution being submitted to the consideration of the board at next weekly meeting.

"(Signed) "J. S." [J. STORM.]

"I think before anything of this sort is determined upon, we should meet and talk it over in the finance committee. I would suggest that one be called after the steamer has left.

"(Signed)

"A de H. L."

[A DE H. LARPENT.]

MINUTE, 29TH MAY.

"Mr. Larpent and the two other members of the sub-committee have called upon me, and urged that if my intended motion were laid before the General Board, it would get wind abroad, and be interpreted most injuriously to the credit of the bank, and promised that the Finance Committee would themselves take up the matter in earnest, and deal with it effectually. On this representation, I have felt it my duty to postpone my intention for the present, leaving the responsibility of consequences from this delay with the directors themselves. If the reforms I think so essentially necessary are not soon carried out, the days of connection with the bank are numbered, and this I have distinctly told the directors. The hushing-up system, by which they delude themselves and others with an appearance of prosperity, while an evil course of business (as I think it) is preying secretly on the bank's vitals, is my abhorrence, and if I cannot open their eyes to the dangers I foresee, I shall resign, be the consequences what they may. The public, who hold me responsible for so much, have left me no other power of acquitting that responsibility to them or to myself than this one act, resignation.

"(Signed) J. C. S." [J. C. STEWART.]

Such, then, were my sentiments as to the general position of the bank's affairs, and the proper course of its management, so far back as May, 1845. My sentiments have remained unchanged to this day. The only point to which I am desirous to call particular attention now in connection with the above document is, that the monster grievance which I combatted three years ago, viz., the unlimited extent to which any one house might obtain accommodation, appears to be that which has at this moment overwhelmed the bank more than any other:—the two houses of Cockerell and Co. and Colville, Gilmore and Co. are stated to be indebted to the institution upwards of sixty-two lacs of rupees, whereas when I left the bank, thinking their joint amount of debt to it even then intolerable, that amount could not I think have much exceeded two or three and twenty lacs. In the one year then since my retirement, these two accounts alone seem to have been increased by some forty lacs! The system was radically bad long before, but it was then in the blossom only, or the bud;—now it is—i. e. during the year 1847—that it has borne its full fruit of bitterness, being utterly unrestrained in its growth.

If it be necessary, I can produce abundant further evidence of my own desire to limit the amount of accommodation to parties, and of the opposition to this and other proposed reforms which I recommended.

Whether the expressions of "satisfaction" with which the directors met the proprietary from half-year to half-year at this time were genuine or not, it was not for me to question, nor do I question them now. All I insist upon is, that these avowed sentiments were theirs, not mine. My presumption would have been glaring—ridiculous—had I sought to interpolate in their report any expression of my own individual opinions, whether conflicting or concurring with theirs. I repeat it impressively, I have never committed myself to the utterance of one single opinion of my own as such, in any report bearing my signature "by order of the directors," neither have I committed myself personally by ever attaching my official signature to any statement as of fact, which I conceived to be inconsistent with strictest truth.

The directors upheld and acted on the principle that every account in the bank was good for its full amount, and every debtor solvent until failure; and that then, and no sooner, did losses become properly ascertainable, and the collateral securities, indigo factories, &c., come into primary view and estimate. Indeed, the indigo cultivation policy may be said to have rendered this the only practicable manner of keeping such accounts at all; the fault was not in the book-keeping department of the bank, but in the evil policy of the bank parlour, by which the ascertainment of current profits or losses was ordered for postponement until the day when properties were finally disposed of.

* The finance committee of the bank always consisted of the president and the vice-president ex officio, and two other directors besides.

To a certain extent I am quite willing to allow that I did for a time, and in some measure, partake of the feeling of satisfaction expressed by the directors; for Indigo concerns were being gradually disposed of, the outlays on others were considerably reduced, and their management economized. The exchange account of the bank was working safely and profitably; and with returning public confidence, the amount of deposits increased. These sources of partial satisfaction did not prove lasting, however.

I must here take occasion to observe, with reference to the accounts of the bank generally, that it is altogether a mistake to suppose that in merely bringing these into some decent order, I was set to introduce a new system of bank books. I never dreamt of such an attempt, nor was asked to undertake it. I was not a professional book-keeper, though competent I presume to superintend any office accounts properly kept. Those of the bank had not been properly kept, and it was simply to make the existing system of the bank's books work well, and not to set that system aside and introduce a new one, that I had to apply myself. If the existing system of the bank's books be radically bad, it was so from the very commencement of the institution,—it was none of my creating,—I had only to make the most of it as I found it.

My desire to vary the bank's business, and give the management better claims on public confidence, was evinced, in 1845, by my private endeavours to induce such men as Mr. C. B. Skinner and Mr. R. Smith to stand for the direction. My wishes were unavailing.

In October, 1845, when matters had come to this length, and my resignation was at hand, I was urged privately by several directors to postpone it at least till after the January meeting. The then posture of the money market, and of the bank in relation to it, filled myself with more gloomy forebodings than my directors appeared to concur in: I did delay my resignation therefore, though with great reluctance; and in February, 1846, found the monetary tempest drawing on so darkly, that to resign then was impossible. The step, as I felt obliged to view it, would then have been as dishonourable as for a soldier to apply for leave of absence on the eve of battle. With a feeling of very deep anxiety, I told the directors who were most intimate with me on this occasion, that I entirely set aside my own wishes and feelings now in order to serve the interests of the bank, and would remain in office, if my failing health did not utterly give way, till the monetary storm blew over.

Before concluding this brief sketch by stating the circumstances attending my final retirement from the bank, I will advert to the one or two other isolated subjects, on which explanation from me appears at present called for.

1. Bills of Exchange on London.—The management of this business was in my own hands entirely, I may say, from January, 1844, till August, 1846; after which date I never purchased a bill for remittance home, on my own responsibility, but invariably took the director's instructions what bills to buy.

During the two years and-a-half in which this branch of the business was confided to my management, I remitted to Messrs. Glyn and Co. bills exceeding a million sterling in amount, and I never remitted them one bad penny. The bill-book of the bank will show; the bill-selling public of Calcutta may testify to the fact, that I always studied due variety as well as good quality in the paper which I remitted home, carefully avoiding any undue proportion of bills bought from any one house. The best testimony perhaps to my care in this business, is a letter which Messrs. Glyn and Co. themselves addressed to me as secretary, on the occasion of my retirement, and in which they expressed their entire satisfaction with the manner in which the bank's transactions with them had been conducted during my some three years' tenure of office. This letter must be in the bank now,—I have not a copy of it. The estimation in which (I may take leave to add) Messrs. Glyn and Co. held my personal management of the bill-business of the Union Bank had been expressed in a very unusual manner only a month or two before—in their unsolicited removal of limit (in particular cases) to the large credit of 20,000*l.* per mensem, which they already allowed. No banker could possibly receive a higher compliment from another than such a communication as this. Their estimate of the Union Bank's credit has changed since then.

2. Bank Post Bills.—The vast increase in the amount of these has taken place since I left the bank. During my time, I have confidence in asserting (though the books are not before me) that not one post bill was ever issued unless paid for in hard cash, or its cash payment duly provided for before the day of its maturity.

3. Discounts on Collateral Security.—The proprietors passed a resolution in July, 1843, authorising expressly, and as an exceptional thing, the outlay of twenty-five lacs per annum in indigo cultivation for the use of those firms who had hitherto depended for this aid on the bank, and who of course required time to make arrangements for funds from elsewhere in future. I had the greatest difficulty in persuading the directors that the spirit, if not the letter of this resolution, required a yearly reduction in this advance until it should cease to be called for altogether. In 1844, my first year of office, the full amount of twenty-five lacs was availed of; in 1846, my last, only fifteen lacs were advanced; and the directors approved a reduction to ten lacs on the advances for 1847.

In connection with this indigo-cultivating subject, one fact more deserves to be stated; it is one to which I attach the greatest importance, as affecting the estimate to be formed either of my own conduct or that of the directors in regard to such business generally; it is this:—That there was not one single indigo property mortgaged to the bank on the day I resigned, which had not been mortgaged to the bank before I entered it. Many such mortgages and their accounts were closed off during my incumbency, but not one was added. [The mere substitution of a first for a second mortgage in the case of the Big Union, I do not consider any exception to this statement. The circumstances of that case were altogether peculiar, and the event I believe has fully justified the course adopted in regard to it.]

In the month of April, 1846, a leading director of the bank attempted to obtain temporary possession of certain Government paper belonging to the bank, for some private purpose of his own, using his influence for this end with the native officer in whose charge the paper was, without my knowledge. Detecting the act, I informed the individual that but for my approaching resignation, I should feel it my duty to expose him. It is indispensably necessary, in my own defence, that I should distinctly state this incident, since the real cause of my resignation, viz., my entire dissatisfaction with a ruinous and incurable general system of business, upheld by directors possessed of no adequate capital of their own, and trading on that of the bank, has often been misrepresented as originating suddenly and solely "in a private squabble" with the then President of the bank. I stated no such reason in my letter of resignation. That other and later circumstance, indeed, compelled me to come to a more immediate decision than otherwise might have been made; but it was at very most the mere occasion, not the cause, of my resignation, and I uniformly stated so to all who conferred with me on the subject.

I were indeed little worthy of trust as a guardian of large public interests, or of respect in private life as the protector of a dependant family, if any petty personal quarrel, anything less than an imperative call of duty, could have induced me to desert a post which was honourable and profitable in proportion as it was responsible and arduous. What motives had I not to remain in it, if possible! Putting out of view the immediate loss of a large income, my voluntary resignation, as implying a tacit reproach on the directorial system of management, was certain to make me unpopular with that body; as tending to depreciate the market value of shares it could not but displease proprietors; it would give an easy occasion in various quarters for indulgence of whatever hostile feeling my impartial discharge of such an office for so long a time might have naturally made me obnoxious to; and whatever misrepresentations my conduct or character might now be exposed to, explanation in self-defence was impossible as long as the seal of official confidence was held on my lips. And all these obstacles to my resigning had to be overcome, not in order to improve my private fortunes, but by a positive sacrifice of them, rather than make shipwreck of a good conscience, or be held publicly responsible for measures which I altogether disapproved of, and had resisted in my official place as long as I could, but in vain. I repeat, that in resigning the secretaryship of the Union Bank, I voluntarily sacrificed my private pecuniary interest, from a sense of public duty; and I am unrepented to this day, save by the confirmed esteem of my personal friends, and the testimony of an approving conscience.

N.B.—I think it right to intimate that no comments on the above statements can be noticed by me, unless put forward in writing, and with their author's name.—Hurkaru, Jan. 18.

MR. STEWART'S EXPLANATION.

We give in another column the letter of Mr. J. C. Stewart in explanation of his conduct as secretary of the Union Bank, which may be said to heap shame on shame on the heads of the directors, horror on horror on the public. Mr. Stewart became secretary of the bank in the end of 1843, and retired in the end of 1846. He found the bank books in a state of inextricable confusion, and without introducing a new system of book-keeping from the foundation, Mr. Stewart laboured incessantly to make the records in existence faithful and intelligible exponents of the state of the co-partners' affairs. Up to Jan. 1844, when his proper jurisdiction commenced, many of the accounts and records were unintelligible: losses were forbidden to be brought to balance till the final disposal of the properties on which they occurred, but they were kept out of sight indefinitely, and the laxity of system was such that a few days after his appointment two of the directors went personally to the cash department, without the knowledge of the secretary, and obtained the discount of a bill which had just before been refused by the directors of the day. The principal portion of the losses of the bank, and the source of the discredit into which it had fallen, arose from its enormous advances on indigo-factories. In Oct. 1844, when the question came on for discussion, Mr. Stewart used his utmost efforts to have it brought to an end, and to compel the sale of properties, and the winding up of this division of the concern, at whatever sacrifice. At the board he stated to the directors that he would, were the present system persisted in, wash his hands of the business altogether. His entire disapproval of the system of indigo-cultivation through the bank agency, supported as it was by the directors, and countenanced by a portion of the proprietary, was unceasing. In May, 1845, he proposed that a committee should be appointed to inquire into and report upon the bank's system of loans and dividends, and especially to consider the fixing of a maximum limit of accommodation to any party, under any circumstances. In this very reasonable and moderate proposition, Mr. Storm concurred. Mr. Larpent, of Cockerell and Co., proposed that they should meet and talk over the matter. It was resolved to keep it as quiet as possible, and on no account to lay it before the general board of directors, in case it should get wind and be most injurious to the credit of the bank. The finance committee promised that they themselves would take it up; this they never did. On this Mr. Stewart told them that the hushing-up system was a delusion, and that they were making it be believed that they were prospering while a ruinous system of doing business was destroying them. The monster grievance that he constantly and unceasingly contended with, is that which has at length destroyed the bank; the houses of Cockerell and Co., and Colvill, Gilmour, and Co., which had in the beginning of 1847 been due to the bank the enormous sum of twenty-three lacs, were before the end of the year its debtors to the extent of upwards of sixty lacs. Well might Mr. Larpent object to the abolition of a system whose maintenance was so important to his house! But this, though questionable enough, was far from the most questionable transaction on the part of the directors. In April, 1846, a leading director attempted to gain possession of a government paper belonging to the bank, for some private purpose of his own, and was only prevented from perpetrating what the Englishman justly terms a theft, by being caught in the act! In October, 1845, Mr. Stewart was about to have retired, when the monetary crisis then drawing on would have caused the abandonment of his post to have been misunderstood, and he remained for another year. Such is an outline of Mr. Stewart's letter, and the amount and complexity of villany it discloses is fearful. So valuable were his services to the bank believed to be, that only this time last year the Friend of India, in noticing the annual meeting, gave the following account of its retiring secretary and its concerns: how fearfully the anticipations formed of its returning prosperity have been disappointed, recent proceedings have shewn:—

"With the present report, the connection of Mr. Stewart (the secretary) with the Bank ceases, after a service of a little more than three years. The public owes him a large debt of gratitude for the services which he has rendered to the Bank. When he took charge of the office from which he is about to retire, its shares were offered at a discount, and public confidence was nearly extinct. The first report of its condition and prospects drawn up by him gave a new spring of hope to the disconsolate proprietors, by the open, straightforward, and fearless exposition which it made of the real state of affairs, and by the determination which was exhibited to steer a new and a safer course. No small share of the present mistrust arises from his approaching retirement, and the apprehension lest a more hazardous course should now be pursued. All credit is due to the directors for having so steadily supported the cause of reform, but the public will not forget that it was during Mr. Stewart's incumbency, and mainly through his persevering efforts, that the losses of the Bank were reduced, in the short space of three years, by a gradual reservation of dividends, from twelve lakhs of rupees to two lakhs and a half, and that the Bank has been rescued from the verge of insolvency, and placed upon a more solid and secure basis."

The picture he gives of the misdeeds of the directors during his incumbency is nothing to that they give of their proceedings since.

The editor of the Englishman mentions, that the cheques for the Commercial Bank bills were payable to Mr. Abbott, and that they were indorsed by him; and it is therefore inconceivable that he should have been guiltless of the misappropriation of their proceeds. On no hypothesis of laxity of management, however stupendous, can we imagine three lakhs of rupees to make their appearance when least looked for and most required, and then to be paid away again, without all the most important functionaries of the Bank being cognizant of the fact, and conscious, at the same time, that, wherever the money came from, it was none of theirs. A circumstance so surprising must have provoked inquiry; or if inquiry was avoided, it must have been on the principle that makes a man turn his back on the criminal when crime is being committed—that he may not be a witness. Mr. Stewart is severely taken to task by our Calcutta contemporaries for remaining in any way associated with such a set of scoundrels after he became aware of their character, or for suffering the proprietors to remain in darkness when a hint from him would have compelled inquiry, which would have produced enlightenment; and at first sight the censure seems deserved. It is, however, by no means certain that any disclosure the secretary could have made, consistently with his obligation to secrecy, would have awakened the shareholders from their apathy, or frightened the directors from their purposes. He might have retired earlier, but it is far from apparent that this would have been advantageous to any one. Under him the bank was recovering confidence and regaining its position; while he was connected with it, something was being done to protect the shareholders against the frauds that had been so long systematically practised against them, and to prevent the directors from persisting in wrong-doing. The hold their own evil practices gave him over them was a no unimportant means of keeping them in order. On one point we think the secretary erred—in not terrifying the finance committee into his measures by the threat of bringing them before the general board. We think also, with the Englishman, that he set not enough store on his position—that he was the fellow-servant rather than the servant of the directors, and that it was his duty to have laboured along with or against rather than under them; and instead of resigning because his wishes were not attended to, to have insisted on his views being carried out at the risk of dismissal. His separation from the Bank by this means would have produced the very disclosures he was desirous of obtaining: the directors must have given a reason they must have trembled to think of, or retained his services and obeyed his wishes. The Friend of India, we have no doubt, expresses the opinion generally held a year since, when he states that Mr. Stewart had rescued the bank from the verge of bankruptcy and placed it in such a position that the public had no further cause for alarm, excepting on the score that the good measures he had begun might not be persisted in; and at an earlier period a sincere and determined man, armed so strong in his own integrity as to find it difficult to believe in the want of it in others, would have no difficulty in satisfying himself that for his hands were reserved the salvation of the concern—that the vessel had grazed but was not so deeply immersed as to be beyond the reach of good seamanship—that her leaky sides might yet be stanchd, her spars refitted, her crew changed by degrees, and she again enabled to proceed on her voyage.—Bombay Times.

MISCELLANEOUS. LOCAL.

THE GOVERNMENT OFFICES.—Owing to the suspension of the Register of the Bengal Secretariat from office, on suspicion of his being connected with certain malversations which have recently transpired, the heads of other departments of Government have, we hear, called for all bills for contingent charges, passed during the last two years, for examination.—Hindu Intelligence, Jan. 10.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—We learn that Charles Huffnagle, Esq., of the firm of Smith, Huffnagle, and Co., has been appointed consul in Calcutta, and for all adjacent ports, for the United States. This is not the first appointment made, but we have never yet seen the American flag flying on shore, as it undoubtedly ought to have done, and we hope will, after the appearance of the Government's recognition of the appointment in the Gazette.—Calcutta Star, Jan. 11.

ARRIVAL OF LORD DALHOUSIE.—At about half an hour after noon yesterday, the appointed signal of three guns from the fort announced that the Moozuffer, with Lord Dalhousie on board, was passing Kedgerree. Again, soon after four o'clock, a second signal of three guns reported her passing Moyapore, and warned all whom duty or curiosity led to witness the landing of the new Governor-General to be on the look-out. It was, not, however, till about ten minutes past six that his lordship landed at Chandpaul Ghaut from the steam-frigate, which had come to anchor opposite. He was met on board the steamer by several officers, military and civil, deputed for that purpose, and received at the ghaut by a dense crowd of people of all ranks and classes. Salutes were fired as he passed the Fort and as he entered Government House. The Countess Dalhousie did not accompany his lordship on his landing, but we understand she came on shore shortly after him.—Hurkaru, Jan. 13.

GREAT NORTH OF INDIA RAILROAD.—Our readers will, no doubt, have observed an advertisement in our columns calling upon the shareholders of the Great North of India Railway Company, which has been dissolved, to send to the agents, Messrs. Watson, Borrodaile, & Co., for the amount payable to them as their share of the residue of the deposits made. The sum paid as a deposit on each share was two shillings, and that returned is one and nine pence. Now, this is what we call an honest and business-like proceeding. Why, we should like to know, is not the same course adopted with regard to the Northern and Eastern Railway? We presume that the fund collected was not all disbursed for the grand dinner the directors generously gave us out of our own money at the Town Hall; and in any case we might expect at least a statement of the account, even if the balance were nil, or if it constituted a few thousand rupees standing at our credit on the books of some insolvent concern. With such a statement before us we should at any rate know how the money had been disposed of. As it is, the shareholders, or the depositors rather, are not even honoured with any communication as to the abandonment of an undertaking which was announced with such a grand flourish of trumpets. To the shareholders individually the sums paid as deposits may be of no great consequence, but the receivers of their money, who must have collected in all some Rs. 20,000, are bound in common honesty and common decency, we think, to publish an account of the expenditure. There is a lax morality in these matters in this same city of palaces, which has gained for it a name anything but enviable.—Ibid., Jan. 14.

MR. SMOULT.—Mr. W. H. Smoult was yesterday re-admitted an attorney of the Supreme Court. Mr. Smoult is well known as one of the oldest legal practitioners in Calcutta, and has in his day held every, or almost every, office in the Court.—Englishman, Jan. 15.

DEPARTURE OF LORD HARDINGE.—Lord Hardinge embarked this morning, according to the announcement made in our paper of yesterday. Before the hour appointed, H. M. 18th foot, about 600 strong, was drawn up in front of Government House; and the road to the ghat was lined with the men of the 16th grenadiers and the 35th native infantry, two of the finest corps in the service; together with a numerous body of the Calcutta militia and police. At half-past eight a large party of gentlemen sat down to the breakfast table with Lord Hardinge, and at nine o'clock precisely his lordship left Government House on foot, supported by Sir Lawrence Peel and Sir Herbert Maddock, and accompanied by a numerous cortège of citizens. On arriving at the ghat, his lordship warmly shook hands with the officers of Government, and as he stepped into the boat, was greeted with hearty cheers from the assembled throng, while the guns of a light field battery of the Bengal Artillery, stationed near, pealed a parting salute. The cheers were repeated by various ships in the stream, and did not cease till his lordship was fairly on his way down the river to the spot where the Moorzuffer is lying.—Ibid., Jan. 18.

HONOURS TO THE EX-GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—On the arrival of the Moorzuffer, steam-frigate, opposite "Budge Budge," a salute of nineteen guns was fired from the ramparts of Fort Gloster, by the enterprising directors of the cotton mills in honour of Lord Hardinge. A similar mark of respect having last week been paid to Lord Dalhousie on his passage up the river; the schooner Falcon lying off the mills was tastefully dressed out with colours, as were also several smaller boats belonging to the establishment; the trees to the north of the mills presented a really imposing appearance, being covered with flags. The whole population of the Gloster estate crowded the banks of the river near the battery, and the guns were fired in first-rate time. Lord Hardinge will meet with many demonstrations of public respect and regard during his passage home, but probably with no private expression of respect more spirited or better arranged than that of the fort Gloster cotton mills Company. The Lord William Bentinck steamer had been despatched by the marine authorities to Fort Gloster early in the morning, to take back the staff officers, &c., who accompanied the late Governor-General so far on his voyage. The whole scene at Gloster during the time that the Moorzuffer stopped to discharge this part of her illustrious freight was extremely exciting, the cheering of 1200 Bengalee workmen turned out from the mills, adding not a little to the general tomasha.—Ibid., Jan. 19.

CARR, TAGORE, AND CO.—The papers announce that Major Henderson's term of partnership in the firm of Carr, Tagore, and Co. having expired, and Baboo Debendernath and Green-dernath Tagore being desirous of retiring from commercial business, the accounts of that firm have been closed to the 31st of December last, to which date the two Baboos will collect all debts and discharge all liabilities. Thus, the family of Dwarkanath Tagore, has at length ceased to have any interest in the firm which he established.—Friend of India, Jan. 20.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—At the last meeting of the members of the Medical Retiring Fund, it was declared that eleven annuities had been taken this year, which will create eleven vacancies. The fund has suffered a loss of only £100 by the failure of its London agents, Messrs. Cockerell and Co.—Ibid.

RECEIVER-GENERALSHIP.—The office of Receiver of the Supreme Court, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. O'Dowda, has been conferred on Mr. Macpherson, lately appointed official assignee to the Insolvent Court in Mr. O'Dowda's place.—Hurkaru, Jan. 12.

RESIGNATION OF MR. BLACQUIERE.—Mr. W. C. Blacquiere who has for the period of fifty-four years acted as chief interpreter of the Supreme Court, has been compelled from infirmity and failing health to vacate the appointment. Mr. W. D. S. Smith is appointed chief interpreter in room of Mr. Blacquiere, and Mr. Aviet succeeds Mr. Smith.—Ibid.

SUPERINTENDENT AND REMEMBRANCER OF LEGAL AFFAIRS.—Mr. W. H. Elliott, joint magistrate and deputy collector of Chumprun, is to succeed Mr. E. A. Samuells as superintendent and remembrancer of legal affairs.—Englishman.

VISITORS TO THE MUSEUM OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the annual meeting of the Asiatic Society, held on Wednesday, the 12th instant, it was announced that 16,000 persons had visited the museum during the past year.—Ibid.

THE SANS-SOUCI THEATRE.—The papers notice the second performance of the Junior Civil Servants at the Sans-Souci Theatre, on Thursday night, the 13th. The pieces played were the comedy of "Ways and Means, or a Trip to Dover," and the farce of "Amateurs and Actors." In consequence of a party at Government House, the audience was not a large one, but the performance is favourably mentioned.—Ibid.

THE CALCUTTA FREE SCHOOL.—The annual meeting of the supporters of the Calcutta Free School was held on the 14th inst., when the report of the late examination was read. The result is described as extremely gratifying to those interested in the success of the institution. Mr. John Gray, of the Hurkaru Press, received the thanks of the governors for the presentation of a silver medal to the best general proficient.—Ibid.

LEVEE.—The Governor-General's levee yesterday was very numerous attended; the judges and other dignitaries in their robes, and civil and military officers in full dress. The presentations were made in the usual manner, and the ceremony was over by a quarter to five.—Ibid., Jan. 22.

AGRA.—The Bank.—We have been favoured with another letter regarding the alleged fact that a bill of the Agra bank for 5,000*l.*, had been refused discount by the Bank of England. A letter to this effect was sent out by Messrs. Cockerell, Larpent, and Co., and we have now the pleasure of publishing an ample and most satisfactory explanation of this transaction, in a letter from Mr. Hampton, dated London, the 17th of November. He states that he called on that firm and offered to discount the bill of 5000*l.*, which they declined; and that he subsequently went to the Bank of England, and found that the head of the discount office had no knowledge of any resolution of the bank directors to refuse to discount bills drawn by Indian banks on their own agents in London.—Friend of India, Jan. 20.

DELHI.—Death of the Rev H. A. Loveday.—It is with deep and sincere regret we have to announce the death, from disease of the liver, at this station, on Sunday morning last, of the Rev. Henry Augustus Loveday, an assistant chaplain on the Bengal establishment, and son of the late Lieutenant General Loveday, of the Bengal army. He was interred on the afternoon of Monday, in the church-yard, as a mark of especial respect on the part of the ecclesiastical and local authorities, as also in compliance with his own wishes previously expressed. His remains were borne from his late residence to the grave, a distance of more than a mile and a half, at their particular desire, by the warrant and non-commissioned officers of the magazine and of the Native Infantry corps at this place, and followed by a large assemblage of the civil and military officers of the station, and of the residents of Delhi. Colonel Skinner, the founder of the church, and Mr. William Fraser, of the civil service, are the only other persons interred in the church-yard. The Rev.

J. B. d'Aguilar came from Meerut to officiate on the occasion. — Gazette, Jan. 12.

Dum Dum. — Theatrical. — The Dum Dum amateurs performed the Bohemians; or, the Rogues of Paris, and the funce of Hunting a Turtle, on Monday night, the 10th. — Hurkara, Jan. 21.

HYDRABAD. — New Resident. — Colonel Low, who was formerly resident at Lucknow, is to succeed General Fraser as resident at Hyderabad. — Englishman.

JUNABULPOOR, Jan. 8. — Civil Engineering. — Mr. Edwards, civil engineer, passed through this yesterday, en route, to Allahabad, having come overland via Bombay. He is, he states, going to commence on a line from Allahabad to Cawnpore immediately, and declares that if funds are forthcoming a train will be running within two years between the two places. He visited the School of Industry, and was surprised at the manner in which such beautiful carpets and tents were turned out with such "vile" tools. — Delhi Gazette, Jan. 15.

— Military Inspection. — Brigadier Wallace is here on his tour of inspection, and reviews the six companies of the regiment stationed here next week. — Ibid.

MEERUT. — Ball. — The ball given by Colonel Farrington and the officers of the artillery, on the night of the 31st ultimo, was very numerously attended. The new year was seen happily in, and sincerely do we hope that it will be fraught with fewer disasters than the old one.

The Weather. — The weather for some days past has been unusually cold; but we fear very little ice has been yet collected. — Mafussilia, Jan. 4.

MORADABAD. — The Church. — The honourable the Lieutenant-Governor laid the foundation-stone of the Moradabad church, on the 1st of January, and has, we see by an announcement elsewhere, contributed the very liberal sum of Rs. 500 towards the funds for its erection. The Church is to be called St. Paul's. — Delhi Gazette, Jan. 8.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

ADVANCEMENT ON GOODS.

Fort William, Financial Department, Jan. 10, 1846. — Notification. — Notice is hereby given, that in addition to the sums advertised on the 12th March, 1847, as to be provided in India for the service of the home treasury during the course of the official years 1846-47 and 1847-48 in full, so far as was then known, of the requirements of the home treasury up to the 30th April, 1848, a still further sum of 600,000*l.* will be raised in India by bills on the hypothecation of goods for the service of the East-India Company.

Advances of cash will accordingly be made for this purpose by the Governments of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and the rate of exchange at which bills are to be drawn will be 1*l.* 10*d.* per Company's rupee until further notice.

In modification of the advertisement of the 23rd August, 1844, the advances on goods will be to the extent of 3.5ths only instead of 3-4ths of their value; but in all other respects the existing terms and conditions of the advances to be made by the respective governments will remain in force, and be the same as published in the Calcutta Gazette under date the 1st April, 1842.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Dec. 18, 1847. — At a General Court Martial assembled at Saugor, on Tuesday, the 23rd day of November, 1847, Lieut. Edward Forbes, of the 9th N.I., was tried on the following charge: —

For having, at Nagode, on the 5th September, 1847, been drunk, when on duty as regimental officer of the day.

Finding. — Guilty of the charge preferred against him.

Sentence. — To be dismissed the service.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Dec. 15, 1847.

Recommendation. — The Court most respectfully beg to recommend the prisoner to the merciful consideration of his Excellency the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief, in consequence of his having long suffered from illness, caused by exposure in a tent at an inclement season of the year, and also from the circumstance of his having been guilty of no act of violence or unseemly conduct, and from several other extenuating circumstances which appear in the proceedings of this Court.

Remarks by the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief. — Under the circumstances of the case, and in compliance with the recommendation of the Court, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to remit the sentence; Lieut. Forbes is to be released from arrest, and will return to his duty.

EXCHANGE for the mail has ruled at 1s. 10 1/2 d. to 1s. 10 3/4 d., for first class document bills six months' sight, monthly at the latter rate—uncovered six months' sight bills of a high character have been sold at 1s. 11 1/4 d.

FREIGHTS.

Freights have still further improved, consequent on the large shipments of rice in progress. To London we quote 6l. 15s. to 7l.; Liverpool 6l. to 6l. 6s. for saltpetre and sugar.

MARKETS.

There have been few changes in markets during the past week. Business has been quiet, pending the arrival of the express by the mail of Dec. 7, now over due.

The effect of the Government reduction of the Export Warehouse Exchange has been little felt out of the bounds of the indigo market, where it has contributed to maintain the better feeling noticed in our last. Otherwise, exports have been but slightly affected, the large margin required, and the facility with which document bills are disposed of, rendering any resort to Government aid at present unnecessary. In the general produce market, with the exception perhaps of rice, there has been less business in progress, and the advancing rates of tonnage tend to limit transactions in the heavy staples. Sugar has sold only to a moderate extent. New silk begins to arrive in small quantities, and there appears more disposition to buy. Corals are still neglected, though offered at lower rates. Saltpetre shows a slackening of demand for England from the dearness of freights. Rice moves briskly. In other staples no change of importance has occurred.

The money market shows no change of moment—at the half-yearly meeting of proprietors of the Union Bank held on the 15th instant, it was resolved to close the bank, preparatory to winding up the concern. Another meeting is to be held to-day. The shipments of rupees on government account to England as yet amount to fifty lacs, and it is said that a similar quantity will shortly follow. Government securities are freely offered at the depreciated values quoted in our last, viz.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

THEATRICALS.—The amateur performers of H. M. 94th regiment played "positively for the last time," on Wednesday evening; but there was a subscription night on Thursday, at which all Madras was present, excepting those who consider even private theatricals objectionable. The pieces chosen for the evening's amusement, were, "Charles the 12th," and "Ambition."—Athenaeum, Jan. 15.

SHIPPING.—The Duke of Portland, Captain Cubie, expected to sail this day, for London, will take home thirty-seven invalids of the Queen's and Company's services. Also six insane patients; the latter will be provided with all necessary comforts, and good accommodation, by Government. The James Hall is expected to sail in a day or two, with Company's stores, to the Malabar Coast. She will also take to Cannanore some of the ladies and children of H.M. 94th regiment, not included in the list proceeding by the Lovjee Family. The latter vessel is expected to sail about the 21st instant.—Ibid., Jan. 18.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The head quarters of H. M.'s 94th regiment, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Brown, embarked on board the ship Lojsee Family, early on Thursday morning. We see by yesterday's U. S. Gazette that the 25th Foot will unquestionably march from Cannanore to this place—and that 150 camels and other carriage for the accommodation of that regiment had been despatched from Mysore. We take it for granted, that Government must have some strong reasons for marching troops across the peninsula when they might be conveyed so much more safely, cheaply, and expeditiously by sea; but what these reasons are, we can get nobody to explain.—Ibid., Jan. 22.

CIVIL FUND.—The following gentlemen were elected trustees for the affairs of the civil fund for the year 1848, at a general meeting, held Jan. 13:—Messrs. A. F. Bruce, Walter Elliot, A. J. Cherry, T. B. Roupell, and T. H. Davidson. The chief secretary and the accountant-general are trustees ex officio, and Sir H. C. Montgomery, bart., and Mr. T. Fyrcok, are provisional trustees.

MOFUSSIL.

ANCON.—The Weather.—For the last six weeks the weather has been really delightful; the mornings are absolutely luxurious, and there is a bracing sharpness in the atmosphere, which at times, approaches to a chill, and which reminds us, of "home, sweet home." An invigorating breeze fans us through the day, and counteracts the effects of the sun; which occasionally endeavours to come it rather strong, as if he feared his influence was not sufficiently felt and acknowledged.

—The Crops.—The crops have all been got in, and as may be supposed, are most plentiful,—grain is cheap, and the market moderate in every department. The general health of the Cantonment cannot be better,—is short, as an Emerald has it, a man could not get sick if he were to try.—Athenaeum, Jan. 20.

OOTACAMUND, Jan. 12.—The Weather.—Since my last communication nothing of consequence has occurred here. The weather has been milder, and rather more settled. We have had some frosty looking mornings, and dry sunny days, promising fine weather. About new moon on the 6th, it became over cast, dull, and hazy; and we then had a slight fall of rain; since that day, however, the weather has been delightfully cool and pleasant, and after 4 p. m. the sojourners here sail out, and enjoy the charming air and pure breezes of the hills.

— Gaieties.—Already have several little parties been out, and numerous pic-nics, and other out-door excursions are talked of, amongst the residents. Robertson, Scotland's favourite historian, says that society must be considerably advanced in refinement before it acquires a taste for balls, routes, and similar amusements: judging by this criterion, the community here must be far advanced in this respect. About the end of November, I sent you an account of an entertainment, which was given by the spirited bachelors residing amongst us—and lately "The Bonnie Masons" invited the whole of the élites on the Hills to a splendid ball and supper. Again, on the 6th instant, 'The Twelfth Night,' the gallant unmarried did the thing most nobly, by giving at the club a splendid ball and supper. The entertainment went off remarkably well, and was allowed by all present (and the assemblage was very numerous) not to be a whit behind the two previous parties, indeed, some said, it was really the best of the three.

— Public Market.—The erection of a suitable building for the public weekly market, to be held at this place, has of late been frequently mentioned, and notwithstanding the recent very unfavourable weather for such a purpose; it is creditable to the builder, Mr. Hopley, to say, that it is going on more rapidly than could be expected under such circumstances—and it is to be hoped that in a few months more, the building will be completed.

— Arrivals.—Colonel Conyngham, of the Bombay army, and Capt. Templer, N. V. B.

— Departures.—Col. Strahan, quartermaster-general of the army, and family; T. Pycroft, Esq., C. S., and family; Messrs. Roe and Wilkins, Esquires, of the Madras bar; and E. B. Thomas, C. S.—Athenæum, Jan. 20.

6. Captains commanding will be entitled to horse allowance for two horses—subalterns and assistant surgeons, permanently posted, for one each—to be drawn only when actually present with the battery.

7. The Commander-in-Chief, in communication with the Commissary-general, will make such arrangements for supplying the batteries with horses as he may find most advisable—and his Excellency will also issue the necessary orders for the disposal of the bullocks of the two karkhanas to be reduced.

8. The selection of eligible men for employment as drivers will be made under the Commander-in-Chief's orders from the karkhanas or otherwise—and all men of the karkhanas, who may remain in excess of the reduced establishment, will either be retained as supernumeraries or discharged as his Excellency may find expedient.

9. The formation of the batteries is to have effect from such date as may be fixed by the Commander-in-Chief, who will also issue such further orders as may be required.

COURTS MARTIAL.

Fort St. George, Jan. 14, 1848.—With reference to, and in continuation of G.O.G. No. 42, of 1846, the Most Noble the Governor in Council is pleased to cancel the rule* which declares officers officiating as judge advocates at general or other courts-martial entitled to full batta during the actual sitting of such Courts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOCAL.

BALL ON BOARD THE STEAMER "POTTINGER."—The ball we noticed in our last took place on board the P. and O. Co.'s steamer Pottinger on the evening of Thursday. The party was very numerous, consisting of all the élite of the society of Bombay. The magnificent vessel was beautifully fitted up and decorated for the occasion, her ample decks and splendid saloon furnishing accommodation for such festivals not to be surpassed by anything afloat. At nine o'clock the party began to arrive. The arrival of the Honourable the Governor and staff at Mazagon was made known by the firing of a rocket and blue lights. On his arrival alongside, blue lights were simultaneously exhibited at the extremities of each yard-arm, at the bowsprit, and on the spanker-boom: the Pottinger looked like a fairy ship surrounded by the most dazzling of haloes. Dancing was maintained to a late, or rather an early hour; the supper arrangements were excellent, and every one quitted the scene of festivity delighted with the results of the evening.—Times, Jan. 22.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. M'LENNAN.—Dr. John M'Lenan has just received from his friends and former patients a piece of plate worth 500l. and a purse of 1,000 guineas, in testimony of the estimation in which he is held by them.—Ibid. Jan. 26.

THE "SIE CHARLES FORBES."—We hear that the steamer Sir Charles Forbes is to leave this ten or twelve days hence for Judda, where she is to remain and ply to and from different ports.—Ibid. Jan. 29.

SECRETARY TO THE EDUCATION BOARD.—We are happy to observe that Assistant-surgeon H. J. Carter has been appointed to act as secretary to the Education Board during the absence of Dr. Stovell at the Cape, or until further notice. Dr. Carter has been six years in the service, and during this period has distinguished himself by his contributions to our periodicals on subjects of general as well as those on medical science.—Ibid. Feb. 1.

SUTTEE IN BOMBAY.—A man named Yesoo, of the Malee caste, originally from beyond the Ghats, died of fever on the 6th instant in Kasar-lane, near what is known as Koombharwada. His widow Buzace, who is about 32 years of age, accompanied the body to Sonapoor, with the intention of burning on the funeral pile of her deceased husband. This the police would not permit, and she accordingly returned to her home, still declaring her determination never to assume the rank and garb of a widow, but to persevere in her purpose of burning as a suttee. The next day, bearing in her hands the Pagota of her husband, and decked rather as a bride than as a widow, she set out in a kind of triumphal manner for Sasrud, near Poona, where her friends reside, avowedly with the intention of performing the rite of suttee as soon as circumstances should permit. The report of her determination to burn with the body of her deceased husband soon spread through the city, and excited much interest in the native community. Some few doubtless disapproved of her resolution, but by far the greater number, instead of viewing this as an uncalled-for and wicked attempt to destroy life, enthusiastically declared their admiration of her devotedness to her husband. When she passed through the streets she was followed by a great crowd of people, many of whom exclaimed, on beholding her, that she had fulfilled the chief end of woman's existence. The credulity of the people, as well as their love for the marvellous, was strikingly exhibited on the announcement by this woman of her determination to burn as a suttee. This at once transformed her, in the view of many, into a kind of super-human being. She is reported to have declared that she had already twice burned upon the funeral pile in previous births, and that she was firmly resolved to persevere in her determination to burn on this occasion, as she would then be liberated from corporal existence, and obtain final beatitude by absorption in the Deity. She is also believed to have wrought various miracles in the presence of the people, and it is said that when asked to explain the secret of her wonder-working power, she declared that her husband was once an incarnation of Siva, and she an incarnation of Parvuttee; that owing to some sin committed by them they had been born in the low condition which of late they had occupied; but that she yet retained a portion of her former merit, and, in consequence, was still able to work miracles. On this ground also she imparted her blessing to those who sought it. And, strange to say, these silly ravings of an ignorant woman were listened to by many with wonder and awe! Such is the power of superstition over an ignorant people. Notwithstanding all that has been done in the way of education and dissemination of Christian truth, we have little doubt but the horrid rite of suttee would still frequently be witnessed in Bombay, were it not for the presence of the English Government.—Dnyanodaya (native paper). We regret to observe it stated by a daily contemporary that the deluded creature performed the horrid rite of self-immolation at a village not far from Poona. Measures are being taken for bringing to justice those by whose instrumentality she was enabled to carry her determination into effect.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

AHMEDABAD.—New Judge.—The Gazette of Thursday week intimates the appointment of Mr. A. Spens to the judgeship of Ahmedabad, but permitting him to remain for the present at the presidency as acting military accountant under the accountant-general. The arrangement has been made matter of commentary by our respected contemporary the Telegraph and Courier, and subjected to animadversions it does not appear to deserve. The accountant-general, Mr. Webb, is at present absent on sick certificate at the Cape, and Mr. Blane, moved from the position Mr. Spens now occupies, holds the acting appointment.—Mr. Spens acting for Mr. Blane. Mr. Webb's return will, it is thought, take place considerably within the period of leave assigned to him. Mr. Spens, who has already been six months in office, appears to have been retained at the presidency to prevent the rapid succession of changes, so injurious to the interests of the service, in offices where familiarity with routine is indispensable. So far from the office being, as alleged by a correspondent of our contemporary, a sinecure, it is one of the most responsible in the service.—Times, Feb. 1.

BELGAUM, Jan. 22.—Military.—Colonel Reid, after reviewing all the troops here, proceeded last Saturday to Dharwar, accompanied by Captain Stock, assistant adjutant-general, to review the 17th regiment. The detachment of the 27th N.I. has not yet proceeded to Vingorlah. Forty camel-loads of military stores were dispatched from hence to Kolapore under a party of sepoy on the 19th, for the use of the troops at that station.

—Civil.—Mr. Anderson, the assistant political agent of the S. M. C., after an absence on duty of nearly twenty months in the Jaggeerdars' territories and at other districts, returned a short time back to Belgaum, and on the 20th again proceeded to Bombay, on leave on private affairs. By last accounts received here, Mr. Inverarity was at Kulladghee, on his tour of duty, and about quitting for Ramdroog, which is represented to be a fine sporting place. He is not now expected to return to Belgaum until next month. Mr. Hadow, the first assistant collector, is also out in his districts; as also is Mr. Manson, the second assistant. There has been no third assistant for some time in this collectorate, I hear.

— Military.—I have just heard of Captain Steek's return here yesterday evening from Dharwar. Colonel Reid having reviewed the 17th N.I. proceeded to Kulladghes to review the 3rd Madras native regiment: from thence he proceeds to Sholapore to review the 16th N.I.

— Jan. 24. Military.—Lieutenant Ridge, 78th Highlanders, has left this station on sick certificate for the presidency. A detachment of Golundauze, mustering thirty-five men, arrived here on the morning of the 21st from Sattara, for the purpose of going through the annual practice.

— Clerical.—The Rev. Mr. J. Taylor, of the London Mission, returned on Friday (15th) from Bombay, to resume his arduous labours. The native community were quite happy at his return.

— Cotton.—A Mr. Blount, an American cotton-planter, passed through this station, it is said for the purpose of superintending the cultivation in the Dharwar and Belgaum districts. I believe this gentleman has been sent out direct by the Court of Directors on a salary of between 800*l.* and 900*l.* per annum, and is to be followed by Mr. Mercer (of Manchester fame) on the small sum of upwards of 1,000*l.* per annum.

— Theatricals.—The amateurs of the 78th performed on the nights of the 17th, 19th, and 21st instant. The pieces played were "Gilderoy" and "My Wife's Husband," with the interludes of comic and negro songs and dances. I remarked the boxes on the staff night were not so well filled as on previous occasions.—Times, Jan. 29.

Nasik.—Baptisms.—We are happy to hear that the Rev. C. C. Menge, of the Church Mission, Nasik, baptized four persons at that place on the 31st of October last, and one person at Malligum on the 19th of December. Of these three are females, and all originally of the Koonbes caste. These persons have been for a considerable time under religious instruction, and give pleasing evidence of having received the truth in sincerity.—Dnyanodaya, Jan. 15.

THE BOMBAY MARKET.

Very little alteration has taken place in the state of trade, we regret to say, since the dispatch of last mail. Money still continues scarce, and the state of the market much the same as formerly. The steamer, with the London mail of the 24th December, arrived on the afternoon of the 28th inst.—fortunately the intelligence brought produced a favourable effect on most descriptions of our stock market. Oriental Bank Shares rose from 7 to 11 per cent. premium, Commercial Bank from 9 to 2 discount. The sale of Government Bills on Calcutta, to the extent of five lacs of rupees, which took place yesterday, averaged Rs. 98: 6: 11 per Rs. 100 in Calcutta 30 days' sight.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDIAN LAW IN BANKRUPTCY.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—You will oblige a few of your readers by drawing public attention and private notice to the fact that it is now twenty-three years since the house of Barretto & Co. failed, under rather extraordinary circumstances, with larger assets than any house since, and up to this period there is no settlement of its affairs!!! The number of attorneys that have fattened upon it is, I aver, without a precedent in any country! and the fees to officers of the Court to an amount that I should very much wish to have the offer of as a fortune!! 3½ lacs were sacrificed in Fairlie and Co.'s failure; 3½ lacs, or £35,000, had again accumulated last year, has that also gone to join the past? A more crying injustice than the management of this estate has never been in any age perpetrated towards creditors, and it is only astonishing that the Court, in which it is now, I believe, does not at once bring it to a close. Two different periods of public bankruptcy have occurred since 1823, and yet every other estate has been wound up, and, extraordinary to say, established again since that period, save this unfortunate one. Two, and in some instances three, new sets of lawyers have been employed!! Is there no law to counteract this? If too far removed from the legislature of this country, they are not so from public opinion, and I call upon you to give publicity to these facts, in order that something may become known to the surviving creditors, and to show that even here there are some still living who are interested for the family of a man, whose bills at one period were current from China to the Red Sea!!!

I beg to remain, Sir, your very obedient servant,
A SUBSCRIBER.

Fxeter, Feb. 20, 1848.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

MONDAY, March 6, 1848.

THE Post-office authorities have made use of the public press to put forth a somewhat impudent manifesto on newspaper thefts within their establishment. The purpose of this paper is to deny that such thefts take place, and the writer recommends persons disappointed of receiving expected newspapers not to be satisfied with the assertion of those whose duty it may be to transmit them, that they have been posted. This is a new exhibition of a very old trick. A watch or a purse is extracted from the pocket of some one in a public thoroughfare; it is missed, and a hue and cry raised after the thief. The rogue joins in it, shouts "Stop thief!" more lustily than anybody else, and evinces an unusual degree of anxiety for the capture of the culprit. Some friend of the freetrader, moreover, often steps in to put the pursuers on a false scent. "Oh, I saw a man run very fast down the street over the way—no doubt he had got the stolen property." Just like these stale expedients is the conduct of the Post-office people in seeking to exonerate themselves from an offence of notoriously common occurrence, and to shift the guilt somewhere else. Really such tricks are almost as discreditable as those they are meant to cover. They are, too, as vain as they are discreditable. The memorable declaration of an officer high in the Post-office, to the effect that an article of value might almost as well be dropt in the street as into the post-box, stands on record against that establishment; and in the face of this it is useless to attempt to get rid of the imputation of stealing newspapers by seeking to throw it upon innocent parties.

We always feel that an intrusion by us upon the field of European politics requires an apology, and we rarely trespass in such a way but under extraordinary circumstances. It will not be denied that the times upon which we are fallen are extraordinary, and this must plead our excuse for referring in very few words to late events on the Continent, and the consequences that may possibly arise from them. Who can calculate the probable results of the destruction of the late Government of France, and the establishment in its place, in some form or other, of a republic? We disclaim all desire to interfere with the internal arrangements of that or any other country, but we cannot conceal from ourselves that a volcano has broken out, and that Europe may, ere long, be wrapt in the flames of war. We sincerely hope that this may be averted—devoutly do we pray that we, at least, may be spared the necessity of taking any part in such war. But we know the temper of the country in which the standard of republicanism has been unfurled, and we know, also, the temper of those governments that will be likely to feel most aggrieved and most alarmed by the outbreak. No one can be certain that a conflict between despotism and democracy will not come, or that it will not break out as suddenly as that which has driven the King of the Million from the throne on which he lately sat in such apparent security. It is therefore pre-eminently the duty of this country, and of every other that would maintain its independence, to be prepared for the worst. With outlying possessions in every quarter of the globe, Great Britain is peculiarly assailable, and unless she cover her natural element, the sea, with her fleets rendered efficient by every appliance which modern science can suggest, she will manifest to the world that she has fallen into a hopeless state of fatuity. It may be feared that thirty-three years of peace have rendered us in no small degree careless. We have been for some time indeed accustomed to think that war was a fashion of bygone ages, never to be revived in our own. We have been assured that such was the case, and persons differing from the thistle-chewing animal in little but length of ear, are now calling meetings to proscribise self-defence. Mr. COBDEN has but just returned from journeying over Europe for the purpose of seeing "how the land lay," and he has told us, over and over again, that all was as quiet and passive as possible. Scarcely, however, has he inhaled a breath of air to supply the place of that employed in giving utterance to this comfortable report, than the Parisian explosion comes; as it has happened that just when an engineer has assured us of the perfect safety of a railway bridge, the bridge has fallen. Such instances should shake our faith in the sagacity—perhaps it would not be too much to say, in the honesty—of those who deal in these visions of perpetual peace. Again we say that we hope the peace of Europe may not be broken—and let us recollect that if broken in Europe the breach might extend beyond the limits of that portion of the globe—but again also we say, let not war, if it should come, find us unprepared. Let us not listen to the voice of faction and folly to our own ruin.

THE EARL of DALHOUSIE has landed at Calcutta, and his first appearance there has given occasion to a very elaborate disquisition, from one of those who witnessed it, on his personal appearance. In this ingenious piece of criticism, which appears in a local paper, the writer, after describing his Lordship's hair and whiskers with an accuracy and precision worthy of Mr. Ross, of Bishopsgate-street, passes to the phrenological development beneath and around the hair, and pronounces it "indicative of the qualities most to be desiderated in a Governor-General of India," though he does not think his Lordship likely to shine as "a poet or historian." This is not, perhaps, much to be regretted, inasmuch as it is little likely that his Lordship will be required to appear in the latter character, and still less likely that any paramount necessity should arise for his assuming the former. The phrenological part of the business being disposed of, the critic proceeds to the physiognomical, in which he displays great learning. LAVATER may be proud of such a disciple. The Governor-General's nose is pronounced "fine;" but with his mouth the writer is not so well satisfied. Still, after all, though it might have been better, it seems that it is calculated to answer the purposes of a mouth very well—"it is formed with great delicacy;" and further, notwithstanding its delicate construction, suggests the idea of "indomitable firmness." From the head, the critic proceeds to take a rapid glance at the whole person, and his judgment is highly satisfactory. "Altogether," he says, the new Governor-General "looks every inch a man" (did the critic expect more or less?) "and exhibits the most favourable outward signs of fitness for his high and arduous office." Further, Lord DALHOUSIE is not only a reasonably handsome man, accredited by nature as a Governor-General, but the Anglo-Indian observer assures us, that "he is one of the most gentlemanly-looking noblemen we have had in India for these fifteen years or more." We do not know what will be said to this by one nobleman, who has been in India certainly within fifteen years, and who throughout his life has taken extraordinary pains to look like a gentleman, whatever his success. We really wish the artist (for it seems the critic is an artist) had been content, without provoking odious comparisons, to say that the newly arrived Governor-General was a most gentlemanly-looking nobleman. We can readily believe that this is true, and we know that his Lordship has something more than appearance in his favour. In this instance he seems to have been surveyed like a horse upon trial, and all his points observed and commented on. On the decorous character of such a piece of criticism we say nothing; it is an outbreak of that Germanism which now overruns our literature, and renders so many readers as well as writers mystically mad. After this full and favourable report of the Governor-General's personal appearance, the article in which it appears winds up thus:—"His Lordship was immediately sworn into office." Was this the result of the favourable impression made upon those who inspected him? Perhaps if they had not liked him, he would have been forthwith returned upon the hands of those who sent him out.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FEB. 21.—Spasmodic Cholera.—On the motion of Mr. WALKER, the following return was ordered: Return from the army medical board of a copy of any report received from Mr. Alexander Thom, Surgeon of H. M.'s 86th regiment, relative to the causes, character, and treatment of spasmodic cholera, as it occurred in H. M.'s 86th regiment at Kurrachee, in June, 1846. Copies of any instructions which had been issued by the army medical board to the medical officers of the army serving in India, relative to the medical treatment of soldiers attacked with cholera; and of any regulations which may have been issued by the army medical board to the medical officers of the army serving in India, with a view to the protection of the soldiers from attacks of the cholera.

FEB. 24.—The Scinde Prize Money.—Mr. J. C. LEWIS, in answer to Capt. TYNNE, said that the scheme for the distribution of the Scinde prize money, had been settled by the treasury so long ago as September last; a point, however, being reserved, with respect to the claim of Sir C. Napier. Instructions had been sent out, and he believed the distribution was now proceeding.

FEB. 25.—The Murders in China.—In answer to a question from Dr. BOWRING, LORD PALMERSTON said the official account of the murders in China was exactly the same as the published details.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHIPPING INSURANCE AT CALCUTTA.—In page 728 of our last volume, we mentioned a case in which the agents in London, of an insurance company at Calcutta, refused payment of a policy, on the ground that the party by whom the policy had been taken out had failed to the company on policies granted on other risks. The matter was referred to the company at Calcutta, who have ordered immediate payment of the policy to be made.

REPORTED LOSS OF THE INDIAN MAIL.—A rumour was lately current that the last Indian Mail, on its way to Marseilles, had been destroyed by the French populace, but it turned out to be false.

THE OPIUM CASE AT BOMBAY.—In the Privy Council on Monday last, Lord Campbell gave judgment in the case of the term bargains in opium in Bombay; the judgment was, that the judgment of the court below be reversed, thereby affirming the legality of the speculations.

ENGAGEMENT OF SHIPS.—The ship Alexander Baring has been engaged for conveyance of stores to Bengal, and the Royal Alice for the like purpose to Madras.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Our Indian Empire; its History and Present State, from the earliest Settlement of the British in Hindostan to the close of the Year 1846. By GEORGE MACFARLANE, Author of the Chapters on Civil and Military Transactions in the Pictorial History of England. 2 Vols. London, 1848. George Routledge and Co.

We think it is Fielding who propounds the opinion, that it is on the whole an advantage to an author to know something of the subject on which he writes. If this opinion be just, the author of the work before us is greatly to be pitied, for unhappily for him (and for his readers) he appears to have sat down to its compilation without the slightest knowledge of any thing relating to India, except its geographical position—if, indeed, he knew that. To point out a title of his blunders would occupy half our paper; but a fair specimen of his accuracy and intelligence is afforded in the following passage. He is speaking of that act of the Marquis of Hastings's administration by which the Peishwa was deprived of sovereignty, and the Rajah of Sattara invested with a portion of territorial power:—

“To the restored family of the Rajah of Sattara, whose hereditary claim to the sovereignty of the country, and to the dignity of Peishwa, was held to be much better than that of Bajee Rao, only a very limited territory was allotted, upon his yielding all claim or pretension to be Peishwa, a dignity wisely and for ever abrogated.”

The man does not know that the Rajah of Sattara claimed to be the head of the Mahratta confederacy, and that the Peishwa, though actually exercising the chief power therein, even to the extent of imprisoning his nominal master, was originally but the minister of a superior lord, and, down to the moment of the destruction of his dignity and dominion, was still so regarded by one of those fictions of government which are found in eastern as well as in western states. The Rajah of Sattara was just as likely to claim the office of Peishwa as Louis Philippe is to claim that of First Minister of the Government of France, and he would no more have thought of renouncing such a claim than the Governor of the Bank of England would of renouncing his claim to be chief cashier. After this monster blunder, we can hardly descend to minor ones. If disposed to search for these, we might find one in almost every page of this luckless compiler's book. He continually speaks of the Board of Directors of the East-India Company. He departs from his accustomed phraseology in one place, where, however, his ill-luck pursues him, and while he eschews one error, he falls into a worse. In narrating a parliamentary debate which took place in 1787, he informs us that a particular motion was "supported by Nathaniel Smith, chief secretary to the Court of Directors;" the fact being, that the gentleman referred to was not "chief secretary," nor any secretary at all, but Deputy-Chairman of the East-India Company. While complaining that "some of the provisions" of what is familiarly called the last Charter Act, "have fallen already into a state of sleep," Mr. MacFarlane seems to have been himself in a state of sleep while perusing them, for he knows nothing of the distinction therein established between the Supreme Local Government of India and the Government of Bengal; he stoutly maintains that there is a Bengal Council, and that Mr. Macaulay was a member of it!!! So firm is his conviction, that he is evidently ready to make battle in its favour against all impugners. We should be very sorry to incur Mr. MacFarlane's wrath, and we fear that he may hesitate to receive our assertion; but we beg to assure him, in all sincerity, that there is a Government of Bengal which is distinct from that of India, and that, as at present constituted, a Council does not form part of the machinery of the Bengal Government. We will not recommend him to re-peruse the Act of Parliament, because it may be feared that he would understand it no better than he does now, but we entreat him to inquire of any friend acquainted with the real state of the case, whether the fact be not as we have stated it. We must not go on with the process of cataloguing blunders, but before we stop we must mention that Mr. MacFarlane is as devoted an unbeliever in the existence of Captain Mackintosh, the writer, or reputed writer, of a book of travels, as is Mr. Elijah Barwell Impey himself, and he demonstrates (to his own satisfaction at least) that no such person ever could have existed. Nevertheless, Captain Mackintosh did walk about and perform other functions of a living man, never dreaming, we dare say, that towards the middle of the nineteenth century, his existence would be denied by two such eminent authorities as Mr. Impey and Mr. MacFarlane.

Having mentioned Mr. Impey, we may observe that he is an especial pet of Mr. MacFarlane's, who kindly, indeed, takes the entire Impey family under his protecting influence. He enters the lists as a champion of the notorious chief justice, and manifests in the cause the proverbial zeal of a new convert; for it is to be remarked that Mr. MacFarlane formerly entertained and avowed an opposite opinion—that is, the all but universal one—upon the merits or demerits of Sir Elijah. In some work or other, whether or not, in a former edition of that before us, does not appear,—we learn (as far as we can gather his meaning) that he treated the memory of the chief justice according to its deserts. But he now knows better. He has held conference with Mr. Barwell Impey,—something of this kind was, we think, stated in that gentleman's forgotten book,—and a reconciliation, as the opposition coach-masters say, has taken place. We should like very much to know the terms; but we suppose the treaty of alliance, offensive and defensive, which has been concluded between these high contracting parties, is a secret one, and that our curiosity has small chance of being gratified. Still, we may and must repeat, that we should like to know the terms which have induced Mr. MacFarlane, like Meer Jaffer at the battle of Plassey, to draw off his troops, and join the party opposed to that with which he ostensibly appeared in the field. But whatever they were, Mr. MacFarlane's conversion is complete, and the conclusion of the compact between Mr. Impey and himself is celebrated by a discharge of compliments perfectly stunning. Never since Hayley and Miss Seward bedaubed each other with fulsome flattery, has there been such a reciprocation of praise. Porson made himself and many others merry with the follies of that pair of them unrivalled flatterers, between whom he framed the imaginary colloquy thus commencing:—

"Miss S. Tunesful poet, Britain's glory!

Mr. Hayley, that is you.

Mr. H. Ma'am, you carry all before you;

Trust me, Lichfield swan, you do."

Great pity it is that Porson is not living to immortalize the friendship of Impey and MacFarlane, originating, we indeed know not how, but exercised in exhausting the vocabulary of compliment upon each other, and upon the object of their joint admiration. Never has such a happy unanimity of purpose and action been seen since Helena and Hermia, sitting on one cushion and warbling one tune, joined in embroidering one flower, or the two kings of Brentford in smelling to one nosegay. The nosegay of the modern pair is indeed an unfragrant one, but they sniff up its foul odour with as much apparent satisfaction as if it exhaled the perfume of

"—gardens of gul in their bloom."

For one quality they do indeed deserve credit—their amazing perseverance. They exhaust their strength in the vain, fruitless, hopeless labour of trying to wash the blackamoor white, and seem in no degree discouraged by their constant failure. They envelope the figure in a coating of plaster, substituting noble features for the vile ones beneath—the covering drops off bit by bit as fast as completed, but they are not a whit disheartened. Few persons read their books, and none give any credit to their statements; but they stand up with a tranquil countenance and repeat them. Mr. Impey's book fell still-born—so Mr. MacFarlane takes up the tale to meet with the like success. This pertinacity of Sir Elijah Impey's advocates is the more remarkable when contrasted with their former apathy. For somewhere about half a century, no soul ventured to utter a word in his defence. Now countless reams are converted into waste-paper by being covered with the immeasurably silly and tedious prosings of those who, for love or money, or some other motive, seek to reverse a judgment confirmed beyond the possibility of being shaken. In regard to some of the charges the friends of Sir Elijah seem to be coming to the sound conclusion, that the least said is the soonest mended. Mr. MacFarlane dwells at length on the Nunoomar case, but the other charges are passed over with the delicacy of a man walking upon reeking ashes. The wholesale manufacture of affidavits at Lucknow, the grasping rapacity which led the chief justice, for the sake of an appointment from which he hoped to derive large emoluments, to truckle to the government which he had factiously opposed—these and other matters (for the delinquencies of the chief justice were multiform) slip by almost without notice. So let it be, if so Sir Elijah's champions list. Let the man and his deeds sleep together. But if injudicious friends will call up their memory, those who are concerned for the fidelity of history cannot be expected to be silent—and they will not be silent.

If the points to which we have just adverted had been altogether passed by, we might have supposed that the omission was accidental; for there are many things naturally to be looked for in a history of India which those, if any such there shall be, who make search for them in Mr. MacFarlane's book, will not find. We have noticed the author's enormous blunder as to the Rajah of Sattara. Will it be believed that although the narrative comes down to the year 1846, no mention is made of the deposition of the Rajah? What will be said to this by the friends of the Rajah? are the misfortunes of that persecuted prince, with the recital of which the East-India proprietors have for years past been deafened, and the readers of newspapers sickened, to be passed over as though he had never by British generosity been raised from the condition of a captive to the enjoyment of pomp and state, and wealth? Is a descendant of the most illustrious robbers and cut-throats of Asia to be treated as if he were no better than the son of an Old Bailey "petty larceny rascal," born but to steal pocket-handkerchiefs, and be forgotten? We leave the matter to those whom it concerns; but if Mr. MacFarlane does not on this account receive some signal intimation of the displeasure of the Rajah's friends, he is a lucky man.

He is a lucky man, whether this piece of good fortune await him or not. He meets with adventures in his which never happen but to sentimental travellers like Sterne and himself. Pacing the streets of the good old city of Canterbury one bright day, he met with "a fine fellow returned from India," a soldier of "the 16th Lancers—that gallant and remarkably handsome regiment," says Mr. MacFarlane. All will concur in the propriety of applying the epithet "gallant" to that regiment, but we are not clear whether or not the qualifying phrase "remarkably handsome" is to be understood of the personal appearance of the men belonging to it. If so, we should be glad to learn how this superiority of manly beauty is secured. This, however, by the way. The fine fellow just returned from India bore such testimony to the merits of Lord Ellenborough as must silence for ever all who think lightly of them. The anecdote is too good to be quoted in our pages; those who are curious must go to the fountain-head for gratification. It is very like much that we have read in the cheap repository tracts, and is quite worthy of a place in them. Mr. Macfarlane is himself a great admirer of Lord Ellenborough as well as of Sir Charles Napier. Our opinion of those distinguished persons is well known; but as we have no reason to believe that they have employed Mr. Macfarlane to puff them, we will not take advantage of the opportunity afforded for reasserting the views which we have so often avowed. Misfortune should disarm hostility, and while the noble peer and the gallant general are suffering under this author's praise, we will not attack them.

"—wanderings through this world of care,"

Let us not forget to mention, for the benefit of those who, like the surly old Grecian, are in search of an honest man, that Mr. Macfarlane can direct them where to find this reputedly rare object. He tells us (vol. i. page 325), that in the neighbourhood of Newick Park, Sussex, "good men were not, and are not, scarce;" shewing that, to the homely old proverb, "good folk are scarce," there is at least one local exception—the happy vicinity of Newick Park. We do not know in what part of Sussex Newick Park is situate. Is it in the weald? If so, it may be inferred that good men and oak-trees flourish in the same soil.

We could select many more gems from "Our Indian Empire," but we forbear, lest we should cloy our readers with excess of riches. Yet we must secure the following. The historian is speaking of Lord Ellenborough.

"He was, in a manner, the favourite of the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel, the premier; but the Court of Directors, taking umbrage and offence at some of his proceedings, and having by their Charter the power so to do, recalled Lord Ellenborough from his eminent post towards the end of April, 1844."

From the above passage we learn, that though various changes, at different times have been made in regard to the East-India Company, and those who administer its affairs; though the exclusive privileges of the Company in regard to trade had been abolished, and even their right to trade at all placed in abeyance, one important right has, among the wreck of others, been inviolably respected. "The power of taking umbrage and offence" is yet secured by charter, and not even the sweeping enactments of 1833 have affected it. While this shall endure, who shall say that chartered rights are despised?

The most fascinating pleasures must come to an end, and our delightful examination of Mr. Macfarlane's book cannot be exempted from the common fate. We are glad to have an opportunity of parting from him in words furnished by himself. In giving a report of a speech made by Mr. Pitt, he in a note thus refers to his authority, "Speeches of the Right Hon. W. PITT in the House of Commons, edited (rather badly) by W. S. HATHAWAY." The interpolation as well as the italics which mark it are Mr. Macfarlane's. In humble imitation of so good an example we shall beg to describe the work before us as a History of "Our Indian Empire," written rather badly—or say very badly indeed, by Mr. GEORGE MACFARLANE. Perhaps we may be induced to add as a softener of the harshness of the sentence, the friend, eulogist, mouthpiece, first minister in the literary department, chief trumpeter, and jobber-general of Mr. Elijah Barwell Impey. And thus we quit this most slovenly piece of shop-work—or, if the reader please, slop-work. The sound is nearly identical—the meaning altogether so.

The Poetical Works of John Milton. Edited by Sir EGERTON BRYDGES, Bart. Illustrated with Engravings, from Drawings by J. M. W. TURNER, R.A. A new edition. London, 1848. Tegg and Co.

SIR EGERTON BRYDGES' edition of Milton was originally published in six volumes, small octavo. By the present reprint we have the whole of the first edition in one thick handsome demy octavo volume, forming a very elegant library edition of our great poet. To these one volume editions of great authors two objections are usually advanced; first, that the page is printed in double columns, and secondly, that the type is generally so small as to fatigue even young eyes in reading. From these objections the volume under notice is free, the page contains but one column, and the type is large and clear. The designs of the gigantic Turner shine in all their original splendour and beauty; truly he is a fit artistic interpreter of the mighty poet.

It is not our intention to say anything on the manner in which Sir Egerton Brydges executed his task. The public has, ere this, set its seal of approbation on his labours. He brought to the work a passionate love of his author, as well as great reading, a sound judgment, and a kindred feeling of poesy, the result of which was, the production of, perhaps, as perfect an edition of a great writer as could be desired. We do not say that he is successful in clearing the character of the "poet blind yet bold" of the imputations, no doubt, justly cast on it; this was a task which could not be accomplished, and therefore the attempt was scarcely necessary. If the character and some of the opinions of Milton were not such as could be wished, we must console ourselves by remembering that and overlook his failings in the contemplation of his transcendent genius.

— Nihil est ab omni

Indian Railways and their Probable Results; with Maps, and an Appendix: containing Statistics of Internal and External Commerce of India. By AN OLD INDIAN POSTMASTER. Third Edition. London, 1848. Newby: Richardson.

THE first edition of this work was noticed in our Journal of the 13th of August, 1846. It now re-appears with considerable modifications, adapting it to the altered state of circumstances in all respects but one—the condition of the Money Market. We have always been zealous advocates of railways in India; the author under notice is not less zealous in the cause, and on the whole he is judicious also. We differ from him on a few points, but though he seems well-disposed to provoke a combat we cannot consent to indulge him, as no practical good would be likely to result from our disputations. The book is worth reading, as it contains a great deal of information put forth with that confidence which, at all events, shews a conviction in the author's mind that he is fighting for the truth.

Competence in a Colony, compared with Poverty at Home; or, Relief to Landlords and Labourers, held out by Australian Colonisation and Emigration. A Memorial addressed to the Right Hon. Lord JOHN RUSSELL, &c. &c. London, 1848. Murray.

THIS memorial contains many important statements, and many cogent arguments. We are most anxious to see the establishment of a judicious system of colonisation, as opposed to mere emigration. The latter is too often but the substitution of misery abroad for misery at home. Colonisation, on a sound and liberal plan to adopt the words of the memorial, "would augment the comfort of the people, would secure the tranquillity of the State, would greatly add to commercial prosperity, would relieve manufacturing distress, would assist the agricultural and shipping interest, would diminish the public burdens, and increase the revenue." But mere emigration will not do. The inhabitants of a civilised country should not go and set themselves down in a distant place in the state of semi-savages, or worse. A colony should, in all social respects, be a miniature of the country by which it has been sent out. This has rarely been understood, and the want of understanding it has been always more or less injurious, sometimes fatally injurious, to our attempts at colonisation.

Account of the Rise and Progress of Ocean Steam Navigation connected with the System of Contracting for the Conveyance of the Public Mails by private Steam-Vessels; comparing the Contract Force, the Particulars of Expenditure or Cost, and the Receipts from Traffic; with Suggestions for the Extension of Steam to the Cape, Mauritius, and Australian Colonies. By A. HENDERSON. London, 1847. Smith, Elder, and Co.

WE do not know that we can add any thing to the information afforded as to the object of this publication by the very copious title prefixed to it, except to state that the author is a fierce opponent of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.

Tales about the Sun, Moon, and Stars. By PETER FARLEY. The Fifth Edition, with great Additions and Improvements. London, 1847. Tegg and Co.

ONE of the best things Douglas Jerrold ever wrote was the description in one of his comedies of an itinerant lecturer who went about the country "with the solar system in a handbox." In this little volume we have that system packed as compactly as Jerrold's lecturer could do it, and explained in a simple, easy, yet comprehensive manner, fit for the understanding of an intelligent child. The information is brought down to the latest really important and authentic discoveries, forming a compendious introduction to the study of astronomy. The author's knowledge of the subject appears to be very considerable. The woodcuts, as in all Mr. Tegg's publications for the young, are of a very superior order: many of them are worthy of being ranked with the finest specimens of this kind of engraving.

East-India House, 23rd Feb. 1848.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That a Special General Court of the said Company will be held at their House, in Leadenhall Street, on Wednesday, the 8th March next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at the desire of nine Proprietors of East-India Stock, as expressed in the following letter, viz.:-

" London, February 16th, 1848.

" To the Chairman and Directors of the East-India Company.

" Honourable Sirs,—We, the undersigned Proprietors of East-India Stock, duly qualified by law, request that you will convene a Special General Court of Proprietors for the purpose of taking into consideration the accompanying resolutions, and that you will be pleased to publish the same with this our requisition.

" We have the honour to be, Honourable Sirs,

" Your obedient servants,

(Signed) " JOSEPH HUME,
ALEX. RAPHAEL,
ARTHUR J. LEWIS,
J. SULLIVAN,
ROBERT J. BAGEWELL,

CHARLES FORBES,
J. W. GRAHAM,
J. WILLIAMS,
GEO. THOMPSON.

" Resolved,—That it appears by the official documents laid before this Court that, in the year 1836, a secret inquiry was instituted, by order of the Government of Bombay, into an alleged breach of the treaty of the 25th September, 1819, subsisting between the East-India Company and his Highness Peshwa Shahu, the Rajah of Satara.

" That on the 26th of October, 1836, the rajah appeared before the Secret Commission (consisting of Colonel Lodwick, Mr. Willoughby, and Colonel Ovens) and requested a Maharrata copy of so much of the deposition of the two soobahdars and the Brahmin as affected himself, which was not at the time objected to.

" That on the 27th October the commission were occupied the greater part of this day in preparing Maharrata translations of the evidence regarding the interview at the palace for the ultimate use of his Highness the Rajah of Satara.

" That Sir Robert Grant, Governor of Bombay, recorded in a minute of council, on the 18th August, 1837, " That he was strongly of opinion that before the case is conclusively disposed of, the rajah should be made acquainted with the fresh evidence that has been elicited against him, and should be allowed the opportunity of offering defence or explanation." And again, in his minute of council of the 20th of September, 1837, suggests—" That Colonel Ovens should be instructed to prepare a complete statement of the case which has been established against the rajah, in order that when his inquiries are concluded, it may be furnished to his highness for any such explanation or answer as he may choose to offer."

" That Mr. Wathen, chief secretary to the Government of Bombay, in his letter to Col. Ovens, dated 27th September, 1837, " directed Col. Ovens to prepare a complete statement of the case established against the rajah, that it may be furnished to the rajah, and that if this statement be denied, his highness should be confronted with the witnesses, the most effective measures being adopted for their protection."

" That Sir Robert Grant, again, in a minute of council, dated 31st May, 1838, says: " The rajah has not been told of the evidence taken by Colonel Ovens, and undoubtedly has a right to be heard in his vindication." " I repeat this opinion (which he) expressed in a minute of council, in August, 1837, not meaning that there should be merely the form or force of a trial, to be closed by a ready-made judgment, but that the defence should be fairly heard and impartially weighed."

" That Lord Auckland, the Governor-General of India, in a minute, dated 23rd September, 1838, ordered in the following words:—

" [I would, as suggested by Sir Robert Grant, request that the rajah should be furnished with a written statement embodying a full and clear detail of the facts connected with the several charges, and of the names (with any reservations which may be absolutely required for the safety of the party) of the witnesses by whom they are proved, with a notice of the circumstances under which the evidence was obtained, and call for from him, within a certain reasonable time, to be fixed, a similar written statement of whatever he may desire to urge in his own behalf."

" That, notwithstanding the preparation of the evidence promised by the commission (which closed its proceedings on the 4th November, 1836) and the repeated desire expressed by the Governor of Bombay and the Governor-General of India, that a statement of the whole of the evidence taken against the rajah should be placed in his highness's hand, such statement was withheld, for reasons secretly stated by Colonel Ovens. Colonel Ovens personally informing his highness, " That the proceedings of the commission being strictly secret, it did not consider itself authorized to grant a copy of any part of those proceedings to any person whatsoever."

" That the dethronement of the late Rajah of Satara, when "no sudden emergency, nor imminent danger, nor any preparations made by him for commencing hostilities," threatened without obtaining the previous and express sanction of the home authorities for the act, was a violation of the 33rd Geo. 3, cap. 52, sections 42 and 43, made and provided to guard against and prohibit the exercise of such dangerous and despotic power by any subordinate authority in India, viz.

" Section 43.—" It shall not be lawful for the Governor-General in Council, without the express command or authority of the Court of Directors, or of the Secret Committee, by the authority of the Board of Control, in any case (except where hostilities have actually been commenced, or preparations actually made for the commencement of hostilities against the British nation in India), either to declare war or commence hostilities, or enter into any treaty for making war, &c."

" Resolved, That this Court, taking all these circumstances into consideration, is of opinion that the dethronement of the Rajah of Satara, by Sir James Carnac, without furnishing him with a copy of the evidence taken in secret against him, and thereby withholding from him the means of making a defence, and without the previous consent and authority of the Court of Directors, or the Secret Committee of that Court, and of the Board of Control, was unjust, premature, and contrary to law; and therefore the guilt or innocence of the late Rajah of Satara, and the conduct of the Bombay Government in these transactions, ought to be made the subject of a public and impartial inquiry, alike for the protection of the princes of India in alliance with the East-India Company from the perpetration of similar wrongs, for the satisfaction of the ends of justice, and for the vindication of the honour of the British name, and the security of the British empire in the East."

&c., No. 187, PICCADILLY, LONDON, avail themselves of the present opportunity gratefully to acknowledge the patronage which they have received for so many years from their numerous connections in India, and to solicit a continuance of that preference which it has ever been their endeavour to deserve. At the same time, they beg to state that, from their very severe losses, they are compelled to decline the execution of any orders unless accompanied by an order for payment (when shipped) upon some agent or mercantile house in London.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES.NEW HINDUSTANI DICTIONARY.

A DICTIONARYHINDUSTANI-ENGLISH & ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI.

By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.,

Professor of Oriental Languages in the King's College, London; Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland; Member of the Asiatic Society of Paris; and author of several Works on the Hindustani and Persian Languages.

This work has been undertaken in order to meet the exigency of our day—via a copious and portable Hindustani Dictionary at a moderate cost. It has been the compiler's aim to accomplish this object, not by the omission or abridgment of any words and phrases, but by the adoption of a small, distinct, and economical type, whereby he is enabled to lay before the public, in one volume royal octavo, of about 1,000 pages, the most complete Hindustani Dictionary yet offered for sale. The first part—Hindustani and English—may now be procured. It contains more words (by some thousands) than have ever been previously collected in one work by former compilers. The second part—English and Hindustani, which will be completed in May—is also by far the most copious of the kind that has yet appeared. The author having devoted the greater portion of his life to the study of the Oriental languages, and upwards of twenty years to instructing others therein, has had every advantage in the compilation of this laborious book, which he trusts will not be deemed unworthy of extensive patronage.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, who, to compounds of their own manufacture, give the titles of "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto" some under the implied sanction of Royalty and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials (substituting fictitious names and addresses for the real of the original preparations. The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," are "ROWLANDS'" and the wrapper of each bears the name of ROWLANDS' preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus:—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

AT A MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS held at the Company's Office, 25, Pall Mall, in November last, it was shown by the Report of the Auditors and Directors,—

1. That this Company was the FIRST to ASSURE DISEASED AND INVALID LIVES in a SYSTEMATIC MANNER, and on the same safe and defined principles as those on which ordinary Offices assure Healthy Lives; and that AT THE PRESENT TIME it is the only Company furnished with SCIENTIFIC AND WELL-CONSTRUCTED TABLES, showing the duration of life in the different classes and various stages of disease.

2. That the PUBLIC HAVE FELT THE URGENT NECESSITY for a Company established on such principles was rendered MANIFEST by the fact, that DURING THE PERIOD OF SIX YEARS in which the Society had been in business, above 2,700 proposals had been made to it, covering Assurances to upwards of One and a half Millions of money.

3. The number of POLICIES ISSUED FAR EXCEEDS THE AVERAGE of the old and successful Offices in a similar period; and the business has been rapidly increasing, the number of Policies issued during the last year was 323 for assurances, amounting to £146,000.

4. That the public have derived a great benefit from the establishment of this Company, is shown by the fact, that 95 PER CENT. OF THE LIVES ASSURED HAD BEEN REJECTED BY OTHER OFFICES,—thus extending the important benefits of Life Assurance to a large section of the community not embraced by other Companies.

5. That in all cases where satisfactory proof is given that the causes for an increased rate of premium have ceased, a reduction in the premium is made.

6. Healthy Lives, both at Home and in Foreign Climates, are Assured with as much facility and at LOWER RATES than at most other Offices; and a capital of Half-a-Million sterling, fully subscribed, affords a complete guarantee for the fulfilment of the Company's engagements.

AGENTS IN INDIA.
 Calcutta Messrs. Robinson, Balfour, & Co.
 Madras Messrs. Line & Co.
 Bombay Messrs. Ritchie, Stewart, & Co.
 Ceylon Messrs. Acland, Boyd, & Co.

The following peculiar advantages are offered by this Company:—
 1. Their policies cover the risk of living and voyaging over a far larger portion of the globe than do those issued by any other Company in existence. They allow the assured to reside in the Australasian and North American colonies, and at the Cape of Good Hope. They also allow to the assured for the whole of life one passage out and home to any of those colonies. For British India a very moderate extra premium is charged, and the premium is reduced to the English scale on the return of the assured life to England for permanent residence.
 2. Premiums may be paid, and claims settled at Sydney, where there is a Board of Directors and Trustees; and at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, where there are Agents.
 3. A third of the premiums may remain unpaid for five years; nor is it necessary for the maintenance of the Assurance to pay up the premium at the end of that time, but the unpaid thirds may remain as a debt against the policy, if the interest be regularly paid upon them as the renewal premiums fall due.

ANNUITIES.
 The Annuities offered by the Company are on a more favourable scale than those offered by any other Companies, having been calculated with reference to the rates of interest obtainable on Colonial Investments. Annuitants also participate in the profits.

TO FLAUTISTS.

THOMAS PROWSE, 13, HANWAY STREET, OXFORD STREET, LONDON (SOLE MAKER of the CELEBRATED CHARLES NICHOLSON'S FLUTES), takes this opportunity to inform the Musical Public in India and the Colonies that he now also manufactures Flutes on the principle of the talented Flautist, JOSEPH RICHARDSON; therefore all future orders should state whether a "NICHOLSON" or "RICHARDSON" Flute is required.

These instruments possess a remarkable brilliancy of tone, and are perfect in intonation and tune in every key; the superiority of style in the finishing department leaves nothing to be wished for by the connoisseur, and the plan adopted only by T. P. of seasoning the wood for extreme climates renders these instruments far superior to any others now manufactured.

The prices are the same as for the "Nicholson's" Flutes, and vary, according to their number of keys, from 11 guineas to 30 guineas; and purchasers, to prevent their being imposed upon, will receive a certificate, signed by the approver and maker, thus—JOSEPH RICHARDSON and THOMAS PROWSE.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or by an order through their agent in London.

An extensive and modern Stock of Wood and Brass Instruments for Military Bands.

PRIVATE TUITION.—The Rev. C. A. JOHNS, B.A., F.L.S., late Head Master of the Hepton Grammar School, undertakes the education of a limited number of Boys, between the age of 8 and 14 (sons of gentlemen). There are at present two vacancies. Apply No. 24 Walpole Street, King's Road, Chelsea.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL, MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRACTORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced managers) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus preventing MILITARY and NAVAL OFFICERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAILING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessities to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burdened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DEPARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL. The SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. The WORKSHOPS for Clothing, at 44, Bishopsgate-street Within; for SHIRTS and CABIN FURNITURE, at 33 and 34, Nassau-place, Commercial-road; and for SHIRTS, STAYS, BRACES, &c., at LANDPORT, near PORTSMOUTH.

(OPPOSITE THE EAST-INDIA HOUSE.)

W. M. BOYCE and CO. at the suggestion of several of their friends, have opened a "SUBSCRIPTION and READING ROOM," at their Offices, 127, Leadenhall-street, opposite the India House. A large and handsome apartment is fitted up with every convenience and comfort. It will be supplied with all the Leading Journals and Periodicals of the day, particularly those treating on India and the East generally.

The advantages to Subscribers will be—a comfortable rendezvous for themselves and friends, in the most central part of the City; the certainty of obtaining every information connected with India up to the latest date; a commodious place to write letters, and a place of reference for letters and fast general business.

Any Subscriber residing in India, or away from London, may appoint a proxy, who will be allowed all the advantages of such Subscriber.

Terms of Subscription 1—To Subscribers in India, one Rupee per annum. Ditto, in England, one Guinea per annum.

EAST INDIA and GENERAL AGENCY, No. 127, Leadenhall-street (opposite the East-India House).

W. M. BOYCE and CO. in returning thanks to their friends and supporters for the liberal patronage already bestowed on them, beg to intimate that their offices are now established at No. 127, Leadenhall-street.

W. M. BOYCE and Co. continue to forward supplies and goods of every description to Messrs, Families, and Individuals, on the most moderate terms, by the Cape or Overland. Passages to the Three Presidencies, on China, by sailing vessels, via the Cape, or by steam, via the Red Sea, negotiated on the most favourable terms.

Outfits for Officers appointed to the Civil, Military, Naval, or Medical Establishments in India, procured with every attention to economy consistent with the supplying of first-rate articles.

PAY and PENSIONS drawn and remitted to any part of Great Britain or the Continent. Luggage cleared and warehoused, and Parcels and Letters forwarded Overland to India.

In order to render their agency as efficient as possible, W. M. B. and Co. would call particular attention to the following points, which they consider of great importance, not only to their friends, but to the public generally.

It frequently occurs that gentlemen residing in India are compelled to send their wives and children home, and remain in India themselves. Circumstances often compel ladies and children to land in England without any one to receive and relieve them from the troubles and annoyances attendant on disembarkation, after a long and fatiguing voyage, and the clearing of their luggage through the Customs-house. In order to meet these cases, one of the Firm is prepared to attend any so situated, personally, and to escort them to their friends. Parties wishing to avail themselves of this accommodation should communicate their intention, in writing, by the Overland Mail, in sufficient time to admit of proper arrangements being made for their reception. Parents in India wishing to send their children to England for education, and unable to accompany them, may avail themselves of W. M. B. and Co.'s agency, who will undertake to receive them, place them at school, and act as guardians, if necessary. If requisites, reference can be given to parties who have already availed themselves of this arrangement. Inconvenience is often felt, and great expense incurred, in consequence of families arriving from India without having previously decided upon a place of residence. This may be obviated by timely application to BOYCE and Co., who are prepared to engage permanent or temporary residences for all parties arriving from India. A residence of upwards of twenty years in India, the greater portion of which was passed in the East India Company's naval service, renders the head of the Firm peculiarly fitted for the business which is now sought, and which is merely reverted to here as a guarantee that the most scrupulous attention to the interests and wants of their supporters will be attended with the advantage of being able to impart, from actual experience, any information which may be required relative to India.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 15th May 1847, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums. This will be found a liberal reduction if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventative of the miasmatic diseases arising from heat of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. This manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats; the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all irritating or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and the very general approval and consequent demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vigonia, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 152, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glenny undertake to forward them in dozens or half-dozens to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free, at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 78s. per dozen, and Ladies', 66s. per dozen; and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 12s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 18s. per dozen to Bombay.

OUTFITS TO INDIA, BY SHIP AND OVERLAND.

Every particular connected with outfits to India, both for ladies and gentlemen, including detailed lists of requisite clothing, uniforms, &c. &c. for every appointment, with the necessary variations for the outfits of CIVILIANS, CADETS, ASSISTANT-SURGEONS, &c. together with every information respecting passage by ship and by the overland route, baggage, packing, &c., will be forwarded on application to Messrs. Thresher and Glenny, as above.

TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT.

From Alexandria to Suez, under direction of the Egyptian Transit Company, only 2 cwt. of baggage is allowed without extra charge, and no package or trunk should exceed 80 lb. weight.

THE REGULATION OVERLAND TRUNKS & CASES. Manufactured by Thresher and Glenny especially for the TRANSIT THROUGH EGYPT, and for the cabins of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steam-ships to MALTA, ALEXANDRIA, and INDIA, can only be procured at their East-India Outfit Warehouse, 152, Strand, London.

All communications addressed to Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, 152, STRAND, LONDON, will have immediate attention.

THE HAND-BEDSTEAD, weight only 17 lbs.

JOHN BESEMERES and SONS, CLOTHIERS, OUT-FITTERS, and Ready-made Linen Warehousemen, invite Cadets and overland travellers to India to inspect this Portable Bedstead, price 12s. 6d., invented and made only by them. Although so light, it is strong, compact, of full size, and may be used without a mattress; it passes readily into a bag 6 inches in diameter, 24 long. Bedstead, bedding, blankets, sheets, quilt, &c., packed in one of their (21s.) Waterproof Regulation Overland Trunks, weigh under 50 lbs. Lists of Outfit for Cadets and Assistant-Surgeons, and estimates of every expense, forwarded by post.—Outfitting Warehouses, Nos. 61 to 64, Houndsditch, London.

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

If any evidence were wanting of the quiet state of the PUNJAB, it would be found in the fact that the most important article of intelligence from that quarter is the report of a gaol émeute, in which four lives were lost and fifteen prisoners escaped. But for the loss of life it was altogether a very contemptible affair.

SCINDIE would call for no mention but for the preparations made for receiving the GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY, who left the Presidency on the 10th of February, accompanied by Mr. GOLDSMID and Colonel MELVILL, as Secretaries. He was to proceed at once to the mouth of the Indus, and there to take a river steamer to Hyderabad. He was to be met at Tatta by Mr. PRINGLE and his staff, by whom the Governor was to be accompanied to the capital. The voice of public opinion was raised universally in praise of Mr PRINGLE's administration.

FROM INDIA PROPER there is little news. The campaign against the UNGOOL RAJAH had terminated in the flight of that Prince, after his gurus and stockades had been captured.

At CALCUTTA the absorbing topics were still the failure of the Union Bank and its consequences. Various meetings arising thereout had been held. The extraordinary press of matter forbids our reporting their proceedings at length; but the following points, extracted from a précis furnished by the local press, will be sufficient to indicate their nature and character:—

"On the day after that upon which we issued our last Summary, an adjourned general meeting of the Union Bank shareholders was held according to appointment. To this assembly the Committee of Inquiry submitted its report and a series of resolutions for winding up the affairs of the bank.

"The report was adopted, and also the resolutions appended,—the latter, however, in a modified form. An Executive Committee was appointed to conduct the affairs of the bank in liquidation, Messrs. T. C. Morton, G. Shearwood, H. Burkinyoung, and Manookjee Rustomjee being chosen as members thereof. Mr. J. L. Russell has since been appointed Secretary, on the resignation of Mr. W. H. Abbott. It was determined that a call of 200 rupees per share should be made, and that such shareholders as could afford it should make a loan of 20,000 rupees each, at 6 per cent. interest. It was understood, we believe, that those who really could not afford to pay these demands should not be pressed, but that those who could should, with the aid of the creditors, be compelled to meet them. The proceedings of the meeting involved some curious disclosures.

"Another meeting was held on the 28th ult. at which special committees were appointed, one to act in conjunction with the executive committee in the management of the indigo factories in which the bank holds an interest, and another for inquiring and reporting on the circumstances connected with the granting of the post-bills issued from the bank. This last committee was also instructed to inquire in what manner the remainder of the money due to the Commercial Bank of Bombay had been appropriated.

"A meeting of policy-holders in the Indian Laudable and Mutual Assurance Company was held on the 26th ult. to inquire into the condition of its funds, which, according to common ~~report~~ had been, to a great extent, lost or endangered by the managers. According to a statement drawn up by Mr. Greenaway, one of the Directors, it appeared, however, that the risk of loss had been very greatly exaggerated, as, though large sums had been invested in loans on Union Bank shares and post-bills, collateral security of a more valuable character and to a sufficient extent was in most cases held. It was, nevertheless, resolved to appoint a committee to investigate the accounts of the society, and to report the result of its inquiries to a meeting to be called at a future time. It appeared that the Secretary of the association, Mr. John Storm, had, without in the first instance obtaining the sanction of the Directors, sent 70,000 rupees to his brother, on the collateral security of 82 Union Bank shares, and on this it was proposed to demand his resignation. But it was eventually resolved, that though the meeting did not exonerate Mr. Storm from culpability in the transaction, it could not charge him with dishonourable motives, and that he should not be required to resign his office."

From the same quarter we derive the following :—

"A case of some importance was decided in the Insolvent Court here lately. A wealthy Hindoo merchant, being associated with Mr. Larpent, of the insolvent firm of Cockerell and Co. as assignee for the estate of John Palmer and Co. was declared liable for the assets collected, and which amounted to above two lakhs of rupees, although he had never taken any active part in the management of the estate."

No new failures were announced, but trade was in a very depressed state, and the accounts recently received from home had created much dismay.

From MADRAS and BOMBAY the intelligence is uninteresting. The only provocative to the appetite of news-mongers at the latter presidency has been furnished by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, who, having set his heart upon a small cause-bill establishing a small cause-court, wherein perhaps but a small measure of justice would be administered, had been round to Calcutta to stimulate the Legislative Council to comply with his wishes. According to the Bombay Times, this attempt to steal a march upon the opponents of the proposed measure was regarded with almost universal reprobation, and a strong memorial against the meditated "little-go" was in process of signature.

There are arrivals from CHINA, but nothing material is added thereby to our previous information.

BENGAL.

LOCAL.

THE ATLAS INSURANCE OFFICE.—The Englishman states, that a report of the half-yearly meeting of the Atlas Insurance Company is now in circulation, and that an immediate payment of Rs. 1,000 is demanded to meet the present liabilities! The report states, that it is the opinion of the meeting that the office be wound up with the least possible delay.—Friend of India, Feb. 3.

LOSS OF A BOAT.—The troop-boat Jellinghee, in tow of the Mahanuddy steamer, when a little above Channel Creek on Sunday morning, on her way up to town, suddenly went down in one fathom water, leaving but just time enough for the passengers to get on board the steamer. The Jellinghee had on board eight hundred chests of opium and five lacs of treasure. She has since turned bottom up; but part of the treasure and a hundred chests of opium have been recovered. It seems difficult to assign a cause for this accident; but the Jellinghee was an iron steamer, and it is said that some of her plates were found to have been started.—Hurkaru, Feb. 7.

OPIMUM SALE.—The average prices at the sale held on the 24th were Rs. 860 for Patna and 816 for Benares. This is a fall of about Rs. 100 per chest in the prices obtained at the last sale.—Ibid.

THE "MIRZAPORE."—The new steamer Mirzapore, belonging to the Ganges Company, took another trial trip on the 24th, having on board a large party of gentlemen and wealthy shroffs from the Bazar. Her performance proved satisfactory.—Ibid.

FRUIT, &c.—The show of fruits and vegetables at the Town-Hall on the 4th was the best known since the establishment of the society under whose auspices the exhibitions are held.—Ibid.

FIRE.—On Sunday last two fires took place in town: the first at Moochee-para, where one native house was destroyed; the second at Muchooa bazar, on which occasion about twenty huts were consumed.—Ibid, Feb. 8.

MOFUSSIL.

BUDGE BUDGE.—A supposed Tiger.—The supposed tiger which was seen at Budge Budge has been killed. It turns out to be a very large male leopard, stated to have measured thirty inches in height. A small party assembled at the Acra Farm the other day, and proceeded towards Budge Budge in quest of sport. The natives said there was a hog in a patch of jungle, and two of the party, being well mounted, were desirous of a run. The proprietor of the Acra Farm volunteered to start the animal, and went into the jungle with the beaters for the purpose, armed with a spear. They had only proceeded a few yards when the man cried out Bagh! Bagh! running away with all his might, and a number of natives who were watching the proceeding instantly took to trees like as many monkeys. The Englishman, however, though deserted by his allies, having got a fair sight of his foe, advanced steadily till he had him in command of his spear, when he instantly transixed the brute, whose dying roar added to the terrors of the villagers. On being at length assured that the creature was dead, they came boldly up with spears and lattes to assist the sahib. The feat was a bold one, and not to be imitated by those who have not as strong arms and steady nerves as the well-known proprietor of Acra, for the slightest trepidation might have had very unpleasant consequences. Leopards are frequently speared with the aid of a net, but we do not recollect an instance of one being fairly faced in his lair by a single man on foot without support or assistance.—Englishman, Feb. 2.

DELHI.—Sir Theophilus Metcalfe, Bart., the agent to the Lieutenant Governor at Delhi, returned from his tour to the west on Saturday afternoon.

Arrivals.—Jan. 16.—Major-general Sir Walter R. Gilbert, K. B., commanding Sirhind division, proceeding to Hansie on duty; Major R. Haughton, deputy assistant adjutant general, proceeding to Hansie on duty; Captain J. S. Alston, officiating deputy judge advocate general, proceeding on general leave.—18. Lieutenant A. D. Turnbull, superintendent canals west of Jumna, on a tour of inspection along the canals under his charge; Captain G. N. Moore, H. M.'s Foot, proceeding to join his regiment.

Departure.—Jan. 18.—Major-general Sir W. R. Gilbert, K. C. B. commanding Sirhind division, proceeding to Hansie on duty.—Gazette, Jan. 19.

The Weather.—The weather has become rather too warm to be pleasant at this season of the year, and a good fall of rain would be of the greatest benefit in reducing the temperature.

Gaieties.—The reunion came off last evening, but was somewhat more thinly attended than had been anticipated. An accession of the fair sex in a short time may induce a more numerous assembly on the next occasion.

Death of Mahmud Meer Khaun.—We have to announce the death of Nuwab Mahmud Meer Khaun, a distinguished literateur of Delhi, son of the Maharatta governor of the province at the time of Lord Lake's entrance, and a pensioner of the British Government to a considerable amount. His library is one of the most valuable in Delhi.

A Great Traveller.—Among the visitors whom the curiosities of Delhi have lately attracted is Madame Pefeiffer, a Viennese lady, probably the greatest traveller of her sex on record. India is taken on her way home, as she has already visited a large portion of South America, Otaheite, China, Singapore, &c., and purposes returning to Europe by way of the Cape, or perhaps of the Persian Gulf, Turkish Arabia and Syria. She has also visited, before undertaking her present tour, almost every country of Europe, including Poland and Turkey in Europe, as also Syria and Egypt.

Arrivals.—Jan. 19.—Captain F. Lloyd, assistant commissary general, on duty; Lieutenant colonel J. T. Boilleau, officiating superintending engs. N. W. P. on tour of inspection.—Ibid. Jan. 22.

GOOMSUR.—Mr. J. P. Grant.—We understand that Mr. J. P. Grant, having finished his inquiry into the late Goomsur agency, has requested to be allowed to return at once to Calcutta, in order to submit a final report on the subject to Government, and we believe that his request has been acceded to.—Englishman, Feb. 2.

Gya.—Merit rewarded.—A very interesting ceremony took place at Gya on the 13th of the present month, Nowringhee Lill, 1st Grade Darogah of Gya, was invested with the sword. Mr. Balfour, the officiating magistrate, in the presence of Messrs. St. Quintin and Bell, the officiating civil and sessions judge and officiating collector, and in a crowded cutcherry, presented the sword with a copy of the government order. The sword is a very handsome one, purchased in England, and sent out, we believe, by the late magistrate's brother, Mr. De Latour. It has a good inscription on the blade, which is made as much for use as show, and the sheath is of crimson velvet and gold. Nowringhee Lill was highly delighted with a sword valued at Rs 300, received under the orders of the Deputy-Governor of Bengal in open cutcherry.—Friend of India, Feb. 3.

Lahore.—Census of the City.—The Delhi Gazette of the 29th ultimo contains a tabular statement shewing the results of a census of Lahore, taken during the last year, under the orders of Major M'Gregor. We are sorry we cannot afford room for it in full, and our readers will probably be content with an abstract of the information which it presents. The number of houses in the city is 19,820, of shops 8,774, together 28,594. The number of inhabitants is reckoned at 85,305, of whom 49,791 are Mahomedans and Christians, mostly, of course, the former,—22,064 Hindoos, and only 3,450 Sikhs.—Hurkaru, Feb. 5.

MYNPOORIE, JAN. 25.—New Church.—On this day, the festival of the conversion of Saint Paul the Apostle, the foundation stone of a church, to be built at this station, was laid by the venerable the Archdeacon Deatry.—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 29.

MADRAS.

LOCAL.

THE LATE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The signals which had been arranged to announce the arrival of the Moorzuffer, having on board the Right Honourable Viscount Hardinge, a. c. m., were heard on Sunday afternoon, between one and two o'clock; and not very long afterwards a salute of nineteen guns, which was replied to by the fort, intimated that the steamer had come to anchor in our roadstead. The Moorzuffer left Calcutta on the 18th instant, and the Sandheads on the 20th. We believe she brought but a very few letters, and only one newspaper. Lord Hardinge declined landing, and the steamer left the roads about half-past six o'clock, with the same formalities as when she came to anchor. His Lordship, we understand, said he would have landed with great pleasure had he arrived on any other day, but he was unwilling to cause so much trouble on a Sunday, as his coming on shore would have occasioned.—Athenaeum, Jan. 25.

ADDRESS TO THE LATE GOVERNOR.—We take pleasure in directing the attention of our readers to the address which the East Indian community of Madras have presented to our departing governor. This address contained upwards of 1,800 signatures, and we learn that it would have been signed by a much greater number, if the movement had been more generally known.—Ibid.

DINNER TO THE LATE GOVERNOR.—On Tuesday, the 18th instant, the grand farewell entertainment given to the Marquis of Tweeddale took place in the banqueting-room.—Ibid.

MILITARY.—The 27th regt. N. I. marched from the Presidency this morning en route to Trichinopoly.

The head-quarters and 400 men of the King's Own will march into the fort on the 28th inst. and take up the guards of the 94th regt. The left wing will enter the fort on the 1st proximo, on which day the remainder of H. M.'s 94th foot will proceed en route to Cannanore. The impossibility of obtaining steamers for the conveyance of the left wing of this regiment by sea is said to be the reason why they will march across the peninsula.—Ibid. Jan. 27.

H. M.'s 94th.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the remainder of H. M.'s 94th regt. will, after all, proceed to Cannanore by sea. These hundred men embark this morning on board the Tenasserim, now in these roads; and it is expected she will make the trip, there and back, in about twenty days. The regiment was fully prepared to march when the news reached them of their going to Cannanore by sea.—Ibid. Feb. 1.

* Rs. 500 paid up.

Promotions.—In consequence of the dismissal from the service of Capt Douglas, the following alterations of rank and promotion will take place in the 40th regt. N. I. :—

Capt. J. M. Charteres, to take rank from 26th April, 1842.

— J. A. S. Coxwell ditto 26th Aug. 1844.

Lieut. P. E. L. Rickards, capt. from 24th Jan. 1845.

— J. O. Butler, to take rank from 26th April, 1842.

— R. Taylor (the late) ditto 16th July, 1842.

— W. R. Broome ditto 20th Sept. 1842.

— J. Cundy ditto 26th Aug. 1844.

— S. W. Peile ditto 24th Jan. 1845.

— T. R. Holmes ditto 27th May, 1846.

Ensign P. Clark, lieut. from 28th Nov. 1846. — Ibid. Feb. 8.

COOLIES.—No less than 268 emigrant coolies, male and female, embarked for Berbice on Tuesday, in the Morley, Capt. Hurst. It is not likely that another party can be got together during the appointed season, which terminates in March. — Ibid. Feb. 10.

THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—There are at length valid grounds for hoping that the military administration of affairs in the country of the Nizam will be reformed, the Governor-General having, it is said expressed an intention to make a great reduction in the number of the contingent. — Ibid. Feb. 12.

MOFUSSIL.

CANNANORE.—One wing of the 25th foot will leave Cannanore as soon as carriage can be procured. The remainder will follow after the right wing of the 94th arrives. We are glad to learn that the King's Own have been remarkably healthy throughout the march. When the last accounts left, there were only fifteen or sixteen men on the sick-list. — Athenaeum, Jan. 27.

— Military.—Lieut. and Brevet capt. Goad, of the artillery, arrived here on the 20th instant, and assumed command of the detachment artillery from Lieutenant McDougall, of the 43rd N.I. The head-quarters and right wing of H.M.'s 25th regt., under the command of Lieut. col. J. R. Young, of that corps, were directed to be in readiness to march en route to Madras, on the 10th proximo, and the left wing, under Lieut. col. J. J. Hollis, on the 20th proximo.

THE REGATTA.—The dailies of Monday announced, by advertisement, that the race for the cup presented by the Honourable the Governor was to come off in the evening. The notice being so very short, several yachts were obliged to "keep off," in consequence of not being able to get ready. However, a goodly number came to their moorings at the appointed hour. It was a very windy evening, and promised excellent sport to those concerned. The preparatory gun having fired, all was in readiness; the second having fired, the first-class boats started, the Ion taking the lead, and the Mischief following very closely. The second and other class boats started in their turn, and ran down to the light vessel in beautiful style. At first, the fishing-boats regularly ran away from their competitors. The breeze was too strong for the smaller sized craft; half an hour after they had started they could barely be seen on their proper course. On rounding the flag-boat No. 2, one of them, a fishing-boat—The Luxure—ran foul and tore her sails to pieces, consequently was obliged to give up the race. This was highly exciting to all but the owners. A second lost her rudder, and a third sprung her yard. The contest now lay between the Country Lass, Severn, Mischief, and the Fanny. Almost at sunset the Dawdless was seen beating in from the light-boat, and the Foam foaming round the flag-boat No. 2. The sport was now at an end, and at about ten minutes to six the booming of a gun announced that the Country Lass was the victor, the Fanny following close on with the Severn. The Sophy (Mr. Gray's) did not start, for want of "able seamen," the Mystery lay at her moorings, and the Mazagon at the Arthur Bunder. The steamer Snake, with a company of ladies and gentlemen on board, went round the course during the race.—Times, Feb. 2.

ARREST OF AN ARMED PARTY.—Yesterday fifteen Arabs and nine Rohillahs were brought down from Malligaum, under an escort of one jemadar, one havildar, one naique, one lance naique, and a party of sepoy, of the 28th regiment, N.I., where they were taken while, as they averred, on their way to join the Nizam's army. They were all armed, and well supplied with ammunition. Their matchlocks on being examined, were found to be loaded with ball.—Ibid.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—The meeting of the Geographical Society which took place on Thursday evening was more numerously attended than ordinary, and the business before it was of very considerable interest.—Ibid, Feb. 5.

THE CAMBRIAN.—H.M.'s frigate Cambrian, 36 guns, bearing the broad pendant of Commodore Plumridge, came into harbour on Wednesday evening. The Cambrian, it will be remembered, was the ship which brought out Lord Ellenborough to India. Commodore Plumridge takes the place as second in command in these seas, in room of Commodore Sir Harry Blackwood, now on his return home with the Fox from Madras. The Cambrian comes direct from England. From St. Helen's to Bombay was run in ninety-nine days—an excellent voyage at this season. She no where touched the land.—Ibid.

BALL.—The first reunion of the season took place at the residence of Aga Mahomed Jaffer, Esq., on the evening of Tuesday last. Dancing was kept up till an early hour. The party was a very numerous one, and all the arrangements were most excellent. The evening was cool, and the dancers seemed in the mood for hearty enjoyment.—Ibid.

THE GOVERNOR'S BALL.—The Honourable the Governor, gave a ball and supper last night at Parell—the last, we presume, for the season.—Ibid.

THE REGATTA AGAIN.—We understand the stewards of the Bombay Yacht Club determined at a meeting held yesterday, that the race for the cup presented by the honourable the Governor should be run over again, the winner at the last regatta having forfeited all claim to the prize in consequence of having fouled.—Ibid.

THE WEATHER.—The past week has supplied us with some of the most unpleasantly cold days and nights we have experienced since February, 1847. On Sunday afternoon it was quite tempestuous, the wind driving the dust furiously before it: the thermometer fell to 60 deg., and in the course of the night sunk as low as 58 deg., at which it continued till nearly ten o'clock in a very airy bungalow: in the marine lines, where the range is always singularly great, it sunk to 55 deg. The natives looked quite miserable, and the Europeans themselves in exposed dwelling-places not over and above comfortable, in a state of matters such as this. With the new moon a change came over the spirit of the air. Monday afternoon became comparatively mild: the thermometer during the day rose to 75 deg., and sunk overnight no lower than 65 deg. Both land and sea breezes were during this period well to north, or almost northerly. Yesterday the land wind continued to blow high till somewhat past noon, when it suddenly shifted round to westerly and by south, an unusual direction for this season of the year—blowing fresh, with a considerable sea, the air feeling mild and genial. The barometer, which generally attains its greatest elevation about this season, stood yesterday forenoon 30.150 uncorrected, sixty feet above the level of the sea—temperature 75 deg. But for this we might almost have looked for showers, so threatening and showery seemed the sky.—Ibid. Feb. 9.

FIRE.—A fire occurred in the Marine Lines in Major Morris's compound on the evening of Monday last, but fortunately, from the vigilance of the authorities and the speedy appearance of an engine, the mischief done was not extensive.—Ibid.

THE NERBUDDA.—The launch of the Nerbudda brig of war, built here for her Majesty's service, came off on the 6th instant. This vessel is one of the two destined for the same purpose. Her dimensions are 119 feet in length, and 33 feet in breadth, and her burthen is estimated at 420 tons. The governor and staff, with the members of council and the élite of our society, graced the vessel with their presence. Lady Yardly performed the ceremony of naming her.—Ibid.

LAUNCH.—The B. S. N. Co.'s steamer, George Russell Clerk, was on Monday last launched from the Mazagon Dock. A saloon was fitted up for the accommodation of visitors. The steamer was tastefully decorated, and at the appointed hour G. Graham, Esq., performed the ceremony of breaking a bottle on her head, and naming her.—Ibid.

THE METEOR.—The H. C. steamer Meteor, one of the Indus river boats, has just had her repairs completed: she has been cut and lengthened fifteen feet, and was yesterday removed from the cradle on which these operations have been performed.—Ibid.

THE LATE CAPTAIN W. SIMPSON.—A correspondent, in intimating the demise of Captain William Simpson, of the 28th Bombay Native Infantry, calls attention to the general regret experienced throughout the army for the loss of an officer so popular and so generally well known. Captain Simpson was son of the late marine storekeeper, Mr. G. Simpson, of Ogil, in Forfarshire, Scotland. His mother was killed by the running away of her carriage horses in 1840, his father by a fall from horseback in 1844. He served in Scinde during the campaign of 1843, and was known throughout the army, from his daring exploits in the hunting-field, and his frank kind-hearted generosity of disposition, by the soubriquet of "the squire." The most conspicuous characteristic of disposition was an utter disregard of self, and kindness and consideration towards others. He was in 1848 married to the eldest daughter of the late most able and estimable Mr. W. Bruce, Accountant-General. Up to the time of his obtaining sick certificate to the Neilgherry Hills he was Bheel agent and a magistrate of the zillah of Ahmednuggar.—Ibid. Feb. 13.

COMMITTEE ON NATIVE LANGUAGES.—A permanent committee of examination on Native languages has been appointed, consisting of Mr. C. J. Erskine, the Rev. Dr. Stevenson, and Lieut. Walker, Adjutant Marine Battalion.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

POONA.—We learn from Poona that a newspaper is to be started without delay at the old Mahratta capital.—Times, Feb. 12.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

LONDON,

MONDAY, March 27, 1848.

VISCOUNT HARDINGE has arrived in his native country after a sojourn in the East brief in its duration but important in its results. His return will be hailed with the hearty congratulations of his countrymen, who one and all will rejoice to render honour to a statesman and a warrior whose measures have secured the peace of India, and whose zeal and devotedness are not more eminent than his modesty. The Court of Directors, whom he has faithfully served, propose to celebrate his Lordship's arrival by a dinner, on the 5th of April, at which a very numerous, select, and distinguished assemblage of guests will join in welcoming the honoured visitor whose deeds the festive meeting is designed to commemorate. We trust that Lord HARDINGE has not returned among us to pass the remainder of his days in idleness. Though time may have shed its honours upon his head, his mind is but matured by age, and in application and habits of business he is a model for younger men. It can scarcely, therefore, be doubted that some fitting post will be found for the exercise of those talents which he has already displayed with so much credit to himself and so much advantage to his country.

THE obituary of our present number records the death of Lieutenant-Colonel BARNEWALL, an event which will excite poignant regret throughout a very wide circle. The deceased officer entered the Bombay army in 1801, and remained an actual member of it for more than thirty years, his retirement taking effect from June, 1833. During the intervening period he was engaged in many important and arduous duties, both military and civil, and in every instance he acquitted himself in such a manner as to command the approbation of his local superiors as well as of the home authorities, whose favourable opinion of him was on several occasions recorded. So highly were his services appreciated by the Court of Directors, that when it was deemed expedient to prohibit the employment of military officers in a particular line of duty, Colonel BARNEWALL was specially excepted.

He was examined, in 1832, before the Committee of the House of Commons, then sitting on Indian affairs, and his evidence was marked by that sound good sense which so eminently distinguished him.

Possessing an excellent practical judgment, great steadiness of application, and a happy aptitude for business, he was also endowed with one of the kindest of hearts. The circle of his friends comprehended all who knew him; and the recollections of his virtues will be cherished widely, affectionately, and long.

WE have hitherto abstained from making any remarks upon the case of Chief Justice HULME, who was removed from the judicial seat by the Governor of Hong Kong, upon charges which appeared to us, and we believe to all men, frivolous and ridiculous. We have not even adverted to the case in any way, because we felt it to be better to leave to time and the Colonial Office the task of either refuting or confirming the charges, and placing the Chief Justice in his rightful position, whatever that might be. In the China Mail of the 26th January, we find the following passage:—

"Chief Justice Hulme embarks for England to-morrow in the Pekin. We do not now require to record our opinion of the oppression of which he has been made the victim, or the high estimation he is held in by this community as a judge and as a member of society. We trust at no distant period to see his return to the Bench, the integrity and independence of which he has so nobly sustained."

The anticipated opportunity of welcoming the return of the Chief Justice will shortly be enjoyed. He proceeds to resume his former duties, freed, we need scarcely say, from any imputation on his character. While this result is highly creditable to the object of unjust accusation, the promptitude with which it has been attained is not less so to the Colonial Department.

A SHORT time since we had occasion to advert to an extraordinary case, in which a man having beaten an old woman to death was brought to trial for the offence in the Supreme Court of Bombay. The Judge charged that the circumstances warranted a conviction for murder: the jury took a different view, and returned a verdict of manslaughter; whereupon the judge, notwithstanding his previously avowed impression, sentenced the prisoner to almost the lightest punishment which it was in his power to inflict. When we brought this case to notice, together with the remarks which appeared on it in an excellent local paper (the Bombay Times), we little thought that within a few weeks an instance in which the administration of justice should be distorted in a similar way, though by a different agency, would occur in our own country. We need scarcely explain that we allude to the case of ANNETTE MEYERS, whose unintelligible escape from the punishment awarded by the law to murder has excited the most astounding feeling of wonder in the minds of all but those who raised on her behalf the howl that led to it. We entertain the most entire contempt for the drivellings of the canting crew who overflow with pity for murderers, while they have none for the victims of murder, nor any regard for the safety of society; but we may discard all present consideration of their follies. If the punishment of death is to be abolished, let the abolition be effected openly and at once—not by a side-wind, not covertly, not by letting the punishment drop out of use, not by dispensing with it in such flagrant cases that it can never again be inflicted with any appearance of decency or consistency. If it is to be retained, it should be inflicted on all whose crimes merit it, without partiality, and without regard to any consideration but the guilt or innocence of the parties who incur the fearful penalty.

We hesitate not to say, that if ever there was a case in which the sentence of death should have been carried into execution, that of ANNETTE MEYERS was such a case. The murder was marked by even an unusual degree of premeditation. It was not the case of a person suddenly and greatly provoked snatching up a deadly weapon and using it. The murderess cherished her guilty design for several days; she prepared with extraordinary deliberation for its execution; she had no weapon, but set about procuring one with as much coolness as she would have shewn in purchasing any article of ordinary use, and to lull any suspicion in the vendor of the instrument with which she intended to effect her fell purpose, invented and narrated to him a plausible string of falsehoods. At a convenient time she walked calmly to the spot chosen as the scene of her crime, having previously avowed her intention of committing it. Now, we ask what is there in all this to justify a call for mercy? It is to no purpose to say that she had received provocation. This is almost always the case. Neither men nor women ordinarily murder from sheer bloodthirstiness; there is almost always a motive, and it is usually either the desire of gain or the desire of revenge. The latter, it seems, if not positively laudable, is at least to be treated with tenderness, and murderers instigated by revenge are entitled to escape punishment. We say nothing as to the origin and history of the provocation which is alleged in this instance to be sufficient to extenuate the guilt of deliberate murder; we ask not how far the murderess had herself to blame for it; we inquire not whether the society of such persons as the murdered soldier is that which a well-conducted young female would seek, nor whether, having thrown herself in the way of a low profligate, the culprit ought not to be held accountable for some share, and no small one, of the consequences which followed. These points we pass over, but we must protest, in the name of society, and for the sake of its peace and security, against the doctrine that murder is innocent if the motive be a thirst for revenge. It is useless to say that the murdered man in this case was a scoundrel. We are not disposed to deny it, but if every man who is a scoundrel in his dealings with women may be shot with impunity, the sacrifice of life upon this ground is likely to be very large. Nor will it be confined to persons in the humble station of the victim in the case under notice. If the principle be sanctioned, many a man who walks up and down St. James's-street with a feeling of the most perfect security had need to encase himself in bullet-proof armour before he venture on such an exercise.

In truth, the extension of mercy in this case is as monstrous as it is unaccountable; and the reasons by which it is defended are as monstrous as the act. It has called forth universal indignation, and rumour, as of course it must, has been busy in assigning motives for it. It seems clear, indeed, that there must have been some extraordinary motive for so extraordinary a proceeding, and it seems equally clear that murder can never again in this country be visited with the punishment of death. An obscure servant girl, the paramour of a common soldier, has effected that for which so many muddle-headed philosophers, from BECCARIA downward, have maundered in vain.

Since the above was written we have seen the report of a conversation which took place in the House of Commons on Friday evening, between Mr. BRIGHT and Sir GEORGE GREY, from which it would appear that, notwithstanding what has occurred, it is really the intention of Government to carry out the law in the case of a murder committed in one of the northern counties. There must be some mistake in this—the thing is impossible. We know nothing of the circumstances of the murder referred to by Mr. BRIGHT, but we will venture to affirm that the crime was not marked by a greater degree of premeditation than was that of ANNETTE MEYERS. We doubt if it were characterized by as much; but however that may be, we say that if, after the astounding exercise of clemency in her case, the punishment of death be ever inflicted again in this country, the sufferer may be considered as murdered.

THE present condition of European politics must plead our excuse for again diverging from our more peculiar path, to consider for a moment the causes of the disturbances that have lately been prevalent in this country. Of course, no one would attach any importance to these trifling émeutes, but as by their frequency they may become annoying, it will scarcely be time ill employed to consider whence they arise. That they do not originate with the people themselves, will we think, be readily admitted, and as readily may it be allowed that they are engendered by a set of roaming demagogues as ignorant as they are impudent, and as cowardly as they are ignorant. The Wise Man tells us there is nothing new under the sun. Behold the portrait of these sedition-mongers painted by a master hand almost two thousand years ago. "Nam semper in civitate," says the historian of CATILINE's conspiracy, when describing the actors in that movement,—"Nam semper in civitate, quibus opes nullæ sunt, bonis invident, malos extollunt, vetera odere, nova exoptant, odio suarum rerum mutari omnia student, turbā atque seditionibus sine curā aluntur, quoniam egestas facillè habetur sine damno." What a striking picture is this! how exact in every particular! The poverty of these men; their envying of the good and exalting of the bad; their dislike of old forms and institutions, and eager desire for a new order of things; their nurture in tumult and sedition; their total disregard of the consequences of their incitements to riot, since no change, however bad, can render their position lower or worse than it already is,—in all these particulars how correct the delineation of the modern "enemies to peace!" Who that has witnessed the recent convulsions on the Continent, that has seen how many thrones have tottered, while one, at least, has fallen to the ground; who that has beheld the slightest movements in various parts of this land, and has contemplated the excitement prevalent in all the nations of Europe, will hesitate to affirm that men of the class described by SALLUST still live—still walk the earth—still set order and propriety at defiance, and exasperate the foolish against all government and restraint? The whole business of these pests of society seems to be to create confusion and strife. To this end they address themselves more peculiarly to the uneducated, the unfortunate, the criminal, and the idle; in a word, to all who are likely to be discontented with their lot. Vagabonds are at the same time their associates and their tools. By specious promises and overwrought appeals of quasi eloquence they rouse the worst passions of the vile to the highest pitch of frenzied madness, and then sneaking away, leave the tumultuous assembly to wreak their vengeance for fancied wrongs, on those who chance to be superior to themselves. Some hold that everybody is born with a particular mission. The mission of these men seems to be to do as much dirty work, and cause as much mischief as their rude, malignant; petty minds can suggest. They cannot say because they are ever on the search for it. Sedition and tumult are the mainsprings of their actions. They seek disturbance with avidity, nor leave it till they are gorged with the foul feast. They dabble in the sinks and sewers of society, and must not complain if men treat them like the filthy objects of their powers of disturbance. How such creatures contrive to live might excite some wonder, were it not known that their pestiferous tongues are in the market to be hired by those who are foolish enough to risk a cause to their advocacy; that they are ever ready to blast that which is good, blacken that which is pure, and give their damning support to that which is foul. It is notorious that their assistance is seldom given but to causes with which honest men would scorn to be associated; and even then they rarely labour except, as old TRAPBOIS says, "for a consideration." It is well known that their services are generally paid for, but they pass themselves off notwithstanding as patriots and philanthropists of the first water, and no doubt consider it a mere matter of business to resort to the hideous blasphemy of solemnly appealing to the Deity in proof of their purity, disinterestedness, and high-principled morality. Universal philanthropy, equality, and a spurious sympathy with the poorest among the poor, and the lowest among the low, are chief points with them. But they always evince a marked repugnance to bring into practice these doctrines, when, by a strange freak of fortune, they become possessed of any thing valuable. Equality and fraternity afford good themes on which to exercise a virulent tongue; but attempt to reduce these theories to practice in the persons of their advocates, and the case is altered: in truth, fraternity and equality will never be popular but with those who have every thing to gain and nothing to lose by the adoption of these principles.

"Rebellion came in my way, and I found it,"

Another prominent characteristic of these men is their unsurpassable cowardice. While there is nothing to fear they are bold as heroes. Ready to play HERCULES or AGAMEMNON when there is no enemy present, their courage rapidly evaporates at the first appearance of danger, and they resume with haste their proper character of THESITES. An instance of this we have lately seen. A man, who all his life has been striving to obtain notoriety, no matter how, nor of what character the acquisition might be,—who has sought it as an itinerant musician, an enslaver of female hearts, and a betrayer of their confidence,—so, at least, he represented himself,—a doer out of charity soup, and a candidate for the suffrages of a metropolitan constituency, whose favour he sought to secure by giving himself out as the relative of a once popular nobleman,—this man assayed, with his usual modesty, to exercise the functions of a mayor, boroughreeve, or high bailiff, and summoned a public meeting in a central thoroughfare of a great city. Finding, however, the meditated gathering noticed by authority, he deemed it most prudent to keep his valuable person out of the affray, and contented himself by circulating handbills exhorting the people to behave quietly, and commit no breach of the law:—a piece of advice given, perhaps, in the spirit of the man whose pocket had been picked, and who, addressing the crowd by whom the thief had been seized, begged them not to harm the delinquent, and especially not to duck him in the adjoining horsepond,—an injunction which the mob obeyed by repeatedly immersing the unhappy wight in the slimy waters till he was well nigh suffocated. In the present case the crowd met—for what purpose no one, not even themselves, could say; but there they were—and having nothing to do, they fulfilled the adage respecting idle people by getting into mischief; being no doubt incited thereto by their summoner's request that they would not commit any violence. The person who convened this precious assemblage is not likely again, we apprehend, to set up for a seat in Parliament. Should he, however, do so, we trust the constituency which he may canvass will remember that with him originated a disturbance of three or four days' duration, which was the means of stopping the business of a considerable number of tradesmen during its continuance.

Though, in some respects, these factious demagogues are capable of giving pain to well-principled people, they are not devoid of points irresistibly comic: the contrast between their original nothingness, and subsequent self-imposed, or self-sought dignity, is eminently ludicrous. It is, moreover, astonishing to find how marked a change is effected by their success in pushing themselves into positions where they have no right to be, and especially when they happen, as is not altogether uncommon in these days, to get into Parliament. HUNT, the blacking-maker, was, we think, the first of the fraternity who achieved a seat in the House of Commons. He however had, at least, the merit of maintaining with some consistency the course of blackguardism by which he had risen to notoriety. The enlightened people of Preston sent him to the Legislature as a reward and encouragement of the perseverance which he had displayed in performing the dirtiest work of a demagogue, and he did not discredit their sagacity. They sent him to Westminster, commanding him to express the will of the sovereign mob, and he did their bidding. He was neither soothed nor frightened into any thing like an approach to good manners, but laid the blacking on as thickly within the walls of Parliament as he had previously applied it without doors. One

HUNT was forced into an unreformed Parliament; the return of many more was looked for when reform should have widened the constituencies; and the expectation so far has not been entirely disappointed. The good example set by Preston in the elder time has been followed by several boroughs under the new state of things. The doctrine of the French Provisional Government, that education and respectability are rather disqualifying circumstances in a candidate for the honour of representing the sovereign masses was anticipated among us. We have seen the city of Westminster, the residence of the Sovereign, and the seat of imperial Legislation, narrowly escape being represented by a wandering ballad-singer; while one large constituency is actually represented by a Deistical preacher, another by a retail haberdasher, and a third by an ex-journeyman cheesemonger. Such instances prove that for this class of men to obtain seats in Parliament is comparatively easy—and thus their purpose is served; but what of those who send them? They are doomed indeed to miserable disappointment. The courtly air of the Palace of Westminster is fatal to the patriotism which flourished in rank luxuriance under the fetid blasts of ten thousand gin-inspired mouths, shouting plaudits hoarse and long. The "wooden gods" of the mob, once in Parliament, are silent, or if they open their lips, it is but to breathe in blandest accents commonplaces which might drop from the tongues of club dandies without exciting any surprise. St. Stephen's hothouse suits them not; there they are innoxious. In the open air, or under any roof but that of Parliament, they can have their swing, and they take it. They can denounce all who are above them in fortune and station—a large number; libel all who are above them in character—a much larger number, and no vision of the Speaker's wig, no recollection of the Serjeant-at-Arms and the martyred SMITH O'BRIEN, interposes to check them. They can revel in calumny and luxuriate in lies without fear of consequences. In most instances they feel absolutely safe. If in any extraordinary case personal danger be apprehended, they can keep away from a meeting they have promised to attend, or, having made their appearance, can slip out at the back door.

Such are some of the characteristic marks of these turbulent spirits. If there were the slightest sincerity in their boasted patriotism and purity, if they were actuated in the smallest degree by the exalted motives to which they so loudly and pertinaciously lay claim, they should have been free from our rebuke, for we respect honesty even when mistaken; but when we see the hollowness of their pretensions, when we mark in their characters the entire absence of any dignifying or redeeming quality of heart or mind, when we behold the mischievous results that have arisen from their revolutionary preaching, and look forward to the still greater evils that may arise should they be suffered to continue in their foul course, unbranded by the press, and unscathed by the law, we feel it a duty to express the abhorrence which all good men entertain both for them and their works; and we address each and all of them in the words of LEAR.

"Caitiff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming Hath practis'd on man's life!"

We have lately felt the annoyance which these men have the power to create, and we fear that they have grown bold by the apparent apathy of the Government. Let but the authorities shew a determination to put down the disgraceful nuisance, and we will engage that these miscreants will soon become as smooth and creamy as are their leaders in the House of Commons. Some years since it was the fashion for blackguards, desirous of notoriety, to shoot at the Queen. The punishment of flogging was denounced against the offence, and it ceased. We think the experiment worth trying in the case which we have been considering. But we must stipulate that the punishment extend to the leaders as well as the followers. The former must not go scot free, whilst the famished men and houseless boys whom they have made their tools, receive punishment. With a quotation from an old writer, we will close our observations on this subject. The passage was written with reference to a class of men very different from that to which we now apply them, but its applicability to the present case is nevertheless very obvious and striking:—"Whosoever knoweth them, will little regard the froth of their swelling words of pride and scorn, seeing when they have done vaunting, they have done their best, and that which remaineth is little worth; their allegations being, for the most part, nothing but falsifications; their reasons, sophisms; their reports, slanders and wicked calumniations; their threats, the venting of their malice, and pouring out of their impotent desires; their predictions only manifesting what they wished might be, but no way shewing what shall be."

DINNER TO LORD FALKLAND.

On the 11th inst. the Directors of the East-India Company entertained Viscount Falkland at dinner at the London Tavern.

The CHAIRMAN of the East-India Company presided. Among the company were Viscount Falkland, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis of Abercorn, Earl Fortescue, the Earl of Auckland, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, W. Wigram, Esq., Lord Langdale, the Vice-Chancellor of England, the Lord Chief Baron, the Attorney-General, Capt. Gough, C. Mills, Esq., the Lord Mayor, the Deputy-Chairman of the Hon. East-India Company, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Earl Granville, the Earl of Strarford, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, Lord Elphinstone, J. Loch, Esq., Lord Campbell, Sir G. Arthur, Sir R. Inglis, Sir T. Macmahon, G. Lyall, Esq., Dr. Lushington, Sir J. Macdonald, Sir J. Campbell, Sir H. Willock, Major Oliphant, J. C. Melvill, Esq., E. Thornton, Esq., &c. &c. The rest of the company consisted of the different members of the Court, and others connected with Indian affairs.

After the usual toasts,

The CHAIRMAN rose and said, they were assembled on that occasion to compliment the noble Lord on his right, who had been appointed, with the approbation of her Majesty, to the highly important situation of Governor of Bombay. The presidency of Bombay was second only to the Supreme Government of India. It was a sort of advanced post on our western frontier, and the line of communication between the mother-country and India. There was a large army which deserved the noble Lord's utmost care; and he would have to govern millions of industrious, attached native fellow-subjects, who required only intelligence to direct and confidence to lead them. (Cheers.) He was quite satisfied the noble Lord would shew every devotion to their interests; that he would conciliate their feelings, and have regard even to their prejudices and errors. (Cheers.) He would find them loyal and attached, and their services would amply repay his confidence. Highly important and responsible as was this public trust, the Court of Directors had appointed the noble Lord, with the utmost confidence that he would fulfil its duties and obligations with zeal, ability, and success. (Cheers.)

VISCOUNT FALKLAND said, were he for one moment to assume that the utmost exertion of any poor ability he might possess would insure success in the performance of that task he had undertaken, he might well be accused of arrogance and presumption; on the other hand, he should do great injustice to his own feelings did he attempt to disguise the deep anxiety under which he laboured, and the amount of responsibility which the important duties about to devolve upon him necessarily entailed. But while he perfectly recognized, and was deeply impressed by the heavy responsibility he had incurred, he was cheered by the knowledge of the very important and valuable assistance he should derive from men of high character, standing, education, and long experience in India, who were thoroughly acquainted with the various and complicated interests of our extended Eastern empire. He thanked them for the honour he should enjoy in being numbered among the executive officers of a Company, towards the wonderful power and prosperity of which so many of the greatest warriors and statesmen of the present age had contributed, either as having been enrolled amongst its servants or as auxiliaries to them. (Cheers.) The object of his zealous and unceasing efforts would be not to dishonour such a service in the position to which it was his good fortune to have been raised; and if hereafter it should be his happy lot to be ranked among those laborious, industrious, and painstaking public functionaries to whom British India owed so much, his proudest aspirations would be satisfied, and his reward secured. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN then proposed Her Majesty's Ministers, which was acknowledged by Lord Lansdowne, who proposed the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN begged to offer his acknowledgments and those of his colleagues for the compliments which the noble Marquis had been pleased to pay them. He trusted their exertions might still be applied to effect the good government of India, and retain the confidence of Her Majesty's Government. (Cheers.) He regretted the absence upon this occasion of the President of the Board of Control. He had hoped he should have had another opportunity, before laying down his office, of expressing the sense he felt of his kindness, attention, and cordial co-operation with the Court of Directors. He begged to propose "The health of Sir J. C. Hobhouse, President of the Board of Control." (Cheers.)

Mr. C. LEWIS briefly acknowledged the compliment.

The next toasts were the healths of Lord Auckland and the Duke of Wellington.

VISCOUNT FALKLAND proposed "The army of India," amidst loud cheers.

Sir G. POLLOCK, in acknowledging the compliment, said the services he had rendered were very small. It had been his great good fortune to be appointed to a command where the troops were determined to advance, and he could not help himself. (A laugh.)

The health of the Lord Mayor was then given, and responded to by that officer; the health of Lord Dalhousie, and lastly the civil service, acknowledged by Mr. Shank.

DEBATES AT THE EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Special General Court of Proprietors of East-India Stock was held on Wednesday, the 8th inst., for the purpose of taking into consideration the case of the late ex-Rajah of Sattera. The requisition calling the Court, and the adjunct resolutions (ten in number), will be found in an advertisement at page 154. Their length precludes their repetition in this place. The resolution that was moved will be found in its proper place in the debate.

The chair was taken at twelve o'clock, and the minutes of the last Court having been read,—

RETURNS.

The CHAIRMAN (Henry St. George Tucker, Esq.) said: I have the honour to inform the Court that certain returns to Parliamentary orders are laid on the table.

The titles of these papers having been read,—

was proceeded with.

The CHAIRMAN said: I have the honour to inform the Court that it has been specially summoned at the request of nine proprietors, which requisition will not be read.

[For the requisition and resolutions, see page 154].

Mr. HUMZ said it fell to his lot, as on a former occasion, to open the proceedings of that Court. The last time they met to consider that question they had been precluded from proceeding to a ballot by the Chairman moving the adjournment. He was much grieved at such a result, and though he did not doubt the Directors had sufficient grounds for what they did on that occasion, he put it to them whether it were not injustice to the late Rajah to refuse to take a ballot on this important question. (Hear.) Where the Legislature had given them the option of taking the opinion of proprietors by a ballot, it was in his opinion very objectionable to put it out of the power of the proprietors of availing themselves of the privileges which Parliament had given them. (Hear.) He was surprised that the Directors had ventured to refuse that appeal to justice, and under these circumstances it had been thought most advisable to summon another Court, in order to obtain a free judgment on the case. The question was of vital importance to the interests of the Company. The laws had been violated in the Rajah's case, and he did not believe there was one man in that Court who could honestly say he believed the Rajah guilty. (Hear.) The charges at first made against the Rajah had, in many instances, been proved utterly false; and with the additional evidence that had been collected, he thought a fresh inquiry was necessary to the vindication of the Rajah and the honour of the British nation. He did not complain of the course which the Chairman had pursued on the last session of discussing that question. He (the Chairman) had, no doubt, acted in conformity with what he deemed to be his duty as Chairman, but he did think the Court of Directors were not considerate in declining to grant the inquiry prayed for. As at the last Court, the last of the resolutions would be the only one moved this day, the others being, as it were, but a preamble. It had been shown that, from first to last, the Rajah had not been heard in answer to the accusations made against him, and he (Mr. Hume) contended that no man ought to be considered guilty who had not an opportunity of disproving the offences laid to his charge. (Hear.) The Government of Bombay and the Supreme Government had at first shrunk from deposing the Rajah, unless the evidence on which his accusations rested were given to him, and he were allowed an opportunity of disproving it. This was at first promised, but afterwards refused; on what grounds he knew not; but he was ashamed to think any Englishmen could so far forget the first principles of justice. (Hear.) Though the Rajah might have been guilty of all the crimes alleged against him, yet he ought to have had a fair trial, and have been permitted to speak in his own defence. (Hear, hear.) Sir Robert Grant was strongly of opinion that the Rajah should be heard, and he made acquainted with the fresh evidence adduced against him. This had not been done; and why, then, had not the Court called on the Bombay Government for some explanation on this point. (Hear.) The opinion of Sir Robert Grant was confirmed and adopted by the Governor-General in a minute of September, 1838. The evidence to be submitted to the Rajah was prepared by the Commission; but it was never given to him, notwithstanding the opinions of the Governor of Bombay and the Governor-General, to the effect that the Rajah should be furnished with a copy of it. Why was no notice taken of this? Such conduct was unworthy of Englishmen, and would go far to stamp the Company in the eyes of the natives of India as unworthy of the trust reposed in them. (Hear.) Was it not the duty of the Court to inquire why the minute of Sir Robert Grant had not been acted on? Most decidedly it was. Had Sir Robert Grant lived, he (Mr. Hume) did not think he would have suffered the Rajah to be deposed without being at least heard in his defence. Why, then, did not the Court insist on such a course of conduct being pursued? They had failed to do their duty: they had not done that which by law they were bound to do. (Hear.) Under Warren Hastings, and some other Governors-General, it was asserted that cases of injustice were of frequent occurrence in India, and were con- sidered at by the Court of Directors. To remedy this, the Court of Proprietors was established as a kind of check, and it was the peculiar province of the proprietors to take notice of such cases as this of the Rajah of Sattara. (Hear.) The character of England was involved in the question, and they could not, with safety to their empire in India, suffer such an act of injustice to pass by unnoticed. Why did not the Court of Directors demand the reason for withholding from the Rajah the minutes of evidence taken against him? The Bombay Government, actuated by motives which he could not understand, thought fit to disregard the commands of the Court of Directors and the minutes of the Governor-General. Now he wished to know what those secret motives were. Could any one explain the reason why the evidence taken against the Rajah had not been given to that unfortunate man in accordance with the expressed commands of Lord Auckland? Let him ask any hon. proprietor, placed in a situation similar to that of the Rajah of Sattara, if he would be satisfied to be removed and consigned to prison without being heard in his own defence? Would he not consider himself the victim of gross injustice? Here the positive orders of the Governor-General,—not those of the Bombay Government, but the orders of the Governor-General, to the effect that the evidence should be laid before the Rajah, and an opportunity given him of replying to the charges alleged against him,—were never carried into effect. Was there ever such gross injustice? Until he was able to obtain the votes of the proprietary body at large, he would not believe that corporation was so dishonest as to sanction the proceedings in this case. (Hear, hear.) For this reason he had wished to have taken a ballot on the last occasion, but having then failed, he intended to ask for it again to-day, that they might know the opinion of the general body of proprietors. To the great body of proprietors, and to the country at large, he appealed for justice to the deceased Rajah. Such a tissue of falsehood as was disclosed in this case had never been seen before, and as long as he was able he would bring the Rajah's cause before the public, till the first decisions were overturned, and justice were at length done. (Hear, hear.) The orders of the Court of Directors had been spurned by the Bombay Government,—kicked, cuffed, and laughed at. (Hear.) Was the position of the Court, he asked, an enviable one? The official character of the Court of Directors had been damaged by not calling on the Bombay Government for an explanation of their conduct. The hon. proprietor then proceeded to argue that the deposition of the Rajah was illegal, for the Statute 33 Geo. 3, cap. 52, secs. 42 and 43, ordained that it should not be lawful for the Governor-General in Council to declare war, make hostilities, or enter into treaty, without the express commands of the home authorities, excepting in cases of sudden emergency, &c. He therefore thought that, as there was no emergency in this case, the deposition of the Rajah of Sattara, without the previous sanction of the Court of Directors and the Board of Control, was illegal, and contrary to the statute law. There was no act of the Rajah to justify such a proceeding, and when he considered how the unfortunate man had been deposed from his throne,—not to speak of the confiscation of his private property,—cast into prison, refused an opportunity of vindicating his character, denied a copy of the evidence, the secret reason for which last act he should like to know,—when, he said, he considered all these circumstances, he could not but exclaim, if such things are done to a great man, what must be the condition of a poor one! (Hear, hear.) Without further detaining them he should move,—

"That this Court, in of opinion that the deposal of the Rajah of Sattara, by Sir James Carnac, without furnishing him with a copy of the evidence taken in secret against him, and thereby withholding from him the means of making a defence, and without the previous consent and authority of the Court of Directors, or the Secret Committee of that Court, and of the Board of Control, was unjust, premature, and contrary to law; and therefore the guilt or innocence of the late Rajah of Sattara, and the conduct of the Bombay Government in these transactions, ought to be made the subject of a public and impartial inquiry, alike for the protection of the princes of India in alliance with the East-India Company from the perpetration of similar wrongs, for the satisfaction of the public of justice, and for the vindication of the honour of the British name, and the security of the British empire in the East."

He would close his remarks by repeating that there was no sudden emergency nor just cause for the deposition of the Rajah, and that the natives of India would regard with great anxiety the conduct of Government in the case. (Hear, hear.) The question was, whether or not an opportunity should now be given of vindicating the name of the Rajah from those charges which had been alleged against him. He (the Rajah) had been refused such an opportunity while living, an opportunity which was granted to the meanest criminal in the country, and would the Court sanction a proceeding by which the crimes laid to the Rajah's charge could not be investigated? (Cheers.)

The motion having been read by the clerk,

Mr. HUME again rose, and said, I beg to hand in this demand for a ballot, as part of my speech.

The CHAIRMAN.—I cannot receive it, as I intend presently to move the question of adjournment.

Mr. HUME said that if the demand for a ballot were refused on that ground, it was always in the power of the Chairman to refuse a decision by that mode. However, he should place the paper on the table.

The honourable proprietor then laid the paper, of which the following is a copy, on the table:—

"We, the undersigned proprietors of East-India Stock, duly qualified by Law, and present in Court, do request that the Court of Directors will appoint a ballot, according to cap. viii. sec. 1 of the By-Laws, to determine the question this day brought before the general Court, relative to the case of the late Rajah of Sattara.

"March 8th, 1848."

Mr. Serjeant GABLES, in seconding the motion, said it was the greatest imposition in the world to say the proprietors could have a decision by ballot if the course pursued by the Chairman was to have the power of preventing them doing so. It was a stratagem, a trick, and if they thought that moving the adjournment would prevent a ballot, they were mistaken. (Hear.) Their by-law was bad; it was contrary to the law of the land, and would not stand. (Hear.) If such a proceeding was allowed, it would be the means of preventing many proprietors from availing themselves of their votes, and make the person who held four votes equal to him who held but one. (Hear, hear.) The time was come for a reform in such things; let the proprietors prove themselves men, or their privileges would be annihilated. The Chairman, however unwilling, was obliged to be a partisan, under the circumstances, and it was quite a farce to attempt bringing any question before that Court. He, and he was sure every other proprietor, entertained the highest respect for the Chairman, but he was surprised how any man, with a proper sense of justice, could attempt to put down this discussion. There was no doubt the proprietors would be against the Directors' interpretation of the law in this case, and he told them that their refusal of a ballot was illegal, and could not be sustained. (Cheers.)

Mr. SULLIVAN said the bye-law ordained that if at any general Court nine of the members present, duly qualified to vote, should demand a ballot for determining any question, except for adjournment, or the previous question, or an amendment, such question should be put by ballot, and not otherwise. The present question was not any of the excepted ones, and therefore the Chairman was not legally justified in refusing the demand that had been made for a ballot. (Hear, hear.) But, setting aside for a moment the legal part of the question, how could the Directors, in common justice, refuse the appeal to the great body of their constituency? Did not the honor of the British Government demand further inquiry in the case? Let them consider the causes whence the proceedings against the Rajah originated. The Rajah had some dispute with the Bombay Government respecting certain jagheers, and finding them loath to act fairly by him, appealed, as he had a perfect right to do, to the Court of Directors. (Hear.) The Bombay Government, disliking this appeal, then got up a counter charge against the Rajah, of conspiring against our power in India. This was the origin of the quarrel; and the question now was, was the British Government justified in deposing a prince in friendly alliance with us, who had in no instance violated the mutual treaty? (Hear, hear.) They stripped the Rajah of his dominion, and refused to put him in possession of the evidence against him, on the ground that it was taken in secret, though that evidence they had afterwards published in justification of their own conduct. (Hear, hear.) The chief argument on the other side had been that the authorities in India and here had given their opinions against the Rajah, and therefore the case could not be reconsidered, notwithstanding that every day the evidence against that injured man was breaking down, and the charges against, on being sifted, were found to be groundless. (Hear, hear.) The Rajah had been condemned on ex parte evidence; and ex parte evidence, so far from evincing guilt on the part of the accused, was, if any thing, testimony in his favour, for it showed a biased mind in his antagonists. (Hear.) Hitherto no adequate inquiry had been instituted in this case; and, in fact, the whole affair had been conducted in the most cruel manner towards the Rajah. (Hear, hear.) In the proclamation deposing the Rajah he was described as having been unmindful of the obligation he owed to our Government, and the reason assigned for his deposition was his having treated with native powers; but the real cause of his deposition, and indeed of his entire prosecution, was his having refused to act on the suggestion of Sir James Carnac, and sign the second treaty with the British Government: (hear, hear.) — a treaty which asserted the Rajah's guilt, and differed materially from the original treaty. For refusing to sign this, he was spoken of as having refused to renew the treaty with our Government. He (Mr. Sullivan) wished to ask, what right had the Government of Bombay to require the Rajah to enter into a new treaty while the other one remained in force, and its conditions were not violated. (Hear, hear.) It had been proved beyond the possibility of a doubt that the Rajah had been wrongfully deposed and deprived of his property, and they therefore sought for further inquiry, that justice might be done to the Rajah's family, and more especially to his political son. (Hear, hear.) An objection had been started that this boy was not the legitimate heir of the Rajah, because the Rajah was not at liberty to adopt an heir. Now, he begged to observe that it was, with Mohammedans and Hindoos, not an option, but a duty to adopt an heir should there be no issue, and therefore the Rajah was perfectly justified in adopting this child as his heir. (Hear.) At present we stood accused of having broken our faith with the princes of Delhi, Mysore, Sattara, and Scinde. Let the Government be cautious, for assuredly such instances of faithlessness on our part could not but weaken our hold on the allegiance of the natives of India. (Hear.) It was very erroneous to suppose that there was no public opinion in India. There was, in fact, a very strong one, though it might not be in all cases expressed openly on account of our great military power.

(Hear, hear.) Let every thing else connected with our Government in the East fall, but let our faith be preserved—our treaties respected. (Cheers.)

Mr. LEWIS said the law gave the proprietors the power to demand a ballot, and that demand had been made by proprietors duly qualified; but the Chairman had refused to receive it. He begged to ask, was there not a question before the Court?

The CHAIRMAN. — There is a motion under consideration.

Mr. LEWIS. — Very well. Now the law said that, except in certain cases mentioned, a ballot might be demanded on any question before the Court. The present question was not one of those mentioned, and why then had the Chairman refused to receive the demand for a ballot? (Hear, hear.) He appealed to the legal adviser of the Court, whom he saw present, for his opinion. He wanted to know the grounds on which the Court rested the determination; and he could not think that the legal adviser of the Court would come to the same opinion as the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN said there was no objection to the opinion of the Court's legal adviser being given. The Court of Directors had previously taken legal advice, and of course by that advice they must be bound.

Sir JAMES HOGG said the question of the hon. proprietor seemed to be, whether, after a ballot had been demanded, a motion for adjournment could be made. (No, no.)

Major OLIPHANT said, if the law were as it was stated by the Chairman to be, it was impossible ever to have a ballot. (Hear.)

The CHAIRMAN. — A motion may be negatived, and then it is competent to call a ballot. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. HUME said, the object of the ballot was to obtain the opinion of the whole body of proprietors.

The CHAIRMAN said, he disliked a ballot in such cases, and it seemed inexpedient and improper to refer a complicated inquiry, requiring no little legal knowledge, and a careful study of its merits, to a body of perhaps two thousand ladies and gentlemen, who probably knew nothing whatever of the case on which they gave their vote, and had never read a single paper in connection with it. (Hear.)

Mr. Serjeant GASELEE wished to ask the Court's legal adviser, whether the bye-law were good? He (Mr. Serjeant Gaselee) said it was bad.

Mr. CLARKE said, they were discussing two or three questions. The question to be decided was this, certain parties had demanded a ballot and it had been refused, was that refusal legal? That was the question. (Hear, hear.)

The CHAIRMAN said, they would now hear the opinion of the Court's counsel.

Mr. WIGRAM (the Company's standing counsel) rose and said, that as his opinion had been requested, he had no hesitation in giving it. There did not appear to him to be any difficulty in the case. As to the value of the bye-law, he need not enter into the question; but as the bye-law now stood, he thought the Chairman was justified in the course he had pursued. Until the bye-law was repealed, the Court of Directors must be bound by it. As the law was at present constituted, it was competent for a specified number of proprietors to demand a ballot on any question, with certain exceptions, that was brought before the Court; but before the question on which the ballot had been demanded was put to the Court, a motion of adjournment might be made, which would, in his opinion, have the power of abrogating that demand.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON differed from the legal authorities of the Court in his view of the law on this subject. The law was at utter variance with the decision of the Chairman. It was declared competent for nine qualified proprietors to demand a ballot on any question made in that Court: but the Chairman, availing himself of a legal opinion, came forward and maintained that he had the power to move the adjournment, and so put it out of the power of the proprietors to demand a ballot. (Hear.) He well remembered how they had been met on the other side the bar, and twitted with not having before demanded a ballot on this question, and now that a ballot had been demanded, the question of adjournment had been made with the intention of depriving them of it. If the law were as laid down, were the Directors the proper parties to avail themselves of it, and refuse the ballot? (Hear, hear.) That Company had been characterised as most corrupt, and as having obtained its Charters by corrupt practices; it was even said that at the time of one of the Charters being granted 10,000*l.* had been put into the pocket of a certain exalted person, and that votes in that Court had frequently been bought. To remedy as much as possible the last-mentioned evil, the ballot had been adopted, so as to take the opinion of the whole body of proprietors, and as some guard against persons influenced by improper motives being brought into that Court to give their votes. (Hear, hear.) On the present occasion there were plenty of mute votes present to overpower the friends of justice. (Hear.) Of all who had now given their opinion on that case, three, four, or five to one had given it in favour of the Rajah. They had many illustrious men on their side, and but one opinion prevailed among them. From Mountstuart Elphinstone and Sir Harford Jones Brydges, down to the humble individual who then addressed them, but one opinion prevailed. That opinion had, however, hitherto been vain, and therefore, as a last resource, it was determined to appeal by ballot to the proprietors at large, to see if there were honesty and virtue in them. (Hear, hear.) If the friends of the Rajah should be overwhelmed that day, and their rights as proprietors trampled on, not a day should elapse before he put a notice of motion on the subject on the board of the House of Commons. (Hear, hear.) Was there any just ground for refusing a ballot on this question? No. Would any one believe the Rajah guilty of the crimes laid against him? No. The whole case against the Rajah was got up by the Bombay Government because they discovered that he was aware they had concealed the despatch of the Court of Directors giving the Rajah sovereignty over certain jagheers, and a right to them by lapse. (Hear, hear.) When Sir Robert Grant had an interview with the Rajah, he told that prince to prepare a statement of his grievances, and it should be sent home, while at the very time he had the despatch of the Court of Directors, deciding in the Rajah's favour, in his pocket. (Hear.) The Rajah did prepare such a statement, and placed it in the hands of the local Government. It was never sent home. (Hear.) It could not be sent home, because the questions to which it related were already answered by the Directors' despatch. At a subsequent interview, a year afterwards, Sir Robert Grant assured the Rajah that his statement had gone home; then he said that it had not yet been forwarded, but that it should be. The Rajah then appointed agents to come to this country, and that led to his sacrifice. (Hear.) The conduct of Sir Robert Grant demanded inquiry. Again, inquiry was wanted in the case of the asserted conspiracy with the subadars, and into the plot by which Col. Lodwick was removed, and Col. Ovens sent to Sattara to effect the ruin of the Rajah. (Hear.) It was passing strange that the Government had not taken any steps to inquire into the charges preferred against Col. Ovens. Why had there not been an inquiry into those charges? Why had they not brought him (Mr. George Thompson) to a legal tribunal, as it was at first proposed to do? (Hear, hear.) The Court of Directors were accessories, after the fact, to all the crimes committed against the Rajah. (Hear.) How had the charges against the Rajah been met in Parliament? they had been laughed at as ridiculous. Were then the princes of India to be thus used? Were sufferings and injuries to be heaped upon their heads, and when inquiry was demanded, was the request to be met by an overwhelming majority of whipped in voters by that Court? (Hear.) Were the privileges of the proprietors to be thus trampled on? Would they permit the first principles of justice to be violated in their name, and a prince denied the right of vindicating his character when assailed? (Hear.) He wanted to inquire into the conduct of Sir James Carnac. He wanted inquiry into the conduct of the Secretary to the Government of Bombay. If such an inquiry were granted, he would undertake to prove that Sir James Carnac did not arrive at his ultimate decision but under fear of his personal safety. He would prove how the plot was concocted at the Bombay council table; how Mr. Willoughby, Col. Ovens, and Mr. Anderson never left Sir James, night or day, till he had determined on the deposit of the Rajah. He wanted an inquiry into the conduct of the Directors themselves; when he would prove that many of those who signed the despatch of 1840, sanctioning the proceedings in India, had never read the papers connected with this case. (Hear.) Sir James Carnac had read the papers relative to the Rajah's case before he went to India, and he did not believe the charges, yet he afterwards deposed the Rajah on those very charges. He wanted inquiry into that. He wanted inquiry into the conduct of the Bombay Government in overturning the law of the land. He wanted to know why the inquiry against Col. Ovens and Ballajee Punt Nathoo had been stopped. The charges were all prepared, and the magistrate held the prosecutor in heavy recognizances to continue the case, when the Government sent and stopped it. (Hear, hear.) He wanted inquiry into the legality of the Rajah's deposit; and he asked the standing counsel to give his opinion on the subject, and to say whether the deposit was not in direct contradiction of the law. He (Mr. George Thompson) had taken legal advice on the question, and he was firmly convinced that the dethronement of the Rajah was illegal. (Hear.) He wished to know whether the Chairman intended to persist in his motion of adjournment. From his knowledge of the Chairman's character, he believed he would; for when he (the Chairman) had deliberately made up his mind on any subject, he was not accustomed speedily to change it. That gentleman might not consider the present expedient for getting rid of a demand for a ballot, a trick; but he would find it hard to make the world think with him. This was a question which should not be trifled with. The character of the Court of Directors, of the Supreme Government of India, and, in fact, the very safety of the British empire in India, were involved in it; and he could not but help thinking that the like duplicity and guilty connivance on the part of our Government would be found in the case of all deposed princes in India—(hear); and he hoped and prayed his words might not fall unheeded on their ear. He said, perish the East-India Company before injustice shall be done. (Cheers.) The natives, he assured them, would become disappointed with our Government; we can find as good rulers among our own people, they would say,—we certainly cannot find worse. (Hear.) In every part of British India the natives were becoming debased and miserable. The Deputy-Chairman might smile at this, but he (Mr. George Thompson) would refer him to his own presidency, Madras. Look at the fatally injurious effect of the transit duties, the assessment, &c. &c.; how they pressed on the poor native and weighed him down. He would tell the Directors again, that their conduct would consign this Company to infamy—(Oh, oh!) If it were infamous to dethrone an untried man, to plunder him of his property, to banish him to a distant and unhealthy place, far from his family and relations; if it were infamous to suffer princes and princesses to perish by the road side, then was that Company infamous. (Hear.) Not one penny had been allowed to furnish the dead Rajah with a suitable burial according to his religious tenets. As for the Directors saying they were ignorant of the ill effect of the climate of Benares on the Rajah, it was nonsense. Where were the letters of Mr. Hume to Sir Robert Peel and Lord Ripon? Where was the letter to a late Chairman of the Court? There ought to be an inquiry into this matter. Let the Chairman to whom Mr. Hume addressed his letter, and who was in court when the case was first mentioned, let him, if present now, get up and explain the cause of that suppression. If to do the things he had mentioned were infamous, the Company was infamous, and inquiry was imperatively called for in this case—(hear); and he hoped that Mr. Hume would recal those panegyrics which he had pronounced last Court on the compassion and justice of the Court of Directors.

Mr. Hume said, having done all in his power on that day, having moved the resolution, and demanded a ballot, he should take no further part in the Court's proceedings; and as the ballot had been refused, it only remained for him to hand in his protest against that refusal.

As Mr. Hume was about to leave the Court,

Sir James Hogg rose, and expressed a hope that the hon. proprietor would not leave at present. He (Sir James Hogg) was about to make a few observations which he should like the hon. proprietor to hear. With the merits of the general question before them he should have nothing to do; the observations which he was about to deliver would have reference to two points only—the construction to be put upon the bye-law, and the line of conduct pursued by the Chairman that day. (Hear.) First, with respect to the construction of the bye-law, the learned serjeant (Mr. Serjeant Gaselee) had said that the bye-law was worth nothing, inasmuch as it was contrary to the statute law of the land. Now, on that point, he differed with the learned serjeant, and he hoped to show that he (Mr. Serjeant Gaselee) was wrong in his law. (Hear.) That gentleman seemed to think that the statute law gave the proprietors the option of a ballot, and that the bye-law interfered with this right. But he begged to assure the Court, that by the statute law they had no right whatever to a ballot, and if it were not for the bye-law there could be no such thing as a ballot in that Court. (Hear, hear.) As far as time would allow he had looked into the law on the subject, and he found that the right to ballot was not given by the statute at all, but by the bye-law; if, therefore, a demand for a ballot were made, it must be rested on the bye-law, and they must not have recourse to the law of the land, because that law gave them no such right. (Hear, hear.) The mode of taking the votes by ballot was indeed mentioned in several statutes; but it originated and rested entirely in the bye-law. (Hear.) The hon. proprietor (Mr. Hume) was clearly wrong in demanding a ballot at the time he made the motion. The Chairman could not receive it then, because there was no question before the Court. There was a motion before the Court, but no question. A motion did not necessarily become a question. (Hear, hear.) There might be half-a-dozen motions made before the Court and yet not one of them become a question. (Hear, hear.) One motion might be made and then another, and so they might go on for days and weeks before coming to a question. (Hear, hear.) It was not till after the debate was concluded that a motion became a question, because the Chairman could not till then declare what the question was that was to be submitted to the Court. (Hear, hear.) The Chairman, then, was right in his construction of the bye-law. No doubt the proprietors had a perfect right to demand a ballot on all questions, with certain exceptions, that were brought before them, but they could not exercise this right till they knew what the question was on which they demanded a ballot, and they could not know this till after the debate was concluded, and the question was about to be put. (Hear, hear.) The Chairman rather prematurely, but at the same time very candidly, told the hon. proprietor that he (the Chairman) intended moving the adjournment. Till that adjournment were moved, the hon. proprietor's motion was the one to be considered by the Court; but the very moment the Chairman, or indeed any proprietor, moved an adjournment, that became the substantive motion, and took precedence of all others. (Hear.) The motion of adjournment then became the question before the Court, and the motion previously made gave place to it. (Hear.) Now the question of adjournment was one of the exceptions on which a ballot could not be taken; in the first section of the bye-law relating to the General Courts, it was ordained that the ballot might be demanded on any question except that of adjournment, the previous question, or an amendment; and, in the following section, it was ordained that these exceptions, that is to say, the question of adjournment, the previous question, or an amendment, should, in case of doubt, be decided by a division of the members then present, and by no other mode (Hear, hear.) Was that law prepared by the Directors? No; it was the proprietors' own code. ("No, no," from a proprietor.) The hon. proprietor might call "No, no;" but he said it was as he stated. The bye-laws were framed by a committee appointed for that purpose by the proprietors themselves—(hear)—and passed by two General Courts of Proprietors. (Hear, hear.) The Directors had nothing to do with the bye-laws but to carry them into effect. (Hear, hear.) He admitted the right of the proprietors to demand a ballot when the question was put from the chair, but that demand could not, according to the bye-law he had just alluded to, be made when the question was the question of adjournment. If the question of adjournment were carried, the Court was at an end. (Hear.) If not, the original motion was put, and then it was competent for the proprietors to demand a ballot. (Hear, hear.) He had said the Chairman was premature in declaring his intention of moving the adjournment. It was not imperative in his hon. friend to tell the proprietors what he intended to do. He might have simply declined to receive the demand for a ballot without informing them of his intention to move the adjournment, but he deemed it more courteous to inform the hon. proprietors what his intentions were. (Hear, hear.) He should not follow the example of some speakers who had preceded him and enter into the merits of the case. From the way in which that case had been discussed to-day, a stranger entering the Court and listening to the debate would be led to conclude that the Rajah of Sattara's case was a res integra, and that that was the first time of its being debated—(hear, hear);—but it had been before the Court for about eight years, and had been discussed some twenty-six or twenty-seven times, and some ten or twelve times had been decided on its merits. ("No, no," from Mr. George Thompson.) The hon. proprietor cried "No, n," but what he (Sir James Hogg) meant was, that several of the motions that had from time to time been made in that Court with reference to the Rajah's case had gone fairly to the proprietors and been negatived, when it was quite competent for the friends of the Rajah to call for a ballot. (Hear, hear.) Why had they not done so before? They had had plenty of opportunities. (Hear, hear.) The reason was this. When they found that they made no impression by their speeches, and that they could get no one to come down to listen to them,—when they found their abuse did no good,—(and they were not sparing of that, for the India Board, the Court of Directors, the Governments of India, and indeed everybody connected with this case, had been abused, but abused in vain),—when they found that that stupid public would not believe a whole service to be so corrupt as they were represented to be (laughter, and hear, hear),—when, he said, they found their exertions in vain, there was but one course open to them, and that was to demand a ballot (hear, hear), and to take the opinion of the proprietors at large; very many of whom had perhaps never read a line connected with the subject, except a stray speech or two reported in a newspaper (hear, hear), and this, too, when the question to be decided was a most complicated one, and one that required great study and deliberate judgment. (Hear, hear.) How was it that they could never get but a small attendance at that Court at the discussions on the Rajah's case? Because the proprietors did not care at all for it. (Hear, hear.) Not many weeks since they had a debate on the subject. Did the proprietors come then? No. (Hear, hear.) On the occasion referred to his hon. friend (Mr. Hume) had taken every precaution to secure a good attendance, but without effect. (Hear.) He had written an able letter—he (Sir James Hogg) admitted it was a most able letter—to the most widely circulated journal in the world. This letter was published some time before the Court met, and was extensively circulated, so as to give time for it to effect its purpose. He had said that the hon. proprietor's letter was an able one, but he begged to limit the signification of that word. It was able for the purpose for which it was written, but it was full of statements which he (Sir James Hogg) could disprove, and conclusions were drawn from those statements which he could refute, did he think it worth while to enter upon the subject. (Hear, hear.) Well, let that pass. The hon. proprietor boasted a great deal about the letter. (Laughter, and "No, no," from Mr. Hume.) Well, the hon. proprietor was very proud of it. (Renewed laughter. Mr. Hume,—No, no.) He was sorry if his words caused annoyance to his hon. friend, and would with pleasure retract them, and say, that the hon. proprietor took great credit to himself for that letter (laughter); for the difference, see Johnson. (Loud laughter.) He, Mr. Hume, after forwarding it to the Times newspaper, had, he himself told the proprietors at the last Court, sent a copy of it to every East-India proprietor. He believed the hon. proprietor had done more, he believed he had sent it to most of the newspapers in the kingdom, and to every member of Parliament. (Mr. Hume dissented.) At all events a great number of members had told him (Sir James Hogg) that they had received copies. The last Court, then, was no hole and corner meeting. It was extensively made known, as extensively indeed as it could be. He believed no notice on a subject to be brought before that Court had ever before been so largely circulated. (Hear.) What was the result? The Court was held, and an able discussion ensued; and out of a very large number of proprietors, the hon. proprietor managed to get twenty-three to come down and vote with him. (Hear, hear.) This was not because the proprietors lived at great distances from town. He believed that the greater proportion lived within half an hour's drive of that Court, or a little more. (Hear, hear.) Looking at the numbers of East-India proprietors living in London and its suburbs,—who were the most likely to be acquainted with the subject,—they might take this as a very fair indication of the public feeling with respect to the case. (Hear, hear.) And now he would ask—why did the Chairman propose the motion of adjournment? He proposed it out of respect to the Court of Proprietors. (Hear, hear.) The Court of Proprietors had again and again met on that subject,—debated, discussed, and decided on it. Their decisions had always been the same. They declared the Rajah guilty, and declined to enter again into the question, and with these repeated decisions they ought to be satisfied. (Cheers.) Ought they to consider that question as a res integra which that Court had decided over and over again during the last eight years. (Hear, hear.) Though the case had frequently been brought before Parliament, yet it was only in the last session of the House of Commons that the friends of the Rajah had ventured to ask for a division. It was the first time, and he ventured to say it would be the last. (Hear, hear.) After the Rajah's case had been decided over and over again in that Court, as well as elsewhere, were they to be told that all that had been done was in vain, and a fresh inquiry must be instituted, from the very beginning of the case? (Hear, hear.) He was quite willing,—and he was sure all in that Court were,—to give the supporters of the Rajah credit for honourable motives, but he thought he was not presumptuous in asking and hoping that the proprietors and public at large would give the same credit for honesty and integrity to those who took a different view of the case. (Hear, hear.) It was best for the interests of India and that Company that these reiterated discussions should be discontinued. (Ironical cheers from Mr. George Thompson.) They might ironically cheer his words, but depend upon it, that after a question had been decided by all the legally-constituted authorities, as this had been, it was best that the agitation of it should be discontinued. (Loud cheers.) If it were persisted in, it must have a deleterious effect on the minds of the natives of India, and it could not but be injurious, not to India only, but to our whole empire, that every one connected with the government of so large a portion of our territory as India should be stigmatised as infamous (hear, hear, hear), or that it should go forth to the people of that country that their rulers were corrupt and careless of their interests. (Loud cheers.)

which the discussion of it has extended, and that decision having always been uniform, I do not consider that I should be justified in assenting to its again being gone into. (Hear, hear.) To re-open it, would be to appeal to a decision of this Court from very many of its previous decisions on the same case. It would, in fact, be an appeal from ourselves to ourselves. (Hear, hear.) Moreover, I do not think that the proposed ballot on the question would be at all beneficial. The case is confessedly a difficult one. There are so many facts connected with it, and these facts are so complicated, that it requires great judgment in investigating them, and great deliberation and care in coming to a decision. (Hear, hear.) With this view of the difficulties that beset this question, I am not of opinion that any practical good would arise from submitting it to a mixed and perhaps indiscriminating body of some two thousand proprietors, who probably know nothing of its merits, and certainly take no interest in it. (Hear, hear.) If they did take any interest in it, it seems most probable they would come to this Court and take part in the proceedings and discussions to which it has so frequently given rise. (Hear, hear.) That any large number of the proprietors have not done so, we all know; and therefore, to submit this question to the general body of proprietors, — to clergymen, foreigners, and ladies, — would, in my opinion, be most unwise. (Hear, hear.) I will say nothing to the observations that have from time to time been addressed to myself and my brother Directors as to our unfitness for the high situation we hold, but I will merely remind the proprietors that, if we are unfit for our duties, the fault lies with them, and not with us; we are appointed by them, and they ought to see that they choose proper persons. (Hear, hear.) I do hope, therefore, that we shall no more have such language applied to us. (Hear, hear.) We are acting under great responsibility, and, when endeavouring to perform our duties and to maintain the character of the Government, I think it most unfair to charge us with unfitness. (Hear, hear.) One hon. proprietor has charged me with having resorted to a trick to-day. Now, I must say, that if a long life and a period of fifty years' service have failed to make my character better known, I have lived to very little purpose. (Loud cheers.) The ultimate object of these discussions seems to be to get a committee appointed to inquire into this case. But, I ask, how is such a committee to be appointed? How is it to act? One hon. proprietor wants inquiry into a great many things; he wishes the conduct of the Board to be inquired into, the conduct of the Court of Directors, of the Governor of Bombay, and of the secretaries to Government. (Hear, hear.) Such a proceeding would take all authority from the Government of India, and cast a stigma on the character and conduct of that Government. (Hear, hear.) I really do not see what possible good could result from the appointment of such a committee; the only effect, in my opinion, of such a proceeding would be to shake the public faith in the Government, and, as I said before, to cast a stain on the Indian authorities. (Hear, hear.) I cannot imagine that the hon. proprietor, in wishing for such a sweeping investigation, was serious. (Hear, hear.) To all intents and purposes the case is closed, and further inquiry would be useless. Under these circumstances, therefore, and this being my opinion, I consider that the present motion is inexpedient, and I therefore move that this Court do now adjourn. (Loud cheers.)

The DEPUTY CHAIRMAN (Lieut. Gen. Sir James Law Lushington, G. C. B.), seconded the amendment.

Mr. HUME said, the Chairman was mistaken in supposing the proprietors took no interest in the case. He could assure them that not only the proprietors, but the public also, took a very great interest in it. (Hear.) He had no doubt that, if a ballot were taken, the proprietors would come forward as they did on one occasion when the Court of Directors wished to vote the sum of £3,000 to a certain person [the name of the gentleman we could not hear]. The vote on the occasion referred to was submitted in general Court, but forthwith opposed, and a ballot demanded, when the Directors were beaten by three to one. (Hear, hear.) Until a ballot had been taken on this subject, he should not consider it a closed case. (Cheers.) Mr. Hume then put his protest on the table, and left the Court. The following is a copy of the protest:—

"We, the mover and seconder of the resolution annexed, for which the Court was called and made special, 'demanding an inquiry respecting the deposition of the Rajah of Sattara,' having demanded that the question should be decided by ballot (as provided for by law), by requisition signed by nine proprietors of East India Stock, duly qualified, and handed in to the Chairman, and refused by him to be received, do hereby protest against this illegal conduct of the Chairman for refusing to receive that demand, and thus depriving the Court of Proprietors of the opportunity of giving the votes on a question of great importance to the cause of justice, and to the honour of the Government of the East-India Company.

"JOSEPH HUME, S. GARNER."

[Here follow copies of the requisition calling the Court, and of the resolutions.]

Mr. CLARK had always advocated the claims of the Rajah up to the death of that prince; but, in his opinion, that event had greatly altered the aspect of the case. As long as the Rajah was likely to be benefitted by any alteration in the decision which had been pronounced upon him, he (Mr. Clark) had supported his cause, but he now took a different view of the case. (Hear, hear.) If the Rajah had left any son, or other immediate heir, he (Mr. Clark) should still have supported the deceased Rajah's cause, and asked that that justice might be done to the son which had been withheld from the father. (Hear.) But the Rajah had not left a son, nor any heir but the child whom he had adopted, and that adoption, they were told on high authority, was not a legal one. (Hear, hear.) Col. Sykes, at the last Court, distinctly stated that the Rajah had no right to adopt a son to succeed him in civil or political rights. (Hear, hear.) If the case had been otherwise, of course it was but natural that the son should wish to ascend the father's throne, and that his father's character should be freed from the charges against it. (Hear.) He could well understand that the son should wish his father's character to be cleared, even though he could not succeed to his father's kingdom (hear); but there was nothing of the sort in this case. If the Rajah had left a direct succession, of course his friends would have prosecuted his cause; but as the Rajah had no direct issue, and as the adoption he had made was declared to be illegal, the case might be considered closed. (Cheers.) With regard to the right of the Rajah's adopted son, whose claim the hon. member for the Tower Hamlets supported, he (Mr. Clark), after the strong opinion that had been given by eminent authorities on such questions, could not consider it a good one. (Hear.) If the motion of Mr. Hume were adopted, it would be virtually asking for a new trial of a dead prince. (Hear, hear.) Their first duty was to restore the private property of the late Rajah to his family, and grant such annual allowance to his relations and retainers as would be sufficiently ample. (Hear.) Having done this, they had done all that was necessary. (Hear, hear.) He hoped they should not have that case brought before them again. Let the hon. member for the Tower Hamlets, in his place in Parliament, impeach the Bombay Government, but let them not have the subject again brought before them in that Court. (Cheers.)

Mr. WEEDING could not concur with the honourable gentleman who had just sat down, in recommending to either of the hon. members of Parliament who had principally spoken upon the subject to carry the further discussion of it into the House of Commons. Believing, as he did, that it had been already decided on its merits, and most properly decided, he should be unwilling to recommend to any person to continue a discussion in any place upon a subject where the reason of the thing was against him, the evidence was against him, and all the authorities, whose province it had been to decide, were entirely opposed to him. (Hear, hear.) The ex-Rajah's guilt had been established by just and irrefragable testimony; and, moreover, he was now dead. Any discussion, therefore, whether for good or for evil, could no longer affect him personally. (Hear, hear.) He (Mr. Weeding) should willingly join in recommending to the hon. gentlemen who were members of Parliament to relinquish this frivolous and vain inquiry, and attend to subjects connected with the national welfare. In the investigation of the present subject they could expect to reap nothing but disappointment. (Hear.) An attempt had been made on a former occasion, and was now repeated, to accuse the late Sir Robert Grant, when he was Governor of Bombay, of having done wrong to the ex-Rajah in his claims to sovereignty over certain jagheerders at Sattara. The fact was, that the Rajah had set up a monstrous and absurd claim to sovereignty wherever land was held by his subjects, whether in the British territories or in his own dominions. This claim had been resisted by Lord Clare's Government, and the ex-Rajah was distinctly informed by Lord Clare, on the 9th March, 1835, that such a claim could not be admitted. The Bombay Government referred the question to the home authorities on the 17th June, 1835, in the case of the Sheikh Meera, who was a jagheerdar of Sattara, and had also lands in the British territories in Candlish; and the Court of Directors, in their answer on the 8th of June, 1836, confirmed the proceedings of the Bombay Government. Sir Robert Grant acted upon this opinion of the Court, and in his minute of the 27th of April, 1837, stated reasons for any delay of reference or of judgment on his own part, which might have satisfied the most fastidious objector. (Hear, hear.) The character and ability of the late Sir Robert Grant were too well known and esteemed to require any defence against the accusations of the hon. gentlemen who had thought fit to asperse his memory. (Hear.) To their aspersions he should merely say, that the right hon. gentleman was greatly their superior in every quality which could form the senator or adorn the man. (Hear, hear.) In reference to the summons by which the Court had been assembled, he observed a quotation from a minute of the Governor-General in September, 1838, intended to convey an impression that the recommendation of Lord Auckland to give to the ex-Rajah a written statement of the accusation against him had not been complied with. The fact was, that the Governor-General shortly afterwards changed his mind, and in a minute of the 29th of December, 1838, his lordship stated his conviction that it would not be right to take the course which he had previously recommended. If the hon. gentlemen had read the papers throughout, there was a want of candour in concealing this fact, and he (Mr. Weeding) had observed throughout this inquiry that the ex-Rajah's case had been supported by garbled and partial extracts from the Parliamentary papers, which would not bear examination when compared and sifted with the evidence generally. (Hear, hear.)

General BAIGGS should not have spoken to day, but for some observations that had been made with respect to the Rajah's right of adoption. It had been asserted by an hon. proprietor on the other side the bar, at a recent Court, that the Rajah had no right to adopt a son to succeed him in his political and civil rights. (Hear.) Now his view of the case was different. (Hear, hear.) He conceived that the Rajah had a right to adopt a son according to the Hindoo and Mahomedan law, and this son was eligible to succeed to the father's civil and political rights. In his opinion, the adoption by the Rajah was a legal one, and as such the child whom he adopted ought to succeed to all the late Rajah's rights, whether civil or political. (Hear, hear.) It had also been asserted, that to render an adoption legal, the sanction of the lord paramount must be obtained, and that in this case the sanction of the British Government, as lord paramount, had not been given. (Hear.) But he disputed this. He admitted, indeed, the principle that the sanction of the lord paramount must be had, but he denied the right of the British Government to assume such a character in this case. (Hear, hear.) The Rajah was an independent prince, and as such was himself the lord paramount in his own dominions. (Hear, hear.) Further, he had taken every precaution in his power to render the successive right of his adopted son free from objection, by informing the British Government of what his intentions were, though the Governor-General took no notice of that communication. It was quite a common practice to adopt a son, to secure to all rights, civil and political, and therefore the objection in this case could not be considered good. As he said before, the Rajah was an independent prince, and lord paramount, and therefore the idea of the British Government assuming the right of a lord paramount was inadmissible. If it should be proved that the Rajah was illegally deposed, the adopted son was the rightful heir, and ought to succeed to the throne and all the Rajah's rights. (Cheers.)

Mr. FIELDER said the course of conduct pursued by the Chairman that day was perfectly fair, and supported by the law. He entirely agreed with the opinion of Sir James Hogg on the subject. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON regretted that an hon. proprietor below the bar (Mr. Clark) should have considered it his duty to support the amendment; a course of conduct different to what the hon. proprietor had formerly pursued, and one which he (Mr. George Thompson) believed would not be followed by any who had previously taken the same view of this case as his hon. friend. After this preliminary remark, he would go on to a different subject. He wished to say just a few words with respect to some points of the treaty of 1819. Perhaps it was not generally known that that treaty was written in three different languages—in English, in the vernacular (the Mahratta), and in the court language of the country, and indeed of almost all the East, the Persian. He held in his hands a translation of a part of that treaty. That translation had been made by one fully qualified to undertake the task; but as he was under no necessity to conceal his name, he would state it was Major Graham. From this document it appeared that the English version was not a literal translation of the other two, but only an approximate one. In the Mahratta and Persian versions the Rajah's right to adopt a son was fully recognized; and not only was he empowered to adopt a son and heir, but also a regent if necessary. The simple question then was, whether the British Government would or would not abide by the terms of its treaty. (Hear.) The son had been adopted by the Rajah in accordance with the Hindoo law, he was the nearest relative to the late Rajah, and was the heir to the Rajah of Sattara as much as if he were the actual son of the late Rajah. (Hear.) It was the dying wish of the Rajah that his adopted son should succeed him, and he did not see that much injustice would be done by displacing the present Rajah, considering the means by which he had raised himself to the throne. (Hear, hear.) An hon. proprietor (Mr. Weeding) insinuated that he (Mr. George Thompson) had not read the whole of the papers, and that he was not acquainted with the localities of Sattara; now he begged to say he was perfectly acquainted with every paper connected with this case, and if his hon. friend desired it, General Briggs, who well knew every part of Sattara, should catechise him (Mr. George Thompson) as to the position of any place named. (Hear.) With respect to their right to have a ballot, he considered that that right had been invaded. The law awarded a ballot on the demand of nine proprietors; that demand had been made, and it was not in the power of the Directors to refuse it. (Hear, hear.) The Court of Directors were bent on discontinuing the subject. Why, had not the Chairman denied all his (Mr. George Thompson's) charges? The Chairman had no right to say he aspersed people, when he (the Chairman) could not deny the charges made. He would not submit to be called a public calumniator when the Chairman dared not deny what he said. He was not a public calumniator who denounced oppression. He was not a public calumniator who upheld injured innocence. He was not a public calumniator who demanded justice. (Cheers.) Let the inquiry he prayed for be granted, and he would prove every charge he had made; if he failed to do so, then call him a public calumniator, and he would submit to be so called. (Hear.) The Court of Directors would gain nothing by refusing further inquiry. The friends of the Rajah would continue to demand it until it were granted. It was the unfortunate widow who succeeded. He might not live to see the result of the present agitation, but with those results he had nothing to do. He would not abandon the case on that account; but he still urged that the defence of the Rajah might be heard, that the character of that prince might be cleared. (Hear.) He would sow the seed which must in time produce fruit, though he might not live to see it. (Cheers.)

Mr. SERJEANT GASELLE did not wish the proprietors should be led away by any of the special pleadings they had heard to-day. He was sure he was right in his view of the case, and that the course pursued by the Chairman in refusing to receive the demand for a ballot, was not borne out by law. (Hear, hear.) He entirely dissented from the distinction between question and motion that they had heard from an hon. baronet. Why he himself (Sir James Hogg) confused them so much, and used them so indifferently, that he was obliged to be called back to the subject under discussion by cries of question. The Chairman had given it as his opinion that this case was too intricate to be submitted to the judgment of ladies. What! refuse to take the votes of the lady-proprietors! Did they refuse to receive the votes of the ladies when an election was going to take place? Why, he dared say, that they had some of the ladies' proxies in their pockets at the very time. (Laughter.) It was well known that the way the proprietors were bored for their votes for an election was quite dreadful. (Laughter.) One hon. Director had ridiculed the result of the last Court, which he stated had been extensively announced, and after all but twenty-three came to vote for the Rajah. It was true the friends of the Rajah were in a minority on the occasion alluded to, but they had not the inducements which the Directors were able to hold out in the shape of dinners, &c. (Oh, oh! and laughter.) Such good dinners, he understood, the Directors gave. The hon. baronet, too, said that a great number of the proprietors lived close to the house, and yet did not come. Why, it could scarcely be expected that they, especially ladies, should come and sit on those hard benches; give them sofas, and they would come fast enough. (A laugh.)

Mr. SULLIVAN said, the question that had been raised to-day was of great importance to the proprietors, and it behoved them to consider it well. The speech of the hon. baronet (Sir James Hogg) was certainly a very able and argumentative one, but he was not disposed to take it as a correct exposition of the law. (Hear.) On the merits of the general question he was sorry to differ with the hon. Chairman, but he was glad that on this point he could appeal from Chairman Tucker to Director Tucker. Whether or not the Rajah's case was likely to be benefitted by these discussions, he would not say; but he would observe, that a learned serjeant, a member of that Court, who previously had not been in the habit of attending there, came by accident about a year since. He asked if the Rajah had been heard in his defence. The Chairman for the time being did not reply to his question, he presumed, because he could not, and the learned serjeant voted in the Rajah's favour, which vote he had confirmed on several subsequent occasions. (Hear, hear.) An hon. Director had said that the letter of the hon. member for Montrose was full of mis-statements. Now he begged to challenge the hon. baronet to make good his words. If the present interpretation of the law were the true one, it would deprive many of the proprietors of availing themselves of their power of voting. (Hear.)

The CHAIRMAN said, an hon. proprietor, a learned sergeant, differed with him as to the propriety of throwing the question open to the opinion of the lady proprietors. He was, however, still of the same opinion. It was a legal question, and he put it to the learned sergeant whether he would submit a complicated chancery suit to the vote of ladies? (Hear, hear.) The hon. member for the Tower Hamlets had assumed his charges as true because he (the Chairman) did not refute them. Why, the task of refutation would be very great; the hon. proprietor's charges were at present so numerous, and he still scattered them about so liberally, that it would require all his (the Chairman's) time to keep refuting them. (Cheers.)

The question of adjournment was then carried sem. cor. by a show of hands, no division being demanded, and the Court accordingly adjourned.

A Quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East-India Stock was held on Wednesday last, at 12 o'clock. The minutes of the last Court having been read,—

THE LATE EX RAJAH OF SATTARA.

The CHAIRMAN (Henry St. George Tucker, Esq.) said: I have the honour to inform the Court that the letter of his Highness, the late ex-Rajah of Sattara to the Governor-General of India, dated 12th December, 1844, and which was omitted to be forwarded to this Court, has been received, and is now laid on the table.

MR. GEORGE THOMPSON'S RIGHT TO VOTE.

The CHAIRMAN stated, that the legal adviser of the Court had sent in his written opinion of the right of a certain hon. proprietor to vote, which opinion would now be read.

The clerk then read the following

Case.

The case laid before counsel for opinion, after reciting various Charters and Acts of Parliament, proceeds thus:—

"At a General Court of the East-India Company, held on Wednesday, the 22nd December, 1847, a debate ensuing on a motion submitted to the Court by a proprietor with reference to the late ex-Rajah of Sattara, in the course of which it was moved, 'That this Court do now adjourn,' and the question upon the motion of adjournment being put, a division was demanded, and tellers were appointed, who reported that there were 27 votes for the question, and 5 votes against it, and that there was also one other vote tendered against it, being that of a proprietor who claimed a right to vote, although he had not been possessed of the sum of £1,000 capital stock of the Company for the space of twelve calendar months. The following is a statement of the account of the proprietor in the East-India Company's stock ledger, in virtue of which it is presumed that he claims the present right of voting at General Courts, viz.—

Nov. 11th £300
	1841.
	June 3rd £400
	1847.
	March 2nd £300
	Sept. 2nd £500

Whence it appears, as the fact is, that on the 11th of November, 1846, he had but £300 East-India Stock standing in his name; that on the 2nd March, 1847, it was increased to £500, and that on the 2nd September, 1847, it was increased to £1,000. Your opinion is requested, whether the proprietor in question was legally entitled to vote at the General Court held on the 22nd Dec. 1847, upon the question there proposed, or upon any other question at General Courts of the East-India Company, held within twelve calendar months from the 22nd September, 1847."

Opinion.

"I am of opinion that the proprietor in question was not legally entitled to vote at the General Court held on the 22nd Dec. 1847, upon the question there proposed, and will not be entitled to vote upon any other question at General Courts of the East-India Company held within twelve calendar months from the 22nd Sept. 1847.

(Signed) "LOFTUS WIGMAN."

"Lincoln's-Inn, January 29, 1848."

THE TEMPLE OF JUGGERNAUT.

Mr. POYNTER, in moving the resolution on this subject (of which he had given notice at the last court), said, that it was more than ten years since Lord Auckland said that "our promise of support to the temple was distinct and unconditional." Now with that dictum he (Mr. Poynder) disagreed. He held that there was no promise whatever, and in the papers on the subject that had been printed by the Court, his opinion was fully confirmed. The hon. proprietor then quoted at considerable length from the recently printed papers, and in conclusion expressed his conviction that the time for a disconnection with Juggernaut was now fully come, so satisfied was he that our support of the temple was iniquitous and uncalled for. The hon. proprietor then moved,

"That, adverting to the despatch to the Bengal Government, transmitted fourteen years since, by the Court of Directors, and dated 20th February, 1833, declaring their determined withdrawal henceforth from all connection with, and abatement of, the idolatrous rights and ceremonies of India; and further adverting to the last year's correspondence of the Court with its Bengal Government, ordered to be laid on the table of this Court, demonstrating that no pledge, either direct or indirect, was ever given for the support of the Temple of Juggernaut, and also adverting to the continued annual money payment of 25,000 rupees, still made by the Local Government for the support of the temple, its priests and prostitutes, under the supposed obligation of some fiscal commutation, in consequence of which payment it was proved, at the September Court, that the abominations of the temple, and destruction of human life, still continue precisely as if the said despatch had never been issued; this Court is of opinion, that the Local Government is manifestly exceeding its commission, and that the time is fully arrived when it becomes the imperative duty of the Court to christianise, and the country to interpose, and to declare that all such support of heathenism shall have an immediate end."

Mr. MARRIOTT having seconded the motion,

The CHAIRMAN rose and said: The hon. proprietor, in supporting his view of the case, namely, that the support of the Temple of Juggernaut is gratuitous and spontaneous on our part, has quoted the opinions of one or two gentlemen who think with him on the subject. But I would remind the hon. gentlemen that their opinions are nothing more than private individual opinions, and are directly opposed to the decision of several successive Governments of India, and to the declaration of Lord Auckland in his minute of 7th November, 1833, that the pledge for supporting the temple is distinct and unconditional. This is a pledge founded on the regular and prescribed usage of war, to respect all claims on conquered lands—a principle by which our conduct in India had been governed for forty years—and is dependent on the original grant of 60,000 rupees a year to the temple of Juggernaut. This grant, however, is not entirely dependent on these grounds, for when it was deemed expedient to abolish the seya, a species of excise, of the nature of which, however, the hon. proprietor (Mr. Poynder) seemed to be ignorant—when, I say, the seya was abolished, compensation was given for it in accordance with our invariable custom in such cases. (Hear, hear.) To shew that the present payment is founded on the grounds I have stated, I will quote from a letter from the Government of India the following paragraph:—"From particulars which your hon. Court will find detailed in our secretary's letter of the 6th September last, we had reckoned that the amount which, on the withdrawal of the present payment of Rs. 35,738 9s. 6p., will have to be substituted, would be Rs. 22,860, or thereabouts, in lieu of seya abolished and assignments on the revenue which have long since been appropriated by the state." That, I think, pretty strongly confirms the opinion I have advanced, that this payment is not gratuitous or spontaneous on our part. The hon. proprietor assumes the annual payment at Rs. 35,000, but it is only Rs. 22,860; or, as the Government of India subsequently adopted it, Rs. 23,321. Government, I assure the hon. proprietor, has done all it can to effect a discontinuance of its connection with the temple. In furtherance of the object, it has restored an estate that formerly belonged to the temple, and which is valued at Rs. 27,000 a year. The restoration of the Sattases Hasaree estate and some other deductions have reduced the annual payment from what it was originally, namely Rs. 65,000, to what it is now, about Rs. 23,000. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Lewis, of the Sudder Board of Revenue, was of opinion that expediency should be adopted in this case; at least so I judge from a passage, not the most clear, and which I have read over two or three times without coming to a perfect understanding of it. He says, "It is possible to conceive a case in which a negative answer to an abstract proposition of the sort would be wrong. It has been justly observed, that an economist may demonstrate a principle of his science to be correct which a statesman might yet have valid reasons for not applying; and so cases cognate to this under discussion do sometimes occur of so anomalous a nature as to be beyond the reach of principle or precedent. But this case does not belong to such a class; on the contrary, it falls into the opposite category, and many of the reasons which might make it right for the Government to infringe the strict principle of toleration in the case of suttee make it right to recede at any rate to the limit of the principle (only to tolerate, that is, not to encourage) in the case of Juggernaut." What the writer means by cases "cognate to this which falls into the opposite category," I do not know; but I understand the tenor of the passage to be the adoption of expediency in this case. (Hear.) The hon. proprietor, in his motion, makes a distinct though loosely worded charge against the Indian authorities; the local Government, the Board of Control, and the Court of Directors. They are charged, in fact, with a neglect of duty, though I think the hon. proprietor will agree with me that no good is likely to follow such an imputation; nor do I think any beneficial effect will result from the continued discussion of this question in this Court. I may observe, in conclusion, that, should the payment be discontinued, the Government would be liable to proceedings against them in a court of law: for by the 27th Regulation of 1793 it is enacted, that when compensation for seya abolished is not made, the parties who were benefitted by the seya may sue the Government in a court of justice. (Hear, hear.) This then being my view of the case, I should not be doing my duty did I not meet the present motion by a negative. (Hear, hear.)

After a few words from Mr. Fielder,

Mr. STRACHAN supported the motion, and contended that the opinion of the Sudder Board was one of very great weight in such a case, and ought to be acted on.

A desultory conversation ensued.

Mr. LEWIS took the same view as the Chairman, but desired that some land might be given instead of the money payment.

The CHAIRMAN said the land would be more prized, and considered a greater support by the natives than the amount granted in money.

In reply to a question, the CHAIRMAN said, the pilgrim-tax, taken at the temple, was fifteen annas a head. It was not known how much was thus realized. The tax was settled at that amount to prevent extortion on the part of the priests at the temple.

Mr. POWNDER replied.—He regretted that he had heard nothing that day to alter his opinion on the subject. He had studied the subject for some time, but he never heard of the existence of a Seya till last September. He had no doubt, if the Government set their mind to the task they could rid themselves of their connection with the detestable temple. The Chairman, in support of his view, had read an extract from Mr. Lewis, which he (the Chairman) confessed he could scarcely understand, and which, in his (Mr. Poynder's) opinion, was nothing more than a parcel of abstract stuff. ("Hear," and a laugh.) He would just observe that Juggernaut was what it was, and that the scenes of vice continued undiminished. The defence of the payment had been set up too late. It might have done years ago, but it would not do now.

The Court then divided, when the numbers were:—

For the motion	4
Against	70
Majority against	66

THE LATE RAJAH OF SATTARA.

Mr. LEWIS withdrew his two motions on the subject, and asked whether the adopted son of the Rajah would or would not be entitled to succeed to the throne, and whether the Rajah's right of adoption was not acknowledged in the treaty of 1819.

The CHAIRMAN said the hon. proprietor must be aware that the right of adoption had lately been discussed in that court, and that a difference of opinion existed on the subject among several very high authorities. The question had been referred to the Government of India by the Bombay Government, and until the decision of the former Government was known it would be premature to discuss the point in that court. At present the matter was sub judice, and when determined by the Government of India, the Court was at liberty to entertain it. (Hear, hear.)

General GALLOWAY said the question to be determined was, not the right of adoption, but that of succession. Every Hindoo had a right to adopt a son, but the question was, should the British Government acknowledge the right of that adopted son to succeed to the throne; or, in other words, did the act of adoption necessarily imply the right of succession to civil and political rights? (Hear.)

General BRIDGES repeated an opinion he gave at the last court, that, to render an adoption legal, the concurrence of the lord paramount was necessary, but denied the right of the British Government to assume such a character in this case.

Mr. PARKER said, as his opinion on the subject seemed to be misunderstood, he would remark that there were two conditions necessary to the legal adoption; first, that the child adopted should be the next nearest relation, and that the adoption should be approved by the family; and secondly, that it should be sanctioned by the lord paramount. An hon. director had stated that any Hindoo had a right to adopt a son. So forcibly was this stated, that it might be suspected the hon. director meant a Hindoo could adopt a son even though he had children of his own. (No, no.) He well remembered one case that occurred. A Hindoo adopted a son, and afterwards begot one. When the father died, the question of succession was raised, and carried into a court of justice, when it was decided that the two children should equally share the property. The reason of a Hindoo adopting a son when he had not one of his own, was that there might be some one to perform the funeral obsequies; but if there were a brother he was within the degrees of consanguinity, and could perform the funeral ceremonies. A Hindoo could not adopt a son if he had a brother who had children, or was likely to have children. The question was, was the present Rajah of Sattara of such an age as to render doubtful the chance of his having children of his own. If he were to have children they could not legally be cut off from the succession. If the late Rajah adopted the son with the sanction of the present Rajah, it would, no doubt, be a legal adoption.

After a few further remarks the subject dropped.

THE CONDUCT OF SIR JAMES WEIR HOGG.

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON withdrew his notice "to call attention to the conduct of Sir James Weir Hogg, late Chairman of the Court of Directors, in the suppression of certain papers in the case of the Rajah of Sattara."

THE DEMAND FOR A BALLOT IN THE SATTARA CASE.

Mr. SULLIVAN gave notice that he should draw attention to this subject next Court.

The CHAIRMAN said, with the permission of the Court, the opinion of the Court's legal adviser on that subject should be read.

Opinion.

"I understand it to be desired that I should state in writing my opinion on the question which was to-day raised at the General Court of Proprietors at the East-India House. The material circumstances are but few. A resolution was moved and seconded, and a demand, in writing, signed by nine proprietors present, was immediately made, that the question involved in such resolution should be put by ballot. Whereupon the Chairman stated that it was his intention to move an adjournment of the Court. And the questions in substance are, whether the demand of the nine proprietors excluded the Chairman from moving the adjournment, and whether the motion for adjournment, if carried, defeated the demand for a ballot. I am of opinion that, notwithstanding the demand for a ballot, the Chairman was entitled to move the adjournment; and, that the motion for adjournment, on being carried, superseded and defeated the demand for a ballot. The bye-law, cap. viii. sec. 1st (on which the right to demand a ballot depends), does not profess to interfere with the ordinary right of any member to move an adjournment, or the previous question, or any amendment, nor with the ordinary course for disposing of any such motion, if made. The established rules which govern the proceedings of public assemblies have the effect of reducing the questions which may be raised by the original motion and amendments upon it to one single question, which is then finally put, and the bye-law, chap. viii. sec. 1, regulates the mode of taking the votes respecting this question when thus finally arrived at. But it does not affect any step which may be taken previously to coming to such question. Accordingly, it expressly excepts from its operation any motion for adjournment, or the previous question, or an amendment. Upon these considerations there appears to me to be no doubt but that the right to move an adjournment was not excluded by the demand made for a ballot; and I think there is also no doubt but that the motion for an adjournment (according to the established rule) took precedence of all other questions. In fact, a demand for a ballot made on moving the original resolution has practically no operation until it appears whether the resolution thus moved is the question to be put or not.

"March 9th, 1848."

Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON asked if he could have a copy of the paper just read.

The CHAIRMAN said, he thought there would be no difficulty in the hon. proprietor obtaining a copy.

SCINDE.

Col. DICKENSON then rose to bring on a motion on this subject. His speech, which occupied upwards of two hours in delivery, was addressed to a very thin audience, there being but about a dozen proprietors in the court, including those of the directors who were present. After the hon. and gallant proprietor had been speaking more than an hour,

The CHAIRMAN rose and asked him if he knew who was to second the motion.

Col. DICKENSON.—Oh, yes! Mr. Sullivan agreed to second it. (Laughter. Mr. Sullivan had left long before.)

The gallant Colonel at length concluded by moving,—

"That as it appears from the printed papers laid before the Court of Proprietors, and from other authentic sources, that there is no act of the British Government by which its reputation for good faith and clemency has been more deeply sullied than the unprovoked invasion of the principality of Scinde, followed by the despotism and expiration of its hereditary rulers, it is the opinion of this Court that every constitutional means should be persevered in with the view of obtaining for these deeply injured and still exiled princes that indemnity to which their unmerited sufferings, and the valuable aid which they so long rendered to the British Government in the season of distress, so justly entitle them."

There being no seconder the motion fell to the ground; and the Court on the motion adjourned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM YOUNG.—The death of this gentleman took place on Friday, the 9th instant, at his house in Westbourne-street, Hyde-park. The deceased had been ill for a considerable period previously to his death, and in consequence of the state of his health it was not deemed prudent that the result of the late trial, in which he was one of the defendants, should be communicated to him. Sir William had formerly been in the Indian army, and was elected a Director of the East-India Company in 1829, on the disqualification of Sir G. A. Robinson, Bart. He is succeeded in the title by his eldest son, John Young, Esq., M.P. for Cavan, and late Secretary to the Treasury.

EXHIBITION.—Burford's Panorama.—The indefatigable proprietor of the Panorama in Leicester-square has just completed

* "Bye-laws, chap. viii. sec. 1.—Item. It is ordained, that if at any General Court nine of the members present, duly qualified to vote, shall demand a ballot for determining any question except for adjournment, or the previous question, or an amendment, such question shall be put by the ballot, and not otherwise."

another magnificent picture, at the private view of which we were present. The subject of the present exhibition is Vienna, and the traveller who has visited the gay capital of the Austrian dominions, with its mosque-like churches, its handsome palaces, its fine parks, its glacié and Prater, its countless cafés and dancing-rooms, and its picturesque and romantic suburbs, will at once acknowledge the correctness of the delineation. A tolerably long residence in that delightful city enables us to speak with confidence on this point. The view is taken from the top of the church of St. Carlo, consequently the only parts seen of that beautiful building are the two round towers. To the left are the royal stables and the palace of the Hungarian guard; the next important building that strikes the eye is the Imperial Palace, celebrated not for architectural beauty, but for its immense size; at a little distance is seen the fashionable church of St. Michael, more known as a place for assignations than devotion. This church is also celebrated as being the burial-place of the Italian poet Metastasio. But the most prominent object in the picture is the Cathedral, with its cloud-kissing spire, one of the finest specimens of pure Gothic architecture, light and graceful, and in one respect differing from many very old cathedrals, in that all parts are in harmony one with the other. Amongst the parts of the picture more particularly worthy of notice we would direct the visitor's attention to the palace of Prince Schwarzenberg and the palace of Belvedere. The village of Wagram, also the scene of the celebrated battle of that name, is pointed out. We cannot dismiss the subject without a few words in praise of the execution, which is alike admirable for drawing and colour. Mr. Burford was, we perceive, assisted by another eminent artist, Mr. H. C. Selous. The recent events that have taken place at Vienna endow this picture with peculiar interest.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, 13th March, 1848.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice, in conformity with the By-Law of the said Company, chap. 7, sec. 6,

That the following Proprietors of East-India Stock, qualified agreeable to law, have signified in writing to the Secretary their desire of becoming Candidates at the ensuing Election of Six Directors, on Wednesday, the 15th April next, viz.—

Henry Alexander, Esq.
Hon. William Henry Leslie Melville.
Major James Oliphant.
John Shepherd, Esq.
Francis Warden, Esq.
Major-General James Caulfield, C.B.
Major J. A. Moore.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I HAVE the honour to inform you, that since the election in June last, when 1,018 votes were recorded in my favour, I have acquired an accession of strength which enables me to assure you that I shall, under your auspices, proceed with confidence to the ballot in April next.

Relying on the exertions of my friends, and in the continuance of your kind support,

I have the honour to remain, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obliged servant,
J. CAULFIELD.

82, Eaton Square, 2nd March, 1848.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

A VACANCY having occurred in the number of Directors of the East-India Company, out by rotation, I beg to state that it is not my intention to offer opposition to General Caulfield at the annual election, which will take place on the 15th proximo.

I have adopted this course under the advice of friends whom I believe to be well acquainted with your sentiments and wishes, and from conviction that this courtesy is due to a candidate who has secured the promise of support from a very large majority of the Proprietors.

At the very next vacancy which may occur, I have the assurance of assistance from so many of the present friends of General Caulfield, in addition to the strength I already possess, that I pledge myself unhesitatingly to proceed to the ballot, and shall do so with the fullest confidence of success, not in the least doubting that the result will shew your approval of the course I have thus determined upon.

With very grateful thanks for the favour I have hitherto experienced, and in humble reliance upon its continuance,

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your very obedient and humble servant,
H. T. PRINSEP.

37, Hyde Park Gardens, March 11th, 1848.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

SINCE my address to you on the 9th of February last, announcing my intention of proceeding to the ballot at the general election in April, a circular has been placed in my hands, by which it appears that Mr. Prinsep, who had also pledged himself to go to the ballot on this occasion, has now withdrawn in favour of General Caulfield.

I shall only observe, that this circumstance will make no alteration in my determination to proceed to the poll on the day of election; by which course I trust I shall not only shew my own consistency, but strengthen my claim on such of the independent proprietors as may feel themselves relieved from their present engagements.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obedient servant,
JOHN ARTHUR MOORE, Major,
(Late on Staff), Hyderabad (Deccan).

19, Portland Place, 7th March, 1848.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I HAVE the honour to apprise you that it is not my intention to proceed to the ballot at the general election which is notified to take place on Wednesday, the 15th proximo.

I have every reason, however, to expect that I shall, at an early subsequent vacancy, be in a position to claim the suffrages of those proprietors who have kindly promised me their support.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
JOHN CARNAC MORRIS,
Late of the Madras Civil Service.

10, Mansfield Street, Portland Place,
22nd March, 1848.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

ENCOURAGED by many promises of support from my friends, I have the honour to inform you that it is my intention to offer myself as a Candidate for a seat in the East-India Direction on the first favourable occasion after the ensuing general election.

Should that integrity of purpose and independence of character which marked the lengthened career of my uncle, the late Mr. Campbell Marjoribanks, as a Director, still retain a place in your recollection, I trust, upon his account, and that of others of my family who have been connected with India, a favourable reception will be allowed to me when I wait upon you to solicit your suffrages.

I shall only add, that should I, through your kindness, be so fortunate as to succeed in this my great object of ambition, my time and the best energies of my mind shall be devoted to your interests in promoting the welfare of our empire in India.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your most obedient humble servant,
DUDLEY COUTTS MARJORIBANKS.

CHARLES HINDLEY and SONS, 124, Oxford Street.

H. & T. PEAT, SADDLERS, HARNESS-MAKERS, &c., No. 167, PICCADILLY, LONDON, avail themselves of the present opportunity gratefully to acknowledge the patronage which they have received for so many years from their numerous connections in India, and to solicit a continuance of that preference which it has ever been their endeavour to deserve. At the same time, they beg to state that, from their very severe losses, they are compelled to decline the execution of any orders unless accompanied by an order for payment (when shipped) upon some agent or mercantile house in London.

It is also necessary that the name of an agent at the presidency should be given, to whom the goods are to be consigned, as the utmost despatch will be used in the shipments from London.

H. and T. PEAT feel bound, in justice to themselves, to make it known that large quantities of saddlery, &c., bearing their name and address, which are not of their make, are sent out to India, and elsewhere, by other parties, and are of very inferior qualities. Gentlemen should, therefore, send their orders direct to H. and T. P. to ensure articles of their manufacture.

All military orders, whether Cavalry, Infantry, Staff, Artillery, or Engineer, will be executed according to the latest regulation, and a discount of 5 per cent. allowed for cash payments.

N.B.—H. and T. P. beg to recommend for durability their 10, 11, and 12 lb. saddles, in preference to the lighter ones of 7, 8, and 9 lb., at present so much in demand for India; and likewise to observe that, in all cases where the goods are not insured, H. and T. P. cannot be accountable for any damage the same may receive after shipment.

The lady fosters herself it will be found a desirable home, more particularly for children whose parents reside abroad; they will have the advantage of their health being superintended by the lady's husband, who is an experienced medical gentleman. The highest references will be given in Brighton, and also in London, and to further connections.

Address, Mrs. ANDREWS, 13, Montpelier Road, Brighton.

S. W. SILVER and CO. CLOTHIERS, NAVAL, MILITARY, and GENERAL OUTFITTERS and CONTRACTORS, respectfully acquaint the public, that they have completed the alterations at their warehouses, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, which enables them to concentrate and exhibit all the requirements of an OUTFIT. Being the manufacturers (with experienced managers) of the chief and most expensive portions of OUTFITS, they are enabled to produce and render them at WHOLESALE PRICES; thus preventing MILITARY and NAVAL OFFICERS, CADETS, and PASSENGERS generally sacrificing the usual intermediate profit. LADIES' OUTFITS (which are under the management of Females) on similar terms.

SILVER and Co. having a correspondent in nearly every ENGLISH COLONY, their customers may at all times avail themselves of their assistance. SILVER and Co. pack and ship their customers' outfits, clear and warehouse their baggage homewards, procure and give SHIP-SAILING Information, outwards or homewards, without receiving a commission for such business. Moreover, they do not allow the too usual commission to persons who introduce customers to them, that purchasers may derive every advantage. For example, individuals who are about to leave for India are generally inundated with applications and lists from Outfitters, who obtain the name and address of the party going abroad from persons to whom they pay (if they supply the Outfit) so large a commission for the information, as to materially increase the amount of the Outfit. Now, SILVER and Co. never forward a list of necessities to any one, unless directed to do so by the party (or friend) going abroad. Thus SILVER and Co.'s prices are not burthened with commission, because all recommendations to apply to them are pure and disinterested.

The OUTFITTING WHOLESALE and RETAIL CLOTHING DEPARTMENTS, &c., are at 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and at LIVERPOOL. The SHIRT DEPARTMENT for home use is at No. 10, CORNHILL. The WORKSHOPS for Clothing, at 44, Bishopsgate-street Within; for SHIRTS and CABIN FURNITURE, at 33 and 34, Nassau-place, Commercial-road; and for SHIRTS, STAYS, BRACES, &c., at LANDPORT, near PORTSMOUTH.

MOURNING,—COURT, FAMILY, AND COMPLIMENTARY.

THE PROPRIETOR of the LONDON GENERAL

MOURNING WAREHOUSE begs respectfully to remind families whose bereavements compel them to adopt Mourning attire, that every article (of the very best description) requisite for a complete outfit of Mourning may be had at his establishment at a moment's notice. Widow's and Family Mourning is always kept made up, and a note, descriptive of the Mourning required, will ensure every thing necessary for the occasion being sent immediately, either in town or into the country, and on the most reasonable terms. It is also to be observed that, as both milliners and dressmakers are constantly employed in making up articles in crape (at all times difficult), superiority in mode and unusual neatness may be relied on.

WORTHY OF PUBLIC ATTENTION!!!

CHAPMAN'S UNIVERSAL PILLS, a combination of the most approved virtues of the Vegetable Kingdom, blended together in such due and just proportions, as to form at length an article which, they confidently venture to affirm, will be found superior to any thing of the kind hitherto made known; they contain not a particle of Mercury, or any other pernicious ingredients, but act almost imperceptibly, but none the less surely, as a gentle purifier of the blood and invigorator of the system. Their private use has been for many years co-extensive with that of the Universal Salve, to which they will be found most valuable agents.

The Proprietors might say much in their favour, and would enlarge upon their merits, were they not anxious that they should stand upon their own, and not have the appearance of being (as is too commonly the case) puffed into notice. They will, therefore, content themselves by saying that, in all cases of Bilious Attacks, Indigestion, Constipation of the bowels, Sick Head-ache, frequent Nauseas, Chronic Rheumatism, Lumbago, violent Cold or Cough, Jaundice, and in short all Internal Diseases, their aid will be found to be invaluable.

Sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each. Wholesale Depot, 5, Swallow Place, Regent Street.

Be particular in asking for CHAPMAN'S UNIVERSAL PILLS.

The only genuine "Macassar Oil," "Kalydor," and "Odonto," are "ROWLANDS'" and the wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS'" preceding that of the article, with their signature at the foot, in red ink, thus—"A. TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY, AND THE BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY.

J. KOHLER'S NEW PATENT LEVER INSTRUMENTS.

J. KOHLER having brought to perfection and obtained J. her Majesty's Letters Patent for the above invention, which he has applied to the CORNOPEAN, TRUMPET-CORNETTO, TROMBONES, and FRENCH HORNS, he can now with great confidence, after an experience of five years in bringing the action to its present state of perfection, recommend them to her Majesty's Army and Navy, and all professors and amateurs. The advantages that this patent gives to these instruments are,—

1. All the tones and semitones produced by the Patent Lever are quite as perfect as the natural notes on the instrument.
2. The intervals in the Diatonic and Chromatic Scales are perfect, the compass greater, and the most rapid and difficult passages may be performed with a precision, freedom, and fullness of tone, and comparative ease to the performer.
3. Combinations in harmony, which never before could be performed at all by any brass instruments, may now be executed with perfect ease, and ten or twelve instruments on this principle can produce a more rich and sonorous effect than twenty-four could do on the old principles. The harshness of tone in the former brass instruments is entirely done away with, and a set of these instruments, heard together, produces military and harmonious effects never before heard.

These instruments are now in use in her Majesty's Private Band, First Life Guards, Royal Horse Guards, Grenadier Guards, Fusilier Guards, Royal Artillery, 60th Royal Rifles, &c. Testimonials, drawings, and prices, forwarded on application at J. KOHLER'S Manufactory, 35, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London.

The whole of the above, together with their superior Pickles, may be obtained of all the principal Sauce-vendors throughout the kingdom.—Manufactory, 21, Soho Square.

CALDWALL'S PATENT NATIONAL SELF-FLEETING WINDLASS, CAPSTAN, and RIDING BITS COMPANY.—Provisionally registered, and to be incorporated by Act of Parliament. Capital, £100,000, in 5,000 Shares of £20 each.

Deposit, 2s. per Share.
No Shareholder will be liable beyond the amount of his subscription. Offices of the Company, —73, King William Street, City.

The intrinsic value and sterling merits of Caldwell's Self-Fleeting Windlass, Capstan, Riding Bits, and Purchase, over every other principle in use, is demonstrated by the patronage of the Lords of the Admiralty, Hon. Trinity Board, numerous shipowners, and the testimonials of the most practical, scientific, and influential nautical men in the kingdom. The anchor can be dropped, and any length of cable can be given without surge or jerk; fewer hands are required, and the anchor obtained in one half the time than with any other windlass or capstan.

These inventions, in addition to their superiority over the old windlass, capstan, &c., have the recommendation of greater economy, as they can be supplied at a less price, affording a very handsome profit, and consequently a large return to shareholders.

Models may be seen in operation, prospectuses obtained, with a list of the Directors, and every information given by the Secretary and Engineer, at the Company's offices, from 11 until 4. Early application for Shares is desirable, as the allotment will take place almost immediately.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES.

IN ONE VOLUME ROYAL OCTAVO, PRICE £2. 12s. 6d.

A DICTIONARY
HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH & ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI.

By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.,

Professor of Oriental Languages in the King's College, London; Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland; Member of the Asiatic Society of Paris; and author of several Works on the Hindustani and Persian Languages.

This work has been undertaken in order to meet the exigency of our day—viz. a copious and portable Hindustani Dictionary at a moderate cost. It has been the compiler's aim to accomplish this object, not by the omission or abridgment of any words and phrases, but by the adoption of a small, distinct, and economical type, whereby he is enabled to lay before the public, in one volume royal octavo, of about 1,000 pages, the most complete Hindustani Dictionary yet offered for sale. The first part—Hindustani and English—may now be procured. It contains more words (by some thousands) than have ever been previously collected in one work by former compilers. The second part—English and Hindustani, which will be completed in May—is also by far the most copious of the kind that has yet appeared. The author having devoted the greater portion of his life to the study of the Oriental languages, and upwards of twenty years to instructing others therein, has had every advantage in the compilation of this laborious book, which he trusts will not be deemed unworthy of extensive patronage.

THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS.

THESE really important articles of under clothing, although manufactured expressly for India, are equally valuable in all tropical climates, and are strongly recommended by all medical men as the most effectual preventative of the many diseases arising from check of perspiration to which the residents in warm climates are so particularly liable. This manufacture possesses all the advantages, without the inconvenience, of flannel waistcoats; the texture is light, soft, and delicate, perfectly free from all irritating or disagreeable qualities, and a very superior absorbent, consequently the very best description of under-waistcoat that can be worn in India, or in any warm climate. The valuable qualities of THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE WAISTCOATS are well known and have been long tested in India, and the very general approval and constant demand for them has given rise to many inferior imitations, which, with a view to deceive, have been variously marked India Gauze, Oriental Gauze, Gauze Vignette, &c. Messrs. THRESHER and GLENNY, therefore, beg most particularly to impress upon all parties the necessity of applying direct to their establishment, 152, STRAND, LONDON, for any they may require, and also most especially to caution the public against purchasing any article of the kind except those which are marked THRESHER'S INDIA GAUZE, as none others can be depended upon.

These waistcoats are made both for ladies and gentlemen, and Messrs. Thresher and Glennny undertake to forward them in dozens or half-dozen to every part of England and the principal towns of Ireland and Scotland, carriage free, at the following prices:—Gentlemen's, 7s. per dozen, and Ladies', 6s. per dozen; and also to pack and forward them, free of expense, to any agent in India, by the overland route, at the following additional rates, viz. 12s. per dozen to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon, and 15s. per dozen to Bombay.

OUTFITS TO INDIA, BY SHIP AND OVERLAND. Every particular connected with outfits to India, both for ladies and gentlemen, including detailed lists of requisite clothing, uniforms, &c. &c. for every appointment, with the necessary variations for the outfits of

SUMMARY & REVIEW OF EASTERN NEWS.

BEYOND what will be found in our selections from the local papers, the mail brings little intelligence of interest.

At CALCUTTA the commercial reverses recently experienced continued to form the chief object of attention. The house of HICKEY, BAILEY, and Co., after an ineffectual struggle to maintain its place, has been compelled to resort to the Insolvent Court. The affairs of the Union Bank seem involved in worse confusion than ever by an opinion which has been obtained from the ADVOCATE-GENERAL and Mr. DICKENS to the effect that from the form of the promise to pay contained in the post-bills of that unfortunate establishment, the shareholders are not liable thereon. Some of the shareholders, it is said, have in consequence refused to contribute their quota for the purpose of satisfying the claims of the creditors of the bank. A belief is expressed in some of the journals that the managers of the bank do not intend to act upon this opinion, but only to exhibit it in terrorem to the holders of the bills, with a view of making better terms with them than might otherwise be expected. This, however, may turn out a very questionable policy, and the opinion may be found a weapon of annoyance not less to those who wield than to those against whom it is directed. The intelligence as to the LAUDABLE SOCIETY is rather favourable. The following is from a Calcutta paper:—

"The committee appointed at the meeting of the Laudable and Mutual Life Assurance Society, which we noticed in our last summary, has published its report. It does little more, however, than confirm the statements made by the directors as to the position of the society's funds. Of the eleven lakhs which formed the funds of the society, eight lakhs are classed by the committee as apparently good assets; while, of the remainder, the greatest part of which has been lent out on the security of Union Bank stock and post-bills, much will probably be ultimately recovered. The loss, then, even under the worst possibility, is not likely to affect the stability of the society."

The Government of India seems to have viewed the state of things in China as affording ground for alarm, and had proceeded to despatch troops for the protection of British interests in that country.

The Marquis of TWEEEDALE took his departure from MADRAS, on the 23rd of February, for Colombo, where he was to await the arrival of the Fox from Moulmein, on board which vessel his Lordship would embark for England. Mr. DICKINSON had assumed the office of Governor, and Sir E. K. WILLIAMS that of Commander-in-Chief, pending the arrival of Sir HENRY POTTINGER and Sir J. BERKELEY from the Cape.

The GOVERNOR of BOMBAY left the presidency on the 10th of February, and arrived at Hyderabad on the 17th. During his sojourn at that place, he visited the city, barracks, hospital, and the field of Meanee. On the 21st he left, reached Kurrachee on the 25th, and was expected at the presidency again a few days after the departure of the mail.

The house of VICCAJEE MERJEE, SONS, and Co., Parsee merchants, at Bombay, has suspended payment.

Sir THOMAS ERSKINE PERRY, it is announced, had arrived from Calcutta at Bombay, and seemed in good health and spirits. His good health may, we presume, be attributed to his sea trip; his good spirits to the success of his attack upon the Council of India.

There have been some disturbances in the territories of the Rajah of Shorapore, a tributary of the Nizam, but they have been put down with great address and celerity. The nature and origin of these disturbances, together with their results, are thus given in the Bombay Telegraph :—

"We received yesterday some further particulars regarding the recent disturbances at Shorapore, about one hundred and twenty miles S. W. of Hyderabad. They were of such a nature that the Resident deemed his personal presence necessary; and consequently, on the report of the political superintendent of Shorapore, General Fraser proceeded thither by Dāk. On the 9th, Captain Taylor had orders from the Government to banish the Rancee from the Shorapore Sumanasthan. The lady—another native 'Messalina'—is said to be profligate in her habits, and an intriguer. Her life was passed in miserable endeavours to obtain power during the minority of her son, the rajah, and in attempts to thwart Captain Taylor's measures. It having been thought advisable to remove her, Captain T. wrote, stating that it was the determination of the Government to send her to her relatives at Ratnagerry, and that a handsome pension would be allowed her. This announcement was received by her, at first, with manifestation of violence, and next, with promises of amendment. In the meantime, her partisans, to the number of six or seven hundred, assembled, and were clamorous for an order to attack Captain Taylor, whose party was very small. Captain Taylor had foreseen that her party would rise in arms, and had managed to occupy the gates of her palace with his own people. Seeing that they did not disperse, and had sent into the adjacent villages to rouse their clans, and aware that they could shortly assemble four or five thousand men, Captain Taylor sent off expresses for the Nizam's infantry at Singaogur and Muktl, and for the cavalry at Goolburghah. On the 4th, the insurgents occupied a hill in front of Captain Taylor's house, but hearing of the advance of the troops, the greater part decamped in the night. About two hundred were left, who offered to make terms. This was not listened to; and the delivery of their arms, and their unconditional surrender, were demanded. After some discussion, sixteen of the ringleaders gave up their arms and persons. The Rancee has agreed to be exiled. Our last accounts say that all was quiet."

The Resident at HYDRABAD has issued a general order expressive of his satisfaction with the conduct of those engaged in bringing the affair to a termination.

A report had been circulated that DOOR MAHOMED had been assassinated; but the rumour turned out to be unfounded. "The Door," says the Bombay Times, "seems to be getting on pretty much as usual—not very smoothly or amicably—with his chiefs; but nearly as much so as half the sovereigns in Asia."

In regard to NEPAUL, we find in the Calcutta Englishman a letter from a correspondent painting it couleur de rose. The following account of the present state of the country makes one almost long to be there. The determination as to the accuracy of the report we leave to the discrimination of our readers. The writer seems at all events a thorough-going partisan of "things as they are" at present in NEPAUL.

"In the epitome of news of the Friend of India, of the 27th ultimo, I read an article about Nepal, borrowed from the Hurkaru, which I think is not correct. The young king of Nepal is not in durance, as stated in that article, but the old king alone continues under prudent close 'surveillance,' at Bhatgon, a place within a few miles from Khatmandoo, the capital. The young king is in full enjoyment of his crown and country, and has only very lately been blessed with a son and heir, although he is himself scarcely nineteen years old. Under the able and firm administration of his intelligent 'Premier,' Jung Bahadoor, the young king has and needs no other care but those which apply to his amusements and recreations, and no other duty but the exercises of mercy and compassion as the sovereign of his land and people. Nepal is in the most perfect state of tranquillity, submission, and order. The people are content and happy, the troops well treated and regularly paid from the proceeds of 'Jagheers' allotted to them. The safety of travellers and of goods, in their transit through the forest, ravines, hills, and dales leading from any provinces to Khatmandoo, is striking. Yet I might have counted the few humble keepers of this profound peace, and safety of life and property, on a track of road extending about seventy miles, from our northern boundary (twenty miles from Segowly) to the capital, through parts of a country highly calculated for all the wicked purposes of robbery, plunder, dacoity, and murder."

Such are the chief contents of the budget of intelligence brought by the last mail.

UNION BANK POST BILLS.

We are of opinion that the shareholders of the Union Bank are not liable in law upon the instruments called "Union Bank Post Bills."

In the first place, the tenor of the instruments does not import any promise on the part of the bank. They do not purport that the shareholders of the bank are parties to them; and no one can be sued upon a negotiable instrument, who is not a party to it. The expressions, indeed "on account of the proprietors," although unusual, might have been deemed equivalent to "for" or "on behalf," or the like, had they followed the promissory words instead of following the word "pay." But the promise, as expressed, is a promise "to pay on account of the proprietors, &c.," i. e. it is the promise of the signing parties to make a payment on account of the proprietors of the bank, for which payment, when made, they primâ facie look to the proprietors for reimbursement. Possibly this peculiar form was designedly adopted in consequence of doubts, whether the directors, or any other officers of the bank, had authority to bind the bank by such instruments. But whatever may have been meant, we think no promise by the bank purports to be expressed, and parol evidence of the real meaning would be inadmissible. The addition of the word "directors," is descriptive merely, where there are no other words, which clearly shew that the instrument is drawn by procuration and not otherwise. This point was virtually decided by the Supreme Court a day or two ago in the case of the Santipore Sugar Company's bills.

In the next place, we are of opinion, that such an instrument, even if it expressly purported to be made for and on behalf of the bank, would not be binding on the shareholders. We think it clear, that neither the directors, nor any other officers of the company, had authority to bind them by such documents. Their very tenor, and the fact that they are apparently opposed to the terms of the deed, as recited in a public Act, ought to have put holders upon inquiry. These so-called, post-bills, whether at date, or at sight, are mere promissory notes, not bills of exchange, and their real character cannot be affected by the designation given to them. Then the authority to issue such instruments must rest either upon the general law as arising from the constitutions of the company and the purposes for which it was formed, or upon the special powers conferred by deed or otherwise. Now the deed of the bank (which is partially recited in Act XXIII of 1845,) not only does not give, but expressly negatives, authority to issue promissory notes, other than ordinary bank notes, i. e. notes payable to bearer on demand, and those only for sums not less than eight rupees and not exceeding 1000 rupees. If even the deed had been wholly silent on the subject, we incline very strongly to think that such instruments as these would have been unauthorized. The cases of Dickenson v. Valpy, 10 B. and C., Bramah v. Roberts, 3 Bingh. N. C., and others, establish that the directors of a joint-stock company have not, merely as such, any implied power to bind the shareholders by drawing or accepting bills in their name. The power must be either expressly conferred or else it must be shewn to be incidental to the constitution of the particular company. It is true that none of the decisions have reference especially to the banking companies. But the liability of the shareholders of such companies must depend on the same general principles. We think, it cannot be said, that issuing promissory notes of any kind is necessarily, or even primâ facie incidental to such a company; for the banks of non-issue are at least as numerous as banks of issue. Still less, can it be said, that the issue of miscellaneous promissory notes, payable at long dates (sometimes at twelve months' date) is incidental to the constitution of any bank whatever. Such a power, so far from being necessary to a bank, appears to us a highly dangerous power. By means of notes payable at six or twelve months after date the credit of the shareholders might be pledged to an almost unlimited extent, even after the bank's credit was absolutely gone, which could not possibly be done by means of notes payable on demand. No contrivance can extend a bank-note circulation beyond the bona fide credit which the bank enjoys. And it was probably under the influence of such considerations that the framers of the deed of Union Bank carefully restricted the power conferred in respect to promissory notes. The above observations apply both to the signatures of the directors and to the countersignature of the secretary. The so-called "acceptance" of the latter or his deputy (in cases where the instrument is payable so many days after sight) is not in reality an acceptance, nor can it convert the instrument into a bill of exchange. No person can accept a bill, except the party to whom it is addressed, or an acceptor for honour; and these documents are addressed to no body. The word "accepted" is evidently equivalent only to "sighted," and is used for the purpose of fixing the period from whence the time is to run.

With regard to the fact that similar instruments have been issued for a long period, and have been paid at the bank from time to time, the case of Blamagh v. Roberts, 3 Bingham N. C., is a conclusive authority to show that no argument in favour of the liability of the shareholders can be founded on that circumstance. It would be utterly impossible to fix with such a knowledge of the alleged practice, as to amount to a recognition the general body of shareholders of a joint stock bank, numbering 700 members, constantly fluctuating, many of whom too are resident in distant countries. The mere payment of such instruments though made at the bank, and with money apparently supplied by the bank, is in any view an equivocal circumstance, even as regards the actors themselves in the transaction. As regards absent shareholders it amounts to nothing. See Brown v. Byers 16 Law. Journ. Rep. Exch. p., 118, where it was held that the recognition at a meeting of shareholders of bills of exchange, unauthorized by the deed, did not bind an absent shareholder, although he actually voted by proxy on the occasion. The payment by the authority of the very parties who issued them, or their successors in office who followed their example, carries the case no further as against the general shareholders than the original issuing, and involves no sort of admission by the latter of an obligation on the part of the bank to pay such instruments.

Our opinion is equally applicable to all the post bills, whether consideration was received by the bank or not. But we do not say that where the bank has actually received money upon the issue of a post bill, such money may not be recovered in some other mode, though the bank is not legally liable on the instrument itself.

THE INDIAN LAUDABLE OR MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

To the Policy Holders of the Indian Laudable or Mutual Assurance Society.

GENTLEMEN,—In pursuance of the resolutions of the policy-holders of the Laudable Society, held at the secretary's office on the 26th January, 1848, your committee have investigated and verified the loans and securities submitted to them, and now wait upon you with a detail of their proceedings, taken down during the investigation, particularizing all the circumstances brought to their notice.

The tin box lodged at the bank of Bengal was found to contain the exact sum of Co.'s Rs. 400,786 10 8, in different Government securities: and as the notes stand in the names of the directors, your committee cannot understand what peculiar advantage or security could be derived by depositing the box in the bank of Bengal.

The properly secured sound loans amount to Co.'s Rs. 100,350, and there has been added to the Government securities by redeeming the paper lent to Sir T. E. M. Turton, a further sum of Co.'s Rs. 86,400.

Your committee regard the loan to Mr. E. Sterling as perfectly good, and assuming the same remark to apply to the loan to the Union Bank, under bank post bills, with counter-security of indigo, and Mr. Wm. Storm's debt of 70,000 Rs. secured by assignment of Mr. John Storm's property, the apparently good assets of the society will amount to Co.'s Rs. 794,536 10 8.

Your committee cannot refrain from expressing their surprise and indignation at the reprehensible manner in which the directors and secretary have allowed the government securities of the society to be lent out to three favoured individuals, for the, at any time, very inferior and latterly worthless security of Union Bank shares: nor is this feeling lessened, when they observe the loose and careless manner in which your secretary passed such securities, without seeing them properly indorsed; and in respect to shares in the Bank of Bengal, without having them duly registered at the bank, without which the security is no legitimate transfer.

The valuable, and what ought to have been considered the sacred funds of this important society, have thus, in the opinion of your committee, been rashly sacrificed to aid and facilitate the purchase of Union Bank shares. But for the infatuation of which proceeding, for the last two or three years, such securities would have fallen to about the estimated worth of the printed assets of the bank, and shareholders thus, probably, have had their eyes opened to the real state of the bank, in time to avert the sad catastrophe which has closed its mad career.

Notwithstanding the fictitious value at which Union Bank shares were maintained, your committee find by the Exchange Price Current of July, 1847, that they had declined to Rs. 800, and were difficult of sale at that rate; yet that neither your directors, nor secretary, thought it necessary, at the half-yearly meeting of that month, to point out or recommend that such securities should upon renewal of loans upon them be reduced in value, or fresh securities taken; on the contrary, it will be found on reference to the minutes of your committee, that some of these loans were granted so late as January, 1847, and others renewed in August and October, 1847, "at par," although at the latter date shares were publicly quoted at Rs. 500."

Your committee cannot avoid drawing your attention to the very unsatisfactory way in which Mr. W. P. Grant and Mr. Henry Holroyd have responded to the demands on them to redeem their debts, or furnish better security. Their letters form part of the appendix to this report.

Your committee recommend that an addition be made to Rule 15, as amended at your last meeting, by extending the obligation of investing on Government Securities and Bank of Bengal shares to the prohibition of their being loaned out by the society for any purpose whatever. They also recommend that the practice which they understand has hitherto prevailed of allowing the secretary to renew loans, without reference to the directors, be discontinued.

With respect to the assignment by Mr. John Storm, as security for the loan to his brother, your committee refer you to a letter from Mr. T. B. Swinhoe to Mr. Allan, dated 7th February, 1848.

Since the minutes of your committee were taken, it has been ascertained, that the difficulty now, about giving up 1,300 maunds of indigo, rests with the committee of the Union Bank; and they decline to surrender it, until they are satisfied that the bank post bills held by the society are in order, and your committee believe that the difficulty about the delivery of the indigo will soon be removed.

In conclusion, your committee beg to express their opinion that when the indigo is given up (value Rs. 117,000) and the policies in the society made over as proposed by the debtors, in part security for their debts, the society will not eventually sustain a loss, that ought to shake the confidence of the public, or the policy-holders in its stability.

The policies on lives, although not made over to the society, are believed to be sufficiently secured by the clause at the bottom of the certificates; and it is for your directors to see, that the premiums are regularly paid up.

The debtors to the society, about whom any anxiety need be felt, for payment in full, are—

WM. PATRICK, GRANT, Esq.
SIR T. E. M. TURTON, Bart.,
HENRY HOLROYD, Esq.

all holding high and lucrative appointments in the supreme court. Sir T. E. M. Turton, Bart., has come forward and made arrangements for the liquidation of the claims upon him, of as satisfactory a nature as can reasonably be expected; and your committee suggest, that the other gentlemen be required to make such immediate arrangements for the like purpose, as shall be fair and satisfactory to the society.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.

AN address has appeared in the papers from Mr. W. Wildman Kettlewell to the proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, which appears to cast some suspicion on the sound management of its affairs, and to trace the supposed evil to the predominant influence of a single firm. The question is one of paramount interest to all those who are congratulating themselves on having purchased Bank of Bengal shares instead of those of the Union Bank, and we need offer no apology for recurring to it. The allusion has reference, of course, to the firm of Messrs. Colvin, Ainslie, Cowie, and Co. who have so far secured the confidence of a body of absent proprietors, as to be entrusted with a power, which it is important for every candidate to enlist in his favour, and which we may naturally conclude was not used on behalf of Mr. Kettlewell, though it may probably turn out that the loss of their votes arose from his own tardy application for them. But we see not how the firm in question can be a legitimate object of censure, for making use of the proxies which the absent proprietors have entrusted to them, in strict conformity with the 19th section of the charter. It has been surmised that the influence they have thus acquired has arisen from accommodations granted to individuals, for this especial object. But those who have admitted this idea, seem to forget that this would imply the possession of a capital such as no house can be expected to command in the present day, and that any firm, possessed of such large resources, would be making a most foolish and uncommercial use of them to distribute them simply with the view of securing a paramount influence in a bank, which is so closely restricted in its accommodation to mercantile firms by the terms of the charter. The position of Messrs. Colvin and Co. is the natural result of the high character they sustain, and of the confidence which constituents repose in the faithful use of the trust given to them. Any man who has any thing to do with the proprietorship of the Bank is, of course, aware that no small number of these proxies are sent from Bombay, and that the Calcutta firm owes much of its influence to the large interest which the family of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy possesses in the Bank. If the slightest attempt was made by that firm to use the influence it derives from its proxies for private and personal objects, to the detriment of the general interest of the proprietors, they would be withdrawn without delay.

As far as the system of proxies has had any influence on the management of the bank, there has been nothing for many years to make the public regret its existence. On the contrary, there has been every thing to recommend it. The contrast which the prostrate condition of the Union Bank, from which proxies were excluded, presents to the flourishing position of the Bengal Bank, in which they are admitted, may be considered as presenting a strong argument in favour of the system. We annex to this article a statement of the dividends given by the Bengal Bank during the last ten years, and they will be seen to amount, on the average, to Rs. 11 3s. 5p. per annum, which is quite as much as the proprietors could reasonably expect. It may possibly be said that with the vast resources enjoyed by the bank, it ought to afford a higher dividend; but large risks are inseparable from large profits. It can only give higher dividends by entrusting its money to the enterprise of others; and, assuredly, from the disclosures which have been made of the affairs of the twelve or fifteen firms which have stopped payment within the last four or five months, the proprietors of the Bengal Bank have reason to congratulate themselves that their property was not involved in any of those houses, and that the business of the Bank was on a limited scale. During the first six months of the past year, before the crisis came on, and when there appeared some hope that the difficulties of the times would subside, the Bank enlarged its accommodation, and was thus able to declare a dividend of 15 per cent. But when the commercial atmosphere became darkened, it appeared indispensable to contract its business within a narrow and safe limit. The dividend was therefore only 9 per cent. in the last six months. On the whole year it was equivalent to 12 per cent. which, considering the unexampled crisis through which we are now passing, is even more than could have been expected. When the proprietors remember that notwithstanding the numerous failures of the past and present year, the Bank of Bengal has not suffered the loss of a single discounted bill, what more can be said in favour of the prudence and circumspection with which its affairs have been managed, and which has secured it so high a character in the commercial world? We sincerely trust that no alteration will be attempted in the constitution of the Bank, with the view of affording the prospect of richer dividends from any injudicious and unsafe expansion of its business. With the wreck of so many enterprises around us, we may well congratulate the proprietors on the extreme caution to which they are indebted for the safety of their investment, and we hope that the disappointment of a single candidate will not be permitted to become the occasion of any organic change likely to interrupt the current of its prosperity.

MISCELLANEOUS.
LOCAL.

DEPARTURE OF THE ENTERPRISE.—The Enterprise leaves at noon to-day for Singapore. She will call at Madras, and take on board 300 men of H.M.'s 4th foot, to be conveyed to Singapore, whence they will be taken to Hong Kong to reinforce the troops there.—Hurkaru, Feb. 8.

RECOVERY OF OPIUM FROM A WRECK.—505 chests of opium (out of 800 chests) have been recovered from the wreck of the Jellinghee. The operations have been discontinued, owing to the violence of the spring tides. There seems to be but small chance of recovering any more of the treasure, although this will be attempted when the neap tides return.—Ibid., Feb. 9.

THE SUPREME COURT AND MOFUSSIL MAGISTRATES.—Judgment was pronounced yesterday in the case of Gasper v. Mytton, the rule being discharged with costs. The original verdict for the plaintiff being thus affirmed, the matter may be regarded as settled, unless Mr. Mytton, or the Government which he serves, thinks it worth while to take the case before the Privy Council. We shall be very glad to find that the conflicting judgments and opinions on the point upon which this case turns have elicited a clearer definition of the limits of the Supreme Court's power to interfere with the mofussil magistrates and their proceeding.—Ibid., Feb. 11.

THE NEW RESIDENT AT HYDERABAD.—We hear that Colonel Low proceeds in the H.C.'s iron pilot brig Fame, on Wednesday next, to Masoolipatam, en route to Hyderabad, to join his appointment as Officiating Resident.—Ibid., Feb. 12.

THE NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—A Calcutta friend says,—"We have yet seen little of the new Governor-General or the head of Indian Society. Report has it that after a round of dinners, and a complete change of furniture in Government House, a grand drawing-room will take place." * * * "The new Governor-General will, I suspect, be a popular man; at the ball he spoke with great neatness and much readiness." The same writer believes "troops will again be required for China."—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 12.

THE UNION BANK.—The Hurkaru of the 14th February publishes an "opinion" given by the Advocate-General and Mr. Dickens, pronouncing against the liability of the Union Bank shareholders for the bank post bills issued by the Directors.

AN ILLUSTRIOUS VISITOR.—A son of the king of Delhi, with a very long name, has arrived in Calcutta.—Hurkaru, Feb. 14.

ELECTION OF A DIRECTOR OF THE BANK OF BENGAL.—John Deffell, Esq., of the firm of Allan, Deffell, and Co., was elected director of the Bank of Bengal yesterday, by a majority of three to one over the other candidates.—Ibid., Feb. 16.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE DURBAR.—A great durbar was held at Government House yesterday, at which the Nawab of Moorsheddad was present, and a number of other distinguished natives.—Ibid. Feb. 17.

THE AGRI HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—Lord Dalhousie has consented to become patron of the Agri Horticultural Society, and Lady Dalhousie its patroness.—Ibid.

LIABILITY OF AGENTS' SIGNING BILL.—The Hurkaru of the 11th instant has a report of the judgment in the case of Malcolm and Others v. Smith, Cowell, and Co. The latter, who are now insolvent, acted as agents of the Santipore Sugar Company, and as such drew bills on England. The words "Santipore Sugar Concern" were printed on the left hand side of the bills, which were signed and endorsed by Smith, Cowell, and Co. simply as "agents." The question arose, whether they or the "Santipore Sugar Concern" were liable for these bills. The bills therefore are chargeable on the estate of the insolvents.

—Malcolm, &c. v. Smith, Cowell, and Co.—Judgment of the Chief Justice on the Santipore Sugar Concern Bills.—The usual and proper mode of signing a bill or note for another, is to sign the name of the principal, and state it to be by procuration of the party signing his own name below, or at least to state expressly that the instrument is signed for so and so. Here no principal in the matter of the signing is named. The defendant subscribes the word "agent," but that is at best equivocal. He may be agent in regard to the whole transaction, and yet pledge his personal and individual credit. The words in the margin, "Santipore Sugar Company," cannot stand for a signature, or qualify the signature which appears; they are only of importance as indicating who the principals are of whom the defendant was agent. Certainly no one can look at this bill without being satisfied that the Santipore Sugar Company are the principals in reference to whom and whose transaction the defendant was acting as agent; but that does not itself touch the question whether in the matter of drawing the bill he was pledging his own credit or theirs. The only signature that appears is the defendant's, and unless the mere addition of the word "agent" suffices, there is nothing to exclude its liability. I am quite of opinion that such addition has not that effect. And, indeed, if it excluded the liability of the present defendants, I confess I do not see who would be liable on this bill at all.—Friend of India, Feb. 17.

MESSRS. SMITH, COWELL, AND CO.—There was a meeting of the creditors of Smith, Cowell, and Co., on Thursday. The firm exhibits a steady and profitable business, and it is the unanimous wish of the creditors that it shall be continued.—Hurkaru, Feb. 18.

MESSRS. HICKLEY, BAILBY AND CO.—The meeting of the creditors of this firm was held at the office this evening, for the purpose of electing a co-assignee. There was some objection to the conjunction of any creditor with Mr. McPherson; but the sense of the meeting generally was in favour of the appointment, and Mr. C. B. Skinner was named accordingly. Mr. Oswald, of the firm of Oswald, Seal, and Co., also brought forward a resolution reprehending the firm generally, and Mr. J. S. B. Scott, in particular, for having kept no accurate or regular record of transactions, and withheld information from the inspectors appointed a month ago; but there were not more than two hands held up in support of it, and it was accordingly negatived.—Ibid. Feb. 19 (evening edition).

THE LAUDABLE INSURANCE SOCIETY.—The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Laudable Insurance Society, to inspect the accounts of the society, have published their report. They say that the society is not likely eventually to sustain a loss that ought to shake the confidence of the public or the policyholders in its liability.—Ibid.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.—At a special general meeting of subscribers to the Civil Service Annuity Fund, held on Tuesday, the 15th February, present—Messrs. C. Tucker, Abercrombie Dick, G. A. Bushby, G. C. Cheap, E. M. Gordon, George Uday, J. A. Dorin, W. B. Jackson, J. F. A. Hawkins, J. J. Harvey, R. Torrens, B. J. Halliday, E. Bentall, W. Bracken, G. Adams, B. J. Colvin, H. W. Torrens, F. Shipwith, H. C. Hamilton, C. Readon, G. Edmonstone, junior, G. C. Fletcher, W. Grey, and J. W. Dairymple; C. Tucker, Esq., in the chair—the accounts of the fund for the past year 1846-47, referred by the general meeting of 1st of January last to this meeting, were approved of and past. The subject of the managers' circulars, dated 13th of December and 11th January last, was considered. A letter on the same subject, addressed by Messrs. Robert Trotter and A. Sconce to the chairman, was read, and the votes were taken on the propositions A. and B. of circular, dated 13th December, 1847. On the proposition "that the bonus be continued as hitherto, and as contemplated in the Honourable Court's despatch of 22nd September, 1847;" the votes appeared for, present 18, proxies 103, total 121; against, present 3, proxies 49, total 52; majority for, 69. On the proposition "that the bonus from the half income of the excess balance be discontinued, provided the Honourable Court forego its claim to the remaining half income, in diminution of its contribution to the fund pending the accumulation of the excess balance, till with the balance originally anticipated it shall amount to such a sum as shall secure the current balances of subscribers;" for, present 3, proxies 49, total 52; against, present 18, proxies 103, total 121; majority against, 69.

Proposed by Mr. Bushby, seconded by Mr. Bracken, and resolved unanimously—In order to guard against any misapprehension that may have arisen from certain ambiguous expressions in the circular of the management dated the 13th December, 1847—That with reference to paras. 62 and 63 of the letter from the Honourable Court of Directors to the Government, dated 8th December, 1824, this meeting disavows all expressions in that circular which may be construed to imply a doubt of the permanence of the Civil Service Annuity Institution, or the absence of the complete guarantee for its continuance from the Honourable Court. Thanks were voted to the chairman.—Ibid. Feb. 21.

INSTALLATION OF SIR JOHN LITTLE AS MEMBER OF COUNCIL.—Major-general Sir John H. Little, K. C. B., arrived in Calcutta from Lahore yesterday morning, and in the course of the day took his seat as third ordinary member of the Council of India under the usual salute. A Gazette Extraordinary published last evening, announces his installation. We may now congratulate the army on again having a representative in the council chamber.—Ibid., Feb. 22.

OPIMUM SALE.—The following is the result of the opium sale held yesterday:—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar	1,815	820	805	811 14 2	14,73,575
Benares	775	785	775	778 0 0	6,02,950

This exhibits a decline of Rs. 48 per chest on Patna, and Rs. 38 on Benares, from the average of the preceding sale; but this, we believe, is not so great a fall as was anticipated.—Ibid.

THE EARTHQUAKE.—The earthquake that visited Calcutta on Sunday afternoon was somewhat severe, dislodging the plaster from the walls of several houses. A family residing in Bow Bazar was much alarmed by the walls of their house cracking around them, accompanied by an explosive sound. They ran from the building with all speed, but, though it has stood its ground, it is found to be in so dangerous a condition as to be no longer habitable with safety.—Ibid.

F. J. HALLIDAY, ESQ.—A few days ago it was generally reported that the senior secretary to the Bengal Government was about to proceed to the Cape. This was afterwards contradicted, and it is now stated that Mr. Halliday has altered his intention of leaving the presidency in expectation of succeeding to the membership of the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, vacated by the departure of Mr. Lane.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

AGRA.—THE AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—We have been favoured with a printed copy of the last half-yearly report of the Agra and United Service Bank, and are glad to learn therefrom, that the affairs of this excellent concern are in a satisfactory position, even these terrible times. The bank "has had losses," doubtless, as who has not, but these would appear to be hardly worth mentioning, good care having been taken as to the matter of security. It is with much pleasure we observe that the shareholders assembled at the last meeting, held on the 7th instant, record their high opinion of the character, qualifications, and services of their able secretary, Captain R. G. Macgregor, who is about to proceed to Europe as London agent of the bank. They have also testified their esteem by voting him a portrait and 500l.—Hurkaru, Feb. 22.

ALLAHABAD.—Clerical.—The Rev. F. Ellis and lady left the residence of the reverend chaplain of Allahabad, on Tuesday, the 8th instant. The Venerable Archdeacon of Calcutta, Mrs. Dealtry, and son arrived at Allahabad, on Saturday, 5th instant, on a visit to the Rev. G. W. Marriott. The archdeacon left for Benares, on Friday, the 11th instant. Mrs. Dealtry and T. Dealtry, Esq. still remain waiting the arrival of the Government steamer.

—Sir F. Currie.—Sir Frederick and Lady Currie reached Allahabad on the 10th instant, remained two days with the commissioner, R. Lowther, Esq., and then proceeded onwards.—Benares Recorder, Feb. 15.

DELHI.—Dooles for Calcutta.—We have heard that no less than 600 dooles have been ordered from these parts down to Calcutta, but for what purpose we cannot say; we merely mention the fact.—Gazette, Feb. 12.

DIAMOND HARBOUR.—A Tiger.—We are informed that a small party of gentlemen, members of that noble institution the Tent Club, while engaged the other day in their ordinary avocation of pig-sticking, in the neighbourhood of Diamond Harbour, suddenly came upon a "royal tiger," who manifested his presence by a loud roar and a rush, dispersing the line of elephants right and left. Horses were instantly exchanged for hat hies, saddles for guddies, spears for guns. The elephants, brought up again en masse, behaved well. The animal soon showed, and after being hard hit sundry times in the body, which provoked him to charge furiously among the elephants, but never on one, was finally despatched by a couple of shots in the head. He was found to be a young male tiger, measuring about ten feet.—Hurkaru, Feb. 16.

ELLICHPORE.—Reported Death of the Rajah.—A correspondent of the Englishman, mentions the death of the Nawab of Ellichpore.—Ibid., Feb. 8.

FEROZPOOR.—Military Proceedings.—A communication from Ferozepoor informs us, that immediately after Brigade field exercise on the morning of the 7th (at which by the bye some Cavalry are said to have been "split" and a sowar of the irregulars had his leg broken) Brigadier Young and family, accompanied by a party, proceeded to Lahore, to be present at the approaching fair, Lieutenant-Colonel Salter commanding during his absence. The artillery inspection is said to have gone off with great éclat, and to have done much credit to Major Day. H. M. 53rd are expected to march about the 21st en route to Lahore.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 12.

KEMAON AND GURHWAL.—Geographical investigation.—The Calcutta Star, of the 9th inst., states that Lieut. Strachey has been appointed by Government to investigate the physical geography of Kemaon and Gurhwal, and is to be engaged in this work for a year, assisted by several naturalists.—Friend of India, Feb. 17.

KISHNAGHUR.—The College.—The first annual distribution of prizes and scholarships to the students attached to the Kishnaghur College, took place on the 17th ultimo. There was a large gathering of native and European gentlemen on the occasion, and the viva voce examination of the senior classes by some of the members of the local committee of education, was as satisfactory as could be reasonably expected from the infantine state of the institution.—Hurkaru, Feb. 21.

LUCKNOW.—Stage Coach between Lucknow and Cawnpore.—We have much pleasure in drawing attention to the announcement that has appeared in our paper regarding the establishment of a stage coach between Lucknow and Cawnpore. The conveyance has been started before the road has been quite completed, and as soon as it was practicable for a carriage, in order, if possible, to prevent any delay in getting it ready. The conveyance has indeed been travelling on the road for the last two months, and does the distance very regularly in about seven hours, the first trial having been made by Dr. Spencer Login, about the time the Governor-General visited Lucknow in November last.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 9.

MEERUT.—Daring attack on Sir Joseph Thackwall's house.—We have been informed that the house of Maj.-gen. Sir Joseph Thackwall, K.C.B., commanding the Meerut division, was attacked on Thursday night, by thieves or dakoits, and that one of the gang was shot by a sentry, but that his companions succeeded in carrying off the body.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 12.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

EUROPEAN ARTILLERY TO BE LOCATED AT SUBATHOO.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Jan. 19, 1848.—The Right. Hon. the Governor-General having authorized a portion of European artillery being located at Subathoo during the ensuing hot season, his Exc. the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief, with the sanction of the Government of India, is pleased to direct the following detachment to move from their present quarters, so as to reach Subathoo by the 1st of April next:—

6th Battalion.—1st company from Loodianah.

In addition to these four reserve companies, the officers commanding the Sirhind and Meerut divisions will, in communication with each other, select, to accompany the detachment to Subathoo, an additional number of men, such as may be considered most likely to derive benefit from a residence in a hill climate, but not exceeding 200 in the aggregate, from the several troops of horse artillery and companies attached to light field batteries within their division.

The officers commanding the artillery at Subathoo will furnish a monthly present state to the adjutant-general of the army, in which he will detail any particulars which it may be desirable for the Commander-in-Chief to receive; and unless otherwise ordered, the detachment will move from Subathoo on the 1st November next, to re-occupy their present quarters.

The native details attached to the above companies will continue to occupy their present quarters.

PROHIBITION OF OFFICERS TO VISIT CASHMERE WITHOUT THE SANCTION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Jan. 23, 1848.—His Exc. the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the publication, for general information and guidance, of the following "Resolution" of the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council, in the foreign department, under date Dec. 31, 1847:

"Resolution.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to resolve that no officers, civil or military, shall be allowed to visit the province of Cashmere, or any part of the dominions of Maharajah Goolab Singh, without the previous sanction of the Government of India, communicated through the resident at Lahore."

By order of the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief, PAT. GRANT, Lieut. Col., Adj. Gen. of Army.

EXPERIMENTAL CONVALESCENT DEPOT AT DARJEELING.

—Jan. 27.—The Government having been pleased to authorize the establishment of an experimental convalescent depot at Darjeeling, for four officers and one hundred European non-commissioned officers and soldiers, and sanctioned the appointment of a commandant, a station staff officer, and an assistant surgeon, for the duties of the depot, on the same staff salaries as annexed to the corresponding appointments at Landour by Government General Orders No. 185, of the 19th of November, 1832, a detachment of the above strength will, for the present season, be sent to the depot, under instructions which have been furnished to the officers commanding the Benares and Dinapore divisions, and the detachment will move from Darjeeling on the 1st of November next, in progress to rejoin their proper corps.

Monthly present states, including the names of officers, and exhibiting the actual states, of the men at the depot, are to be forwarded by the commandant, with any observations which he may consider it necessary to offer, through the prescribed channel, to the adjutant-general of the army, for the information of the Commander-in-Chief; duplicates being furnished to the officer in charge of the adjutant-general's office in Calcutta, during the absence of army head-quarters from the presidency.

Captain R. T. Sayers, of H. M.'s 80th Foot, is appointed commandant of the depot.

Lieutenant G. S. Young, of H. M.'s 80th Foot, is appointed to do duty at the depot.

With the sanction of the Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council, Darjeeling is henceforth to be dependant on the Dinapore, instead of the presidency division.

ALLOWANCES TO OFFICERS IN CHARGE OF TROOPS OF CAVALRY.

Fort William, Jan. 28, 1848.—Pursuant to instructions from the Hon. the Court of Directors, the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct that, from the 1st Jan. 1848, officers commanding, and in charge of troops of cavalry in her Majesty's service, in the Bengal presidency, shall, in lieu of the allowances heretofore drawn for gram-pots, cavesons, shoeing horses, command, stationery, and repair of arms, be allowed a consolidated sum of horses actually on the returns: the above sum is to cover the whole of the expenses connected with the command of a troop, as well as the repair of arms of every description in use with the men.

The regulations of the service prescribing the emoluments and responsibility of an officer succeeding to the temporary charge of a troop, during the occasional absence of the officer in permanent command, are to be still considered in force, and in no way affected by the above consolidation of allowances.

CIVIL ABSENTEE REGULATIONS.

Fort William, Financial Department, Feb. 5, 1848.—Read a despatch from the Honourable the Court of Directors, No. 40 of 1847, dated the 1st December, replying to letters from this department, Nos. 19 and 20, dated respectively the 11th and 25th June, 1847.

Resolution.—In pursuance of instructions received from the Honourable the Court of Directors, the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following amendment of Section XI. of the Civil Absentee Regulations, and to notify that the further modification of that section, as adopted by the regulation of the Honourable the President in Council, under date the 12th November last, will also be held to be in force until further orders.

Section XI.—The Government of each Presidency may grant to civil or military servants holding civil appointments leave of absence for one month in each year, without deduction from the salaries and emoluments drawn by such servants. Such leave will, however, only be granted when the Government is satisfied that no inconvenience or expense will arise from the departure of the officer seeking it. In cases where the Government may find it necessary to provide a substitute to officiate during the absence of any officer, the expense incurred must be defrayed by the absentee. No second leave can be granted under this rule, until the completion of eleven months from the expiration of the last leave.

J. A. DORRIS, Sec. to the Gov. of India.

STAFF OFFICERS.

Feb. 18.—The Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to establish the following regulation, which is to be applicable to all the Presidencies:

When staff officers are directed to officiate in other than their permanent appointments, and perform the duties of both situations, they will be permitted to draw the authorized salaries and office allowances annexed to their permanent appointments, in addition to a moiety of the salary of the situation they may be selected temporarily to fill, together with the full office allowances attached, with exception to house-rent (or any corresponding allowance), and house allowance, which are admissible in one capacity only.

Should a consolidated salary be annexed to the temporary appointment, a moiety is to be drawn of the sum remaining, after deduction of such regimental pay and allowances of the rank of the last incumbent as may be included in the said consolidated salary.

MARKETS.

Since our last report, business in this city has not been characterised by much activity, and the gloom and distrust which prevailed have not been in any degree dissipated. Our produce market continues to feel the depressing influence of the times. The discounting accounts of the home markets, and the high rates of freight which have ruled till within the last few days, have limited operations to actual wants. The better qualities of Indigo have lately been commanding prices 5 to 10 rupees per md. higher; Sugar is neglected, with a declining tendency; Saltpetre is in less active inquiry, and Rice flat; Silk Piece Goods remain unnoticed, and the transactions in raw Silk are very limited.

In our Import Market a fair amount of business has been done in some of the staple Manchester goods. Mule Twist has been in better inquiry, and No. 40 particularly have been more freely taken at somewhat better prices. Metals remain heavy, excepting Copper, the title description of which has been in improved demand at a slight advance.

There is no scarcity of money, but it is not easily obtained for purposes of mercantile accommodation. The coffers of the Bank of Bengal are overflowing, and on the 17th instant the directors reduced the rate of interest one per cent. Their rates now are—private bills not exceeding 3 months, 9 per cent. discount; on Government acceptances, 5 per cent.; on deposit of Company's paper, 7 per cent.; on deposit of Opium, Indigo, and Metals, 8 per cent.; and 9 per cent. on other goods. The profits of the Bank for the month of January have been at the rate of Rs. 9-14-10½ per cent. per annum, and Bank Shares are selling at 6125 to 6150. Government Securities have remained at the heavy discount quoted in our last report; but the reduction of interest at the Bank may probably improve their value, although sufficient time has not elapsed for the development of the effects of that measure.

MADRAS.

LOCAL.

SWEARING IN OF MR. ELLIOT.—The Hon. Daniell Elliott, Esq. was sworn in on Tuesday last as member of council, under the usual salute of fifteen guns from the fort. — Athenæum, Feb. 17.

COL. STRAHAN.—A paragraph from the General Orders published by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, on the 14th instant, which we subjoin, records the sense entertained by Government of the merits of Colonel Strahan, the late quartermaster general of the Madras army, whose service of forty years would even have justified more commendation than is recorded in the brief notice bestowed upon the occasion of his retirement. The gallant officer carries with him to Europe the esteem and respect of every member of the Indian community, with whom in the discharge of public duty, or in the relations of private life, he was brought into contact.

"Colonel W. Strahan having resigned his situation as Quarter Master-General of the army, from the date of his embarkation for Europe, the Most Noble the Commander-in-Chief takes the opportunity of recording his high estimation of that officer's uninterrupted service of forty years in India, during which he was actively employed with the force under the late Major-General Sir Harry Close, in 1809, and subsequently, from 1814 to 1830, with the army of the Deccan and the force at Poonah in their various campaigns. His Lordship has, during the period of his command of the Madras army, always received the zealous and efficient assistance of Colonel Strahan in the discharge of his important duties as Quarter-Master-General." — Ibid.

TROOPS FOR HONG KONG.—It will be seen, on reference to General Orders of Government, that H.M.'s 25th regt. are under orders for Hong Kong. — Ibid.

DEPARTURE OF INVALIDS FOR ENGLAND.—We understand that 108 invalids of H. M.'s service embarked yesterday morning on board the Trus Briton, which vessel will sail for London on the 23rd instant. — Athenæum, Feb. 22.

MOFUSSIL.

BANGALORE, FEB. 16.—Arrival of the 28th. — The 28th regiment arrived at this station on the morning of the 11th instant, and were expected to resume their march for Madras, on Tuesday last. There had been no casualty in the camp, with the exception of two or three deaths amongst the camp followers, and no sickness of any kind had been experienced in the regiment. The 28th were kindly entertained by the officers of H. M.'s 51st. on the evening of their arrival, and with the aid of their excellent band passed the hours very pleasantly. — Athenæum, Feb. 19.

CANNANORE, FEB. 10.—Military. — The ship Malabar, from Bombay (having on board a detachment of H.M.'s 28th regt.), arrived here on the 31st ultimo, and after taking a few passengers (Lieut. Northey, of H.M.'s 25th regt., lady, and children) sailed the same evening for England. The ship Owen Glen-dever, from Bombay, arrived here on the 6th instant. The invalids of H.M.'s 25th regt., in charge of Capt. S. B. Hamilton, of the same corps, embarked on board that vessel on the evening of the 7th instant—and she sailed the following morning for England. The steamer Tenasserim, with a detachment of H.M.'s 94th regt., from Madras, arrived here late on the evening of the 7th; the detachment disembarked on the morning of the 8th instant,—and is now encamped on the north of the Fort: a detachment of H.M.'s 25th regt. embarked on board the steamer yesterday evening, which left during the night, for Madras. The ship Looyes Family, with the head quarters and right wing of H.M.'s 94th regt., arrived here about 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The troops are to disembark on the morning of the 11th instant.

— The Post Office.—Lieut. Drury of the 43rd regt. N.I., has relieved Lieut. Lane, of H.M.'s 25th regt. from the charge of the Post Office.

— Arrivals.—Lieut.-col. Brown; Capt. Seale, Fisher, and Buller; Lieuts. Menzies, Daniell, Vaughan, Campbell, Breden, and Walton; Ensigns Mc. Carthy and Lewis; Paymaster Hewson; Lieut. and Adj. Mc. Lean; Quarter Master Fitzgerald; Surgeon Thompson, and Asst. Surgeon Westall, of H.M.'s 94th regt., from Madras; and C. A. Marshall, 12th regt. N.I.

— Departures.—Bt. Maj. O'Connor; Lieuts. Lindsell and Needham; Ensigns Turner and Arnold; and Asst. Surgeon Carr, M.D., of H.M.'s 25th regt., to Madras; Capt. Hamilton and Lieut. Northey, H.M.'s 25th regt. to England. — Athenæum, Feb. 15.

OOTACAMUND, FEB. 15.—Arrival of Sir Thomas Munro. — Sir Thomas Munro, Bart., arrived here on the 31st ultimo, and remained until the 8th instant, when he departed for Mysore. During his stay he occupied apartments at Dawson's Hotel, and visited the Meteorological Observatory and other objects of public attraction. The residents on the Hills, anxious to evince their respect and esteem for the son of one of the brightest characters that have been connected with our Indian Empire, gave the young baronet a ball and supper. It took place on the night of the 7th instant at the club—where all was got up in the usual happy style which now distinguishes every thing done there. The attendance was very numerous and every thing went off in the best manner possible.

— Major Reid.—Our new commanding officer, Major Reid, C.B., arrived on the 9th instant and assumed charge. Report here speaks very favourably of him. Major Grant left this on the 11th for Cannanore.

— The Weather.—The weather is still variable, and two days ago we had a little rain; but, if we may judge from the experience of former years, we may expect a couple of months' fine dry weather, as the monsoon seldom sets in here before April or May.

— Arrivals.—We have lately had several arrivals and departures; amongst the former are—Major Morland, 27th N.I., from Hyderabad; Lieut. Moberly, Engineers; Lieut. Lisle, Bombay Army; Lieuts. Wood and Bell, 2nd E. L. I.; Lieut. Bateman, H.M.'s 51st regt.; Lieuts. Hart and Ker, 39th N.I.; Rev. Messrs. Garratt and Bachelor, missionaries.

— Departures.—Col. Hitchens; Captain Freshfield; Captain Nott; Captain Cotton, Engineers, on duty; Dr. Kirkpatrick; Lieuts. Watts, 27th N.I., and Mann, 16th N.I. — Athenæum, Feb. 22.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. FRANCIS GILBERT RYBOT, 1st MADRAS FUSILIERS.

Head-Quarters, Chowdry Plain, Jan. 14, 1848.—The following extracts from the confirmed proceedings of a European General Court Martial, holden at Bellary, on Monday, the 13th of December, 1847, by order of Brigadier-General John Anderson, commanding the troops serving in the Ceded Districts.

Lieut. Francis Gilbert Rybot, of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, placed in arrest by order of Lieut. Col. Thomas Assheton Duke, commanding the same regiment, upon the following charges.

First Charge.—For having, at Bellary, on the 9th of November, 1847, failed to appear at the place of parade for field exercise, appointed by his commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Thomas Assheton Duke, of the 1st Madras Fusiliers.

Second Charge.—For having, at Bellary, on the 11th of November, 1847, failed to appear at the place of parade for sword exercise, appointed by his commanding officer, the aforesaid Lieut. Col. Thomas Assheton Duke, his commanding officer.

Third Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at the time and place set forth in the second charge, falsely stated to the aforesaid Lieut. Col. Thomas Assheton Duke, his commanding officer, with reference to the mess of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, that he, Lieut. Francis Gilbert Rybot, had heard language at the mess-table that was perfectly disgraceful, and which he would be ashamed to make use of himself, of which no notice had been taken; and that he had seen officers in such a beastly state of intoxication that they had been carried away from the mess, and that no notice whatever had been taken of it; such statement being contrary to fact, prejudicial to the character of his brother officers, and tending to throw discredit on the regiment to which he, Lieut. Francis Gilbert Rybot, belongs.

Bellary, Dec. 7, 1847.

Finding on the First Charge.—Guilty.

Finding on the Second Charge.—Guilty.

Finding on the Third Charge.—Not guilty, and the Court fully and honourably acquits him thereof.

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded in such a manner as his Exc. the Most Noble the Commander-in-Chief may direct.

(Signed) R. J. H. VIVIAN, Lieut. Col. and President.

Bellary, Dec. 23, 1847.

Remark by the Court.—The Court have found the prisoner guilty of the second charge, but from the extenuating circumstances which appear on evidence to prevent his attendance at parade, they attach a slighter degree of culpability to this instance.

Observation by the Court.—The Court consider it their duty to record their disapproval of the circumstance (as adverted to in the defence) of a witness having imputed to the prisoner before the Court any crime for which he was not arraigned, and the subject of which, as respected himself, was not before the Court.

Approved and confirmed, and Lieut. Rybot is hereby reprimanded, and directed to be more attentive to his duties in future.

(Signed) TWEEDDALE, Lieut. Gen., Com.-in-Chief.

Madras, Dec. 30, 1847.

Lieut. Rybot to be released from arrest and return to his duty.

FURLOUGH TO DR. DON.—Dr. Don, our much-esteemed medical storekeeper, proceeds to England on furlough by the steamer of the 1st of April, and already we are told there are upwards of twenty candidates in the field for the appointment. We have not heard who is likely to be successful.—Major Coghlan leaves by the same opportunity, and this will make a vacancy in the gunpowder manufactory also requiring to be filled up.—Times, Feb. 19.

OFFICERS' DRESS.—His Exc. the Commander-in-Chief has, we are informed, found it necessary to set his face against the mixed colours occasionally indulged in where gentlemen appear half civilians half soldiers, greatly to the offence of a correct military eye. His excellency is also averse to officers appearing as civilians, seeing no reason why a man should seem ashamed of the cloth he wears. These may be taken as hints by those who may desire to avoid a general order on the subject of dress. Few men are more indulgent or considerate on such subjects than Sir W. Cotton, but good nature should not be abused.—Ibid., Feb. 23.

TRANSFER OF STEAM VESSELS.—Negotiations are now on foot for the transfer of the steam vessels, &c., of the Bombay to the Austrian Lloyds' Steam Navigation Company. The Bombay Company were lately in treaty with the Peninsular and Oriental, but the terms spoken of as offered by the Austrian Lloyds' seem to be considered more desirable.—Ibid., March 1.

SIR E. PERRY'S PETTY CASE COURT.—The Friend of India, in a lengthened eulogy of Sir Erskine Perry's law reform bill, has expressed his surprise that the Bombay Times should be amongst those averse to the contemplated changes, and states that he regrets to find us against the measure before it had been tried, and hoped to have seen us the advocates of the cause of the public. We beg to assure the Friend that it is just because we are anxious for the public good that we are averse to the measure. We see no reason for making experiments, when a priori there appears every probability of their only leading to mischief—scarcely any likelihood of their coming to good. We would oppose the experiment of the firing of a cask of gunpowder in the Friend's printing-room before it was tried, though never so often assured by some individual party that it would only fumigate the premises,—if all reasoning and experience of similar things assured us that it would blow them to atoms. We would not hang even a lawyer with his pen and inkhorn about his neck for the mere sake of experiment. We have no favour at all for Jack Cade reforms in the state, and no faith in seven halfpenny loaves being sold for a penny—of the three-hooped pot having ten hoops—or it becoming felony to drink small beer. We believe the public will scarcely in this case have deeper cause to regret the passing of the Act, should it be passed, than will the judge himself who desired its introduction; and that, after some years of harassing, vexatious, and expensive experimenting, it will be found necessary to go back to where we began, with the usual prestige against all reform, because one unhappy measure purporting to be such has proved unsuccessful.—Ibid.

ARRIVAL OF THE ELPHINSTONE FROM THE PERSIAN GULF.—The H.C.'s sloop Elphinstone, from the Persian Gulf, brings with her accounts of the defeat and dispersion of the Shah of Persia's troops by some insurgent chiefs in Khorsan. The affairs of the government of the King of Kings appear to be in great disorder. The Elphinstone brings with her a large amount ment of the Nimroud marbles, collected by Mr. Layard for the British Government. They will be exhibited in Bombay before being dispatched for England.—Ibid., March 2.

ATROCIOUS MURDER OF LIEUT. LOCK.—An atrocious murder has been committed near Bombay, Lieut. Lock, of the 2nd light cavalry, being the victim. On his way from Rajkote to Porebunder he and his attendant were fired on by a party of marauders belonging to Meckran, and both killed on the spot. They were then plundered of all they possessed, and their bodies left exposed. No trace of the murderers has been discovered.—Ibid.

GENERAL UNPOPULARITY OF THE SMALL CAUSE COURT ACT.—The Bombay papers during the last fortnight have been engaged in discussing the merits of the Small Cause Court Act, drafted by Sir Erskine Perry, and now under the consideration of the Supreme Legislative Council. The Times and the Telegraph and Courier are vehemently opposed to the measure, almost in toto: a crack-witted paper called the Gentleman's Gazette is its only supporter in Western India. A petition, subscribed by about three-fourths of the European mercantile community, has been forwarded against it. A second, subscribed by Europeans and Natives, mostly of the humbler classes, has been got up, partly for and partly against it, but on the whole in its favour. A third, subscribed by about seven hundred Hindoo, Mahomedan, and Parsee gentlemen and merchants of the highest respectability, approves of the measure as a whole, but objects to the greater part of its details.—Ibid.

HEALTH OF BOMBAY.—A few fatal cases of small-pox have occurred in Bombay, but the Presidency, and India generally, is remarkably healthy and the weather pleasant.—Ibid.

DEATH OF REAR-ADMIRAL S. H. INGLESFIELD, C.B.—The demise of Rear-Admiral Inglesfield took place at his bungalow on the esplanade, on the morning of Wednesday the 23rd ultimo. The gallant veteran had caught dysentery at Ceylon, and was in a very weak and precarious state on his arrival at Bombay. He once or twice rallied, so that sanguine hopes were entertained of his recovery, but on Tuesday the 22nd he got so much worse, that he was scarcely expected to live through the night; he breathed his last on Wednesday at ten A.M. He had four years since been left a widower, and never recovered from the blow. He was an able, amiable, and upright man, much respected and beloved by all who knew him. Without any tendency to moroseness or austerity, he was serious in his disposition and strict in his devotions, and morning and evening prayers were as regularly performed every day on board the Vernon as in the most pious and best regulated families on shore. Since the demise of the admiral, the broad pennant of a commodore of the first class has been hoisted by Commodore Plumridge on board the Cambrian.—Ibid.

DR. COLLUM.—Dr. Collum has, we observe, been placed at the disposal of the Madras Government, having been appointed by the Court of Directors, deputy assay-master to the Madras mint. Dr. P. Grey, civil surgeon, Poona, succeeds Dr. Collum in charge of the 2nd Grenadiers, and will be succeeded by Dr. Impey, at present port surgeon, Bombay. Dr. Peart was in our last named in place of Dr. Grey, as civil surgeon, Poona; Dr. Peart is staff surgeon, and is represented as the party most likely to succeed to the medical storekeepership.—Ibid.

SURVEYOR TO THE COURT OF PETTY SESSIONS.—In the general orders will be found the name of Mr. H. Conybeare—some short while since appointed superintendent of repairs to the board of conservancy—gazetted as surveyor to the court of petty sessions. Mr. Conybeare is a son of the celebrated geologist of that name; he has now been nearly three years amongst us as engineer on the railway survey, and is known as a man of extensive and varied information, likely speedily to rise in his profession. This already is the second occasion on which the public service has had the benefit of civil engineers drawn from the railway—the able and accomplished Mr. Clarke, the pioneer of the project in these parts, having been enabled to bestow his leisure on government in the interval betwixt the abandonment of the first and the assumption of the second railway scheme.—Ibid.

DEPARTURE OF SHIPS FOR CHINA.—The H. C. steam frigate Semiramis, Commander E. W. S. Daniell, started for China on Sunday last. She had been completely armed as a vessel of war, carrying, we believe, two sixty-eight and four thirty-two pounders, besides several guns of smaller size, and a party of twelve artillerymen attached to the vessel. We have heard that the Semiramis is to call at Cannanore, to convey a wing of H. M.'s K. O. Borderers to Hong-Kong, the remaining wing proceeding in the steamers Tenasserim and Enterprise.—Ibid.

DEPARTURE OF THE NERBUDDA FOR ENGLAND.—H. M.'s brig Nerbudda, of sixteen guns, took her departure on Tuesday evening for England,—Commander Pierce, of the Cruiser, in charge. It will be remembered that the Nerbudda was launched on the 5th ult. She was immediately taken into dock, and coppered and fitted out for sea in the course of thirteen days. The spars and masts, guns and stores, were then transferred from the Cruiser to her. The rapidity with which the new vessel was rigged and prepared for sea does infinite credit to our dockyard authorities. The appearance of the Nerbudda as she sailed out of the harbour was beautiful—in fact, she appeared faultless in every respect.—Ibid.

ELIGIBILITY OF A PERSON TO BE SHERIFF AND POLICE MAGISTRATE AT THE SAME TIME.—A motion has been made before the Supreme Court, which determines the point as to the compatibility of the offices of sheriff and magistrate of police in the hands of one individual. The court held that in India they were not incompatible with each other, the duties and position of sheriff in Bombay bearing no analogy whatever to those of the officer at home by whom a similar designation is borne. In truth, the shrievalty here has long been allowed to be a sinecure; and if not abolished, the only legitimate use to which it can be turned is to confer it on some one who has served the state, whom the state has not otherwise the means of rewarding. To this use it has on former occasions not unfrequently been turned: of late years it has been viewed as a piece of patronage of the Governor's, to be disposed of as he thought fit. Mr. Rivett will continue sheriff and magistrate of police for the present; and as the junction of the offices is not illegal, the duties of the two can in no way interfere with each other. The emoluments of office will on the present occasion be some compensation for the discharge of the duties of magistrate so successfully undertaken by Mr. Rivett, when no salary accompanied them.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL.

AURUNGABAD.—Brigadier Twemlow.—Letters from Aurungabad inform us that Brigadier Twemlow had obtained leave to proceed to the hills near Nassick, for a month; and that Captain Orr, of the cavalry, had obtained a twelve-month's sick certificate to the Neilgherries.—Times, Feb. 26.

BANCOOR.—Wreck.—The ship Sophia Moffatt, which arrived here from London on the evening of Sunday the 20th ult., brought intelligence of a ship having been observed on fire close in shore near Bancoor, on the 17th instant. It turns out that the unfortunate vessel was the Mayfield, from London to Bombay. The officers and crew reached this port on the 22nd, by native boats. The Mayfield was laden with coals for Government, which had spontaneously ignited a few days previous, and the captain, finding he could not bring her up to Bombay, beached her on the coast. The crew had behaved well, and did not leave the vessel till forced by the heat. The spectators on board the Sophia Moffatt were particular in their description of the conflagration, and stated that they observed the burning ship to be surrounded by boats,—“but the Moffatt,” says the shipping report, “being five miles to leeward, with the wind very light, could render no assistance.” That one English vessel should pass another in a state of conflagration, as did the Sophia Moffatt, and not endeavour to learn some particulars connected with the unhappy event, seems to us sufficiently strange.—Ibid., March 2.

BANCAWANG.—Feb. 10.—Military.—Since my last Assistant Surgeon —, M.D., proceeded on duty to Vingoria to meet the draft of recruits &c. for the Highlanders, en route for this station. Their passage from Bombay was a rapid one, having left the presidency on the 1st and landed at Vingoria on the evening of the 2nd. They were detained there for want of carriage, and had not left by the latest accounts up to the 8th instant. This scarcity of carriage was owing to Government copper currency (nearly 40,000 rupees' worth) having been sent up about the same time. Major Hamilton, Captain Lamert, and Lieut. McKenzie, of the 78th, are on leave within the division. Major Vassal, of the corps, rejoined on Tuesday, after an absence of nearly three years. Lieut. North, of the engineers, arrived here during the week, and started again on his circuit yesterday.

—Fire.—A fire occurred here on Monday night, in the lines occupied by the Government cattle, which destroyed six huts. It was fortunate that the sheds in which the bullocks are stalled did not take fire; these are worse than useless, and from being low, and thatched with straw, very liable to such accidents, which might be obviated by erecting good pendals with tiled roofs.

—Theatricals.—The amateurs of the 78th are about presenting us with some fresh performances. The Shadow, or the Mother's Dream: an interlude of the Man and the Marquis, to conclude with the laughable farce of the Turned Head. We are promised a new drop scene of Edinburgh, representing principally Holyrood House and Chapel, the High School, St.

Giles' Church, &c., as taken from St. Anthony's Chapel. This painting is being executed by an officer of the regiment, who has already contributed to the decoration of our little Drury. I have been informed that the accommodation for the audience is being considerably improved throughout the house.

— The Weather.—Since the 5th instant we have experienced a change in the weather—strong S.E. winds, with dust, prevailing during the forenoon, and followed, between 2 and 3 p.m., by westerly breezes. — Times, Feb. 16.

— 24th Feb.—Military.—The left wing 13th N.I. marched into camp this morning under the command of Capt. Sparrow: they left Vingoria on the 19th instant. — Ibid., March 1.

— NEEMUCH.—The Bishop of Bombay.—The Lord Bishop of Bombay was last heard of at Neemuch in central India, whither he had gone on visitation at the express desire of the Metropolitan of India. — Times, March 2.

— SURAT.—Earthquake.—A slight shock of an earthquake is reported to have been experienced at Surat at eight o'clock on the evening of Thursday last, and a second the following morning at half-past three. These phenomena had caused considerable alarm amongst the inhabitants, who consider their manifestation as a foreboding of approaching evil. — Times, Feb. 16.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

EXAMINATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.

Bombay Castle, Feb. 14, 1848.—The following notification is published for the information of the army.

Notification.

With the view of insuring uniformity in the method of conducting public examinations in the native languages at this presidency, and identity in the standard of proficiency to be attained by civil and military officers, and public servants generally, undergoing examination, the Hon. the Governor in Council has, in concurrence with his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief, determined to abolish the present practice of naming for every examination committee new and different members, and has resolved to appoint a permanent committee of five members, one of whom shall be the president, and one the secretary to the committee.

The following gentlemen have accordingly been appointed.

President.

The Rev. Dr. Stevenson, D. D.

Members.

Captain B. Lynch, I. N.

The Deputy Secretary to Government in the Persian department.

Lieut. W. B. Gray, 26th regt. N. I.

Leut. C. W. Walker, Marine battalion.

The Deputy Secretary to Government will be ex-officio Secretary to the committee.

The military officers who have been selected by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief will, as hitherto, while on such committee, be considered on duty.

The committee will assemble three times in each year, viz. on Jan. 10, May 10, and October 10.

This arrangement refers solely to the committee assembled at the presidency, and is not intended to interfere with any standing or general orders applicable to officers who may be authorized to submit themselves for examination at outstations.

By order, &c. (Signed)

J. G. Lumsden, Secretary to Government.

SUPERINTENDING SURGEONS.

Bombay Castle, Feb. 15, 1848.—The Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to prohibit the practice which has hitherto obtained of superintending surgeons exercising the functions of their office when absent on leave beyond the limits of their divisions, absence beyond the circle of their superintendence, and performance of the duties of it, being considered incompatible.

MARKETS.

Wednesday afternoon, 5 o'clock, 1st of March, 1848.—Since our report per last mail, the same uneasy feeling of tightness in the money market has been experienced, and has prevailed beyond precedent in commercial circles. Credit in the bazaar remains at a most distressing ebb, and confidence in individuals has been severely shaken. Under these depressing circumstances, our market, both for imports and exports, shews no signs of improvement, and has remained much the same as for the month before it had done. Business, however, has been done, during the fortnight to a fair extent, at former low rates, for Cotton Goods, Yarns, and Cotton Wool; while, for Metals, the prices remain steady as formerly, and fall prices have been obtained for parcels of Sheet Copper and Swedish Bar Iron.—Bank stocks continue on the decline. We quote, to-day, Oriental at 1½ per cent. premium, Commercial at 9 per cent. discount, and Bombay Bank at 29 per cent. premium. The steamer with the London mail of 24th of January, which arrived on the evening of the 26th ultimo, brought intelligence rather more encouraging, as money was getting easy, though confidence was by no means restored generally; markets for produce were generally steady, with a tendency to keep so, or advance in those articles considered low, and likely to attract speculation from their being so.

PESHAWUR.

DEATH OF NAIB MAHOMED SHEREEF.

Died, at Peshawur, on the 21st of December, very deeply regretted, Naib Mahomed Shereef, the Kuzelbash, one of the few staunch supporters from first to last of British interests in Affghanistan, and first known as the friend and companion of the late Sir A. Burnes on his visit to Kabul in 1838. During the occupation of that city, he was extensively employed by the commissariat, and his house and table were ever open to all officers; from the envoy to the youngest ensign, at different times, all partook of his hospitality, which was as open as day: in those times he lived, freely indulging in the forbidden juice of the grape, but for some years before his death had foresworn it, and, as he said, taba kurred. On the breaking out of the insurrection, he was one of the first who rallied round the late Captain Trevor, and the writer of this brief tribute to his memory has reason to believe that, had his advice been taken, far otherwise would have been the result of that, at first, petty outbreak. He never ceased, during the two months the troops held the cantonments, to assist the force in every possible way, advancing large sums of money from his private purse, and at much personal risk kept up communication with the captives, sending them clothes and money. From him emanated the scheme of their release, for which another took all the credit and reaped the benefit. The writer is convinced that there is not one of the survivors among the captives but will read this notice with deep regret. Naib Mahomed Shereef, for his eminent services, enjoyed a pension of Rs. 400 a month from Government, which it is hoped may be continued to his family.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 19.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, April 4, 1848.

THIS is a progressive age—so at least it is said. But in some instances the progress seems to be rather crab-like. This is eminently the case in some of the so-called law reforms, from which we have been taught to expect so much benefit, but which have resulted in producing little of any thing but mischief, save and except to the individuals fortunate enough to secure the multitudinous appointments created under them, and to become entitled thereby to share in the spoil. That very remarkable specimen of the judicial mind which now gives tongue from the chief seat of the Supreme Court of Bombay has long been impressed with a desire to get rid of all the securities which have been devised for bringing a disputed case before the courts of law in such a manner that the real points at issue may be clearly understood and justly decided. He some time since recorded his opinions for the enlightenment of his contemporaries; but nobody but ourselves, we fear, took the trouble of perusing them. They certainly made no impression anywhere; and Sir THOMAS BASKINE PEAR, finding that writing did not answer his purpose, resolved to try what could be done by a different process. A few weeks back he suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from Bombay, and it was subsequently ascertained that he was in Calcutta. What could be his business there was a question anxiously asked, but never satisfactorily met till it was answered by the appearance, in the Calcutta Gazette, of the draft of "An Act for extending the Jurisdiction of the Small Court at Bombay, and for enabling a uniform mode of procedure to be adopted in Causes of Small Amount, at Law and in Equity." Now, supposing such a measure to be necessary—supposing the draft of the proposed act to be faultless—still there does not seem to be occasion for any extraordinary hurry in passing it. Bombay might continue to exist a little longer without the blessing of cook-shop law, as it has heretofore existed without it, and as the other presidencies will, for any thing that appears to the contrary, still continue to exist. However, this was not the view taken in the Supreme Court of Bombay, nor in the legislative department at Fort William. Sir THOMAS PERRY quitted his Court as abruptly as did another judge during the administration of Sir JOHN MALCOLM, and dashed for Calcutta with the frantic energy of a man on a mission of life and death. Arriving there, we may presume that he rushed into Government House at "headlong speed," as Bertram Rivingham rode into the "high church of Egleston," and entering pale, breathless, and agitated, declared, as soon as he could command the use of speech, that unless the boon he asked were granted, Bombay might as well be sunk in the Arabian Sea, or overtaken by the fury of the elements, like the Lacadive isles. The salus populi was at stake, and PERRY's was the patriot hand that was to elevate it to its proper place of suprema lex. Such we may suppose to have been the substance and circumstances of the Chief Justice's representation to the Government of India, and it was not made in vain:—

"He sung, and they consented
To grant the patriot's prayer,
The council stern relented,
Moved by his wild despair;"

And, recollecting that what is done quickly is twice done, they declared that rules should not stand in the way of the Chief Justice's wishes, and that his victory over the law should be not only complete but speedy. So forth came an ever-memorable draft for remodelling the Supreme Court of Bombay upon the approved model of Kingsgate Street, Holborn. By this admirable piece of legislative wisdom, the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Judges—they are still to bear this magnificent title, though their function for the future will be chiefly to administer chandler's law—the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Judges in the Small Cause Court at Bombay is to extend "to all causes, whether at law or equity, where the subject-matter claimed or in dispute does not exceed the value of one thousand Company's rupees," and "to all causes founded on bills of exchange, hoondees, accounts stated and signed, and other written securities for the payment of money." A pretty good sweep this last clause makes, but it is not enough, for the drag-net of the petty jurisdiction is to draw into it further "all causes which the parties to the suit shall consent to bring before the Court;" that is to say, all causes whatever are to be brought within the meshes of small cause jurisdiction, because that jurisdiction, being a pet object of the Chief Justice, he will in all cases recommend the use of it, and we know by experience, in this country, that after a judge has recommended any particular course, counsel and attorneys cannot with prudence take any other, because they dare not subject their client to the risk of having his cause decided before a hostile tribunal.

It is impossible for us to examine the draft in detail. If space permitted such examination, we should, we think, be enabled to astonish our readers. To a few points, however, we may advert. The plaintiff and defendant are usually to appear in person, according to the approved practice of the Court of Piepowder, which holds its sittings during the continuance of Bartholomew fair; but there are certain cases in which the parties may be excused from personal attendance. They are thus stated:—"If ill, if absent from Bombay, if engaged in the public service, if exempted on account of rank from appearing in the Courts of the East-India Company, if of advanced age, if of the female sex, if there is a co-plaintiff who appears in person, or a co-defendant defending jointly," (nothing, by the way, is said of his appearance, so it may be inferred that the mere fact of there being such a co-defendant is sufficient, whether he appear or not); and lastly, "if not personally cognizant of the matter in dispute." But in all these cases the judge may refuse to hold the party excused, unless he is satisfied "that the excuse is made in good faith, or that the matter of the excuse exists in a sufficient degree to justify him in admitting it." The exemption from the necessity of personal appearance, when absent from Bombay, we hold to be a great indulgence. A man at the Hebrides or at Guatemala is not compellable to appear in person in the ready-made law-shop of the Supreme Court of Bombay, the exemption being, as we take it, grounded upon the principle so satisfactorily laid down by Sir BOYLE ROCHE, that birds are the only two-legged animals enjoying the privilege of being in two places at once. But the discretion reposed in the judges of declaring on the sufficiency of the excuse, seems to us likely to be productive of some embarrassment to those learned persons. For instance: How ill must a man be to entitle him to be excused? Is there any philosophical instrument by which illness of all kinds may be measured, and the degree noted with arithmetical precision? If not, the answer to the judge's inquiry—how ill is the suitor?—is likely to resemble the explanation which LISTON, in one of THEODORE HOOK's farces, used to offer of the state of a person whom he had reported dead. Misunderstanding an exclamation of "how, dead!" as an inquiry, he was wont to reply, "How dead? Why very dead indeed—as dead as a door-nail." We pass over such questions, though they must occur, as the following—In what degree is the suitor engaged in the public service? In what degree is he exempted on account of rank from appearing in the Court of the East-India Company? In what degree is he of advanced age?—but we must pause on the next exemption, which relieves from personal appearance those of the female sex. This alleged fact is the "matter of the excuse;" and, according to the draft of the Act, the judge is to determine whether or not it exists in a sufficient degree. Consequently, one of the questions which this functionary will have to put to himself will be,—Is this person sufficiently of the female sex to justify me in admitting the excuse? We have followed the words of the draft closely to avoid all chance of misrepresentation. Then, as to the cases of co-plaintiffs and co-defendants, common sense would suggest that a man must either be in such a position or not; but the Bombay Supreme Court has nothing to do with common sense, and accordingly is to inquire to what extent the relation exists, if it exist at all. If would be well, however, if nothing more than nonsense could be alleged against this Draft Act. It was, of course, not so intended; but we scruple not to assert that, if it had been designed to establish a court in which the judges should be invested with absolute and uncontrollable power without responsibility, the design could not have been carried out more successfully than by such an Act as that before us. The judge is every thing, from the first step of proceeding to the last. In addition to his proper functions as a judge, he is to be attorney and counsel on both sides. He is to settle every thing in a "talkee," as the negroes say, with the plaintiff and defendant. Parties to the suits, and their wives,—the wives are specially mentioned—are to be admitted as witnesses, and to swear as much and as hardly as their consciences (should they happen to be troubled with such troublesome monitors) will let them. Can any thing be more monstrous than all this? We have seen judges in our own Courts at home, and in our own days, who, though well-intentioned men, invariably, and probably unconsciously to themselves, took a side upon every trial at which they presided. What sort of justice would have been rendered if they had possessed the powers now proposed to be entrusted—or possibly by this time actually entrusted—to the judges at Bombay? But this "cheap law" is to be paid for by suitors, not in remuneration to persons employed in carrying on their causes, but in a fine levied at the portal of justice, which may thus literally be said to be sold, unless, indeed, it be answered that the article thus sold is not justice. The clerk of the Court is "to demand and receive from the plaintiff in any suit brought in the said Court" five per cent. upon the sum claimed up to a thousand rupees, and one per cent. upon any sum in excess of the thousand! This is bad enough, but this is not all. Every party coming into this notable Court, or dragged there against his will, enters as the proposer of a new law in one of the ancient republics entered the national assembly—with a rope round his neck. Let Englishmen read this—"The Court may in every case impose a fine on the plaintiff or defendant, if it should appear that either party respectively had no reasonable ground for suing or defending." And so a man for seeking to obtain or defending what he believes to be his right is in danger of being punished by fine; why not by imprisonment? Did we say "what he believes to be his right? Is it not to be feared that in some cases a man may be thus punished for maintaining what actually is his right. Does the Supreme Court of Bombay, or its eminent Chief Justice, claim infallibility? If this be not possessed, it is just possible that a wrong decree may sometimes be given, and consequently that a plaintiff or defendant may be fined for the ignorance, the negligence, the stupidity, the blundering, or the forgetfulness of him who inflicts the fine!

But there is something more astounding yet. Persons prevaricating, or making false statements, or committing perjury, instead of being sent to take their trial for such offence, may be punished on the moment by a fine, inflicted at the discretion of the judge. Perjury—aye, perjury, so runs the draft, is to be punishable by fine. A wretch comes into a court of justice, invokes the God of Truth as a witness to falsehood (such will be the case with a European perjurer), and the judge may inflict upon him "a moderate fine." These are the words of the draft—"a moderate fine." So light an offence as perjury must not be dealt with too harshly—the perjurer must be fined, but let the fine be moderate. We dwell not, however, upon this. We look to the principle of allowing a judge to deal with false testimony or suspicious testimony in this off-hand way. A witness is timid, or forgetful, or awkward in the use of language, and in many instances, moreover, will give his testimony in a language which the judge does not understand. But if that awful personage choose to regard him as a prevaricator, he may fine him; if he choose to regard him as guilty of the heinous crime of perjury, he may take his money, and blast his character, without the solemnity of a trial, without the interposition of any other authority, without giving the unhappy man an opportunity of proving his innocence, but in the summary way in which an oriental cauzy carries out the unimpeachable dictates of his own caprice, whatever they may be. The fate of the witness may hang on the state of the judge's digestive powers. If the judge should chance to be bilious,—and the liver is very apt to be disordered in an Indian climate,—an innocent person may be made to smart for it. Surely it cannot be an English settlement in which this is permitted. Surely it cannot be an English judge who recommends such a system, accepts the superintendence of it, and is prepared to act upon it; or if that be possible, it cannot—no it cannot—be that the judge bears the name of ERSKINE, a man whose life was passed in maintaining the principles of constitutional law, and who, on his elevation to the peerage, chose for his motto the words "TRIAL BY JURY."

CORRESPONDENCE.

ON THE POPULATION AND MORTALITY IN CALCUTTA.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Having been led, in the course of some inquiries into the mortality which prevails in our Indian possessions, to the perusal of an interesting paper which was read by Colonel Sykes before the Statistical Section of the British Association at York, in September, 1844, on "The Population and Mortality of Calcutta," I have thought that a few observations on this subject, drawn from different sources, might be interesting to your numerous readers who may have friends or relatives exposed to the influence of climate or the risks of mortality in that distant city. It is not to be expected that the same correctness or completeness of observations exists as is to be found in this country, where the statistics of health and population are beginning deservedly to occupy a large share of public attention. The facts which are brought together will, therefore, not only in some respects appear unconnected, but they will present anomalies in the comparison which will draw the attention of the medical profession and others best capable of explaining or pointing out the deficiencies of the tables. A great good may thus be accomplished by the very imperfections of the present returns. The principal deficiencies to which attention will have to be directed are, first, the ages and the sexes of the existing population, in default of which the very interesting question of the mortality amongst European, as compared with native children, must always remain unsettled; second, the ages of the dying, particularly distinguishing Europeans from natives; and third, the number and description of the strangers, by the influx of whom the present amount of population must be maintained, since it is evident that, with the extraordinary disproportion of the sexes, which is hereafter pointed out, the existing population could not be continued without the immigration of foreigners. Some local difficulties may probably exist in the removal of each of these defects in the observations; but no apology will probably be required for the suggestion of the most important data to be obtained.

Calcutta is situated in latitude 22° 33' N., and longitude 88° 20' E., at the distance of 100 miles from the sea. The selection of the locality appears to have been made by Mr. Job Charnock, in 1689-90, less with regard for the comfort and health of its future multitude of inhabitants, as for a reason, which has long since disappeared, "a large shady tree," which adorned the village of Sootanatty, on the east bank of the river below Hooghly. One of the adjoining villages, which came into possession of the English about this time, is said to have been called Calcutta, from a temple dedicated to the goddess Kalée, and hence the origin of the English name. Even at that early period, the insalubrity of the site was noticed by travellers, and since then, hurricanes, fevers, and epidemics have, at different times, committed fearful ravages. The present city is the growth of a comparatively very short period. In 1737, a great hurricane destroyed the town and the shipping, when the water rose forty feet higher than the usual level of the Ganges, and 20,000 boats, canoes, ships, &c. are said to have been destroyed, and 300,000 souls to have perished. In 1756, after its capture and destruction by Suraj-ud-dowlah, only seventy houses belonged to the English; and the Old Fort and Clive Street, for many years after this event, comprehended the whole of Calcutta. Since then, the progress of population has been more rapid than the march of improvement. Many schemes have been proposed for the drainage and ventilation, especially for the drainage of the salt-water lakes, which cover a surface of nearly 7,000 acres, at about three miles to the eastward of Calcutta, and the annual subsiding of which has been the frequent source of disease. Considerable good has been effected; but in discussions and the execution of works on an extensive scale, much time is wasted, whilst the population, continually increasing, requires the most energetic exertions to keep pace with the provisions necessary to ensure the public health.

Like all cities which have not been subjected to any systematic inquiry, the population of Calcutta was formerly greatly exaggerated. In 1800, the Police Committee furnished a Report to the Governor-General, in which the population of the city, exclusive of the suburbs, was estimated at 500,000 souls; and in 1814, report had magnified it to even 700,000. In 1819, however, when a more practical attempt was made to arrive at an approximation to the truth by the assessors appointed to revise the rates assessed on houses and other buildings, the returns for the four divisions of Calcutta, as prepared by one of the Committee, from the assessors' statements, were as follows:

1.—Estimated Population of Calcutta in 1819.

Christians ...	13,138
Mahomedans ...	48,168
Hindooes ...	118,203
Chinese ...	414
Total ...	179,913

This is a great diminution of the estimate formerly given. It is exclusive of the suburbs, and may probably, even with that allowance, be below the real number. By adopting the plan of stationing sircars and peons at the principal outlets of the town, the former of whom threw to the latter a cowrie for every hundred passengers, the number of non-residents, who entered the town daily, was calculated to be nearly 100,000 persons. In the course of 1835 and 1836, in consequence of the exertions of Dr. J. Ranald Martin, a committee was appointed to inquire into the propriety of establishing a fever hospital for the natives, and the labours of the committee resulted in the collection of a valuable body of evidence, from medical practitioners and others, on the various interesting questions relating to the health and population both of the European and native portion of the town, and a most important report on the extraordinary facts which came before them. The necessity of the case led to the appointment of a municipal committee for local improvements, whose exertions were warmly encouraged both by Sir C. T. Metcalfe and Lord Auckland. Since then the subject has not been allowed to drop, and we are happy to see that the practical skill and well-known abilities of Mr. Sims, the engineer lately sent out by the East-India Company to report on the practicability and advantages of railroads, have been added to those of local talented officers, to carry out the important objects for which this committee was originally formed. To return, however, to our more immediate subject;—amongst the papers laid before the first-named committee was one by Dr. Stewart, giving the census of the population for 1832, which is inserted here, in order to afford a rough comparison with the last authentic census made by Capt. Birch, to which I shall presently allude.

This will give a total resident population, in the divisions of the town itself, of 189,399; and a small increase, when compared with the previous enumeration in 1819; but we will pass on to the calculation made by Capt. Birch, who, from his position had great opportunities of ensuring its comparative correctness. It was subjected to various tests at the time, and is reported to have occupied eight months in perfecting—no great merit, by the bye, in a census, the principal object of which is to obtain the number of the population on a given day, and which, if continued during the fluctuations of mortality, may be justly suspected of affording only an uncertain standard of comparison. It was taken in 1837, and the following are the results, distinguishing males from females in the different classes of the inhabitants:—

I have calculated the proportions of the sexes, in order to point out more forcibly the most singular feature of this table, which, as Col. Sykes justly remarks, is the universal excess in the number of males over females, in every class of the population, not merely amongst those who are strangers to the soil, and amongst whom such an anomaly might have been not unreasonably expected, but amongst the Mahomedans, the Hindooes, the low castes, and the Portuguese, who form together more than 85 per cent. of the resident population. Amongst the Portuguese, the proportion of females is by far the greatest; but even this falls considerably short of what is usually found in other great cities, and even in some other parts of India, as far as any investigation has been attempted. Col. Sykes mentions, that in Bagulkoto the proportion was 100 males to 101.25 females; in Guinness Pait 100 males to 101.14 females; and in a census, which he himself effected in the Deccan, the proportion amongst 3½ millions of inhabitants was, in the Poona collectorate, 100 males to 94 females, and in the Dharwar collectorate, 100 males to 98 females. In order to afford some measure of comparison, I insert here the proportion of the sexes, as it is found to exist in other cities and countries.

It will thus be seen, that in European states the females exceed the males in nearly all populations, on the average of the whole, and that the excess is still greater in the large cities, whilst the native population of Calcutta differs in this respect from nearly all other towns and countries to which reference can be made. The nearest approach to the condition of Calcutta will be noticed in the returns for New South Wales and Sydney, of which some elaborate tables, drawn up with great skill and judgment, by Mr. Neison, from the original documents, have been published in the last number of the Statistical Journal. Whether the difference alluded to arises from defective returns, or from the greater mortality amongst females, when compared with males, it is equally a subject worthy of the attention of Government and of the medical statist, since a population so composed can only keep up its numbers by large and continual immigration. It is important to ascertain whether the contrast is due to the influence of climate, peculiarly fatal to the female constitution, or to any other circumstances in their condition capable of amelioration. It cannot be accounted for by the influx of foreigners, as the above remarks are confined to the native residents; nor to the addition of natives from the country villages, unless a different law prevails in the East from that in Europe, since in London and other large cities supplied from a similar source, the proportion of resident females is still greater than that of males. Whatever be the cause, the results deserve serious consideration in a moral as well as physical point of view, as the records of our own colonies have proved to us, that where the male population is greatly in excess, vice and corruption have been more fearfully prevalent. Space will not allow of our going into a more minute examination of this part of the subject, however interesting, and we will proceed, therefore, to examine the mortality which has prevailed of late years amongst different classes of the community resident in Calcutta; but before entering on this subject, we give the following as the estimated population of the suburbs of Calcutta. Dr. Stewart states that the census of the suburbs was made at his request, with great care, by Mr. Patton, in 1836.
